Newspaper Salary Was $250 Weekly

By Edward T. Folliard.

Luxury far beyond the dreams of the "old folks" who hoped to get $200-a-month pensions has come to Robert E. Clements, outgoing secretary-treasurer of the Townsend organization, a House investigating committee learned yesterday.

Clements, 41-year-old former California real estate promoter, testified before the committee that his income for 1935 was $12,585.

But this, as the committee was told, was "all velvet," because in addition he tapped the OARP treasury for all of his expenses.

The Representatives, who can count only on railroad mileage, free stationery and postage beside their $10,000 salaries, listened in amazement to the recital of Clements' expense allowance.

Clements admitted the item covered rental of a $215-a-month apartment in Washington, the hire of a maid and the cost of groceries.

On one of his trips lasting 26 days, he spent $838.19, which was paid by the Townsend Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd.

From Tips to Shirt.

The amount covered everything from tips to the washing of a shirt.

In response to a question by James Sullivan, counsel to the committee, Clements said that his wife, Mrs. Thelma Clements, had received a salary of $1,475 for 1935.

Questions asked of Clements yesterday applied only to his 1935 income. When the committee meets again Wednesday morning—a recess was taken until then—Clements will be asked about his income for 1936.

He will be asked particularly about his holdings in the Townsend National Weekly which is divorced from O. A. R. P. and has been the property of Dr. Townsend and Clements.

Following Clements' recent break with Dr. Townsend and his resignation as national secretary and treasurer, it was reported that he had sold his stock in the paper for $25,000—the equivalent of a $200-a-month Townsend pension spread over 11 years.

Asks About Cash.

"Have you any cash in safety deposit boxes in the United States, Mexico or Canada?" Sullivan asked.

"No," replied Clements.

Earlier in yesterday's hearing Clements estimated that the Townsend organization, from the time of its incorporation on January 1, 1934, had taken in $951,964.09.

This sum, he explained, does not include the earnings of the Townsend National Weekly, which committee members estimated would send the total over the $1,000,000 mark.

Edward J. Margett, Townsend manager in San Francisco, yesterday sent a telegram to Representative John N. Tolan (Democrat), of California, denying that he was receiving from $1,800 to $2,100 a month. He said his commissions ran from $500 to $600 more than that. However, the expenses of the work, he said, exhausted all this money, with the result that he is "thousands of dollars out of pocket."

Counsel Sullivan, in tracing funds yesterday, read from an auditor's report which showed that much of the OARP money was drawn into the treasury through profits on the sale of Townsend photographs and books, lapel buttons, special Townsend stationery and windshield stickers.

As Sullivan took up the question of Clenments' own earnings, the la-

Bill Increasing Driving Penalty Voted in Senate

Three Other D.C. Measures Passed; Gas Merger Is Delayed by Clark.

By James D. Secrest.

A bill providing greater maximum penalties for first offense reckless driving was one of four District measures adopted yesterday by the Senate.

In passing two national bills which directly affect the Capital, the Senate cleared its calendar of local legislation.

The reckless driving measure jumps the maximum punishment from $200 fine and 30 days imprisonment to $250 and three months.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, who took the floor recently to deny that members of Congress are immune to arrest for infractions of local statutes, took occasion to point out that most traffic cases now are disposed of by Police Court with only $5 fines and that many of these are remitted.

Gallery observers recalled that the wife of Representative Meeks, (Democrat), of Illinois, had been fined $5 for speeding only Thursday.

King Forestalls Objections.

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, sought to forestall any possible objection to the bill by explaining that the severity of the sentence, within limits, is decided by the courts. Senator Borah commented that even the present maximum of $100 or 30 days or both is not imposed "once in a thousand cases."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, put an unexpected obstacle in the path of the merger of the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light companies and the issuance of new stock by objecting to a bill reported by the Senate District Committee.

Labeling the gas company "a merciless monopoly," he said he would not withdraw his objection until he had time to examine the legislation and the corporate structure of the owners of the utility.

Delay in passage of the bill will not prevent the Public Utilities Commission from approving the $3,000,000 bond issue submitted by the gas company Thursday to the Public Utilities Commission. It will, however, hold up the company's refinancing plan and the proposed issuance of additional stock to reduce the top-heavy bond structure.

Salary Act Amended.

The only District bill passed by the Senate that goes to the White House is an amendment to the teachers' salary act of 1924, raising the status of vocational schools to that of junior high schools and the salaries of vocational teachers accordingly.

In proposing the measure, the Board of Education took cognizance of the fact that present economic conditions make it more difficult annually for boys and girls of 14, 15 and 16 years to obtain employment after completing the eighth grade.

"By raising the trade and vocational schools to the junior high

Only D. C. Unemployables and Children of Jobless to Get Aid Now.

Confronted by the action of the Budget Bureau and the House in refusing to permit the District to spend its own funds for public relief, the Board of Public Welfare yesterday announced it could continue relief payments only to unemployables and to families of children eligible for Federal aid under the dependent child law.

Decision of the board meant that some 4,900 so-called "employables," representing more than 20,000 individuals, have received their last relief checks unless the Budget Bureau and Congress materially increase the amounts approved for future relief.

Announcement of the board was made by Elwood Street, director of public welfare, following an emergency meeting at which the whole relief situation was gone over.

Express "Keen Regret."

"It is with keen regret the Board of Public Welfare faces this necessity of limiting aid to the poor and helpless of the National Capital," Street said.

"The need of the employable who must be cut off all relief from now on, unless additional funds are provided, is incontestable. Unquestionably much suffering will result. The situation may become very grave.

"The board, after canvassing the situation thoroughly, feels bound to reiterate to the Commissioners the very great need for additional funds with which to carry relief work through the balance of the current fiscal year.

"In limiting future relief payments to the two classes—unemployables and the families of employables with children eligible for aid under the dependent children law—the Board of Welfare acted in accordance with the Federal policy and the decision of the House Appropriations Committee."

Sought $808,000; Got $350,000.

The Board of Commissioners sought $808,000 for relief for the balance of the current fiscal year. Daniel W. Bell, Director of the Budget, cut this down to $250,000. The House Appropriations Committee boosted the amount to $350,000 and this measure was passed by the Senate.

An additional $258,000—the difference between the amount requested and the amount appropriated—is the minimum needed, the board said. This declaration as "imperative need" is to be embodied in a statement which is to be presented the Commissioners for action at their regular meeting on Tuesday.

All relief clients, both employables and unemployables, have received their 1st cash for this month. Only unemployables and dependent children are to get checks next month.

There are 4,100 unemployables on relief. They and their dependents number 9,900 persons.

There are 4,900 employables on

Poverty-Stricken, Old, Jobless, Man Dines 'Royally,' Then Dies

The banquet for which Frank Smale had craved these weary last years is over—and Frank Smale, 66, who was jobless and crippled, is dead.

Police found him collapsed over a table in the ramshackle hall bedroom he occupied in a house in the 200 block of Indiana avenue yesterday.

Around him were bits of sausage and slices of meat and a loaf of fairly fresh bread. One twisted hand was stretched toward the kettle on the stove, the kettle that indirectly, police said, brought the end.

The death of Smale was reconstructed by authorities as follows:

When he cooked his banquet he left the water in the kettle on his two-jet gas stove. The water boiled over and extinguished the gas, and Frank Smale, well-fed for once in his old age, inhaled the gas and died.

Neighbors told another story. Smale once was a sheet metal worker who was well paid and dined on steaks and roasts, chops and fowl.

Then came the depression and old age, and he could find no work. He moved to the house on Indiana avenue several years ago and daily tramped the streets, searching for a job.

"I'll get work today, fellow," he said to his landlord.

"They'll want a good man today," he said to the neighbors.

Saving in his ways, Smale was able to live. His daily diet was bread and cheese. He always went to the same grocery store, where Henry Zimmerman, 25, of the 700 block of F street southwest, waited on him.

House Passes Bill to Force Lobby Data

By Felix Bruner.

A bill requiring lobbyists to register, to make known the names of their employers, and to list the amounts and sources of their incomes was passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate. The measure is expected to insure legislation at this session to control attempts to influence enactment or defeat of laws.

While the House loudly debated the bill, the Senate voted an additional $12,500 to the Black lobby Committee for its investigation. The Senate also was the scene of a short but bitter debate over the seizure of telegrams by the committee.

On the radio last night Jouett Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, said that a report of the Federal Communications Commission on its part in the seizure of telegrams was "filled with half-truths and evasions designed to give an erroneous impression."

Repeated efforts to curb lobbying by Government officials and employes, as well as outside lobbyists, were voted down by House Democrats who shouted "politics."

The House bill, weakened by amendments, was passed by a voice vote with considerably less than a quorum present.

Provision Ruled Out.

An amendment presented by Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia, author of the bill, removed the provision that all contributions of organizations and individuals engaged in lobbying must be reported and provided that only money to be used "principally" for that purpose must be listed. Few, if any, organizations admit that their principal activity is lobbying.

The Smith bill provides no restrictions of lobbyists seeking favors in the executive department of the Government. An attempt to write in such a provision was ruled out of order. A bill introduced by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the lobby committee, and passed by the Senate at the last session, contains such a provision. Black probably will insist upon this provision when the House bill reaches the Senate.

Under the bill lobbyists must keep a detailed account of contributions and of expenditures. Receipts for all expenditures of $10 or more must be filed with reports. The bill was amended to provide that contributions of less than $5 need not be listed. This amendment was intended to avoid complications which might arise from collection by such groups as the Townsend organization of dimes and quarters. Reports of contributions must be filed monthly.

Local, State and national political committees were specifically exempted from the provisions of the bill.

The House was told by Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, chairman of the Rules Committee, which investigated the utility lobby, that $20,000,000 was spent in an attempt to defeat the Wheeler-Rayburn bill. The lobby bill was a result of the Rules Committee investigation.

The Associated Gas & Electric Co. alone spent $1,000,000, O'Connor said.

Had No Effect, He Says.

"And none of this had any effect," he added. "I never knew a lobby to have any effect in Washington. The janitor of this building has as much influence with Congress as any lobbyist in Washington."

Throughout the debate no mention was made of the veterans' lobby which worked in Washington for years for bonus legislation, enacted in this session.

"During consideration of the utility bill, I had trouble getting into the House because the corridors were so crowded with lobbyists," O'Connor said.

Representative Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, demanded to know if anything in the bill prevented members of Congress writing letters asking constituents of other Congressmen to use their influence for or against legislation.

Representative Lamneck (Democrat), Ohio, wanted to know whether anything in the bill "pre-

Four Bodies Found In Wrecked Plane

By the United Press.

Tucson, Ariz., March 27.—Wreckage of a missing airplane and the bodies of its four passengers were found 25 miles north of here today by ranchers.

The four attended an installation of a Junior Chamber of Commerce in Douglas Wednesday and left late that night for Phoenix, planning to stop off in Tucson.

The wreckage was found by Tommy Rhodes, 21, Oracle, Ariz., and two companions while Army planes cruised over the area and ranchers conducted searches.

Farm Union Assails AAA As 'Slavery'

By Sidney Olson.

Charges that "the old AAA drove the share-croppers of the South into worse than slavery," and that the new Soil Conservation Act program is "the same thing in new trappings" were shouted at officials of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration by 50 sharecroppers' union delegates yesterday in the opening sessions of a two-day conference at the Department of Agriculture.

Other, and worse charges, including one that officials of the Resettlement Administration in Alabama are "thieves," and that local representatives of the RA, WPA, and AAA in Arkansas and Alabama have leagued themselves with landlords to rob and reduce to serfdom the sharecroppers and tenant farmers of those States were made throughout the day.

When language became too heated on several occasions, Gardner Jackson, chairman of the National Committee on Rural Social Planning, which arranged the conference, was forced to have portions of the accusations stricken from the record.

Feeling was tense in the small smoke-filled room on the second floor of the south building of the Agriculture Department, with the audience and participants ranging from Washington socialites to an Alabama Negro, whose head was bandaged over a fresh wound from a sheriff's gun butt, reputedly received when he protested eviction from his property.

Woman Denies Charge.

At one time, when Thomas Burke, a fiery, dark-haired young man representing the Sharecroppers Union of Alabama, called RA officials in that State "thieves," and waved documents which he said proved his assertions, an attractive young matron, Mrs. Clifford Durr, of Washington, jumped up in the rear of the room and shouted excitedly:

"That's a lie! I'm from Bullock County, Alabama, and I know that there hasn't been a single person starve down there from sharecropping. They can't starve in that black land. They can grow gardens or something. I know some of those officials down there and I resent their being called thieves."

Burke, waiting quietly until Mrs. Durr sat down, began again—charging certain county officials with forgery of accounts of their tenants, thus preventing them from collecting their just credits.

Mrs. Durr leaped to her feet again and said:

"I don't think it's right for all you people to come up here and attack the Government, when it's doing something for the farmers for the first time in any administration since the Civil War."

Mr. Jackson, as chairman, interrupted to ask Mrs. Durr if she were connected with the Government.

Not With Government.

"I'm not," she said, "but lots of my friends are in the Resettlement Administration."

As Burke began again, she jumped up a third time to shout:

"Are you a Southerner?"

"No, I'm from Minnesota," he answered, "but I'm just as much of an American as you are."

"I thought so," retorted Mrs. Durr, "but just don't claim to be a Southerner if you're not."

Amid similar scenes the meeting went on, as speaker after speaker from the rural areas testified to such occurrences as postmasters receiving AAA benefit checks addressed to sharecroppers and turning them over to landlords, who allegedly forged the sharecroppers' names on the checks.

At the meeting there were present T. C. Hamm, of the AAA, Brookes Hayes and Dr. C. Mitchell, of the RA, and other officials of these groups and the PWA, who were questioned closely by the speakers on the aims of the new soil conservation act. Also present was Howard Kester, editor of The Sharecropper, who published a small book last Monday which characterized the AAA as follows:

"* * * when Secretary of Agricul-

Mussolini Agrees To Discuss Peace

By the Associated Press.

Rome, March 27.—Premier Mussolini, whom the League of Nations has decided was the aggressor in East Africa, is willing to talk preliminary peace terms with the League's arbiter.

Diplomatic sources disclosed tonight that the Fascist dictator has informally invited Salvador de Madariaga, of Spain, to whom the League intrusted the first steps in settling the Italo-Ethiopian war, to come to Rome for conversations.

At the same time, these sources pointed out the possibility of Madariaga's acceptance is slight since, to be technically impartial, he would also have to go to Addis Ababa and the latter journey would take too long.

The Fascist invitation follows two official actions by the countries involved in the African conflict. First, Emperor Haile Selassie accepted unconditionally the League appeal for peace negotiations. Mussolini also accepted the appeal, but qualified his action with demands of territorial accession.

Hoffman Seeks Advice Of Lawyers on Giving Hauptmann Reprieve

Cuban Police Reported Asking Stay Pending New Fisch Inquiry.

Adverse Decision Of Wilentz Seen

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 27.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman was disclosed tonight to be seeking the advice of recognized legal authorities on his right to grant a second reprieve to Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

At the same time, it was reported authoritatively that Attorney General David T. Wilentz, in making known his attitude tomorrow on the Governor's offer to extend Hauptmann's life beyond Tuesday night if shown he has a legal right to do so, will say he cannot consent to such an action.

Both Hoffman and Wilentz, it was learned, have been consulting legal authorities in the State on the legality of another executive reprieve.

In seeking outside legal advice, the Governor was following the same course he pursued last January before he gave Hauptmann a reprieve 29 hours preceding the hour set for his execution.

Did Not Challenge Action.

At that time, however, the attorney general finally agreed not to challenge the action, although he said he believed the period during which the Governor had the power of reprieve already had expired.

The Governor's new efforts to find a legal basis for a reprieve were reported to have followed receipt of a letter from Cuban police suggesting the execution be delayed pending a further inquiry into the possible connection of Isidor Fisch with the Lindbergh ransom money.

Should the Governor receive opinions from outside legal sources that he still had the power to halt the execution, it was reported that he might use them as a basis for a possible new reprieve in the face of a dissenting attitude by the attorney general, who, under the law, is his legal adviser.

In further justification of his action, it was said that he might cite:

1. The criticism of a committee of the American Bar Association of the conduct of Hauptmann's trial.

2. The precedent set by former Gov. Edward I. Edwards in reprieving Michael Kostynski after expiration of the 90-day period following conviction, fixed by the constitution.

The Cuban police have been interested for some time in the report of a Havana lawyer that he saw a letter, signed "Isidor Fisch," written to a German resident of the Cuban capital, offering to dispose of "hot money."

Sent Aid to Cuba.

Robert W. Hicks, criminologist, employed by the Governor, went to Havana early this week to investigate the letter. Hicks was to report to the Governor, perhaps tomorrow.

These developments followed a new and unexpected official conflict which swept the Hauptmann case toward another dramatic climax—a possible new reprieve or an attempt in the courts to gain a new trial.

Gov. Hoffman loosed a new bitter attack upon the prosecution, which drew from one of the prosecutors the retort he was acting from "purely political" motives.

Charging the whole Hauptmann case "reeked with unfairness, passion and prejudice," the Governor said he stood ready to save Hauptmann from execution next Tuesday night if the prosecutors would show him a legal way to do it.

Vera Stretz Confesses Slaying As She Sobs Over Her Romance

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 27.—With her life in the balance, Vera Stretz today sobbed out the story of her romance with the "gallant" Dr. Fritz Gebhardt—a romance that ended in death for Gebhardt and a first degree murder trial for her.

"I loved him very, very dearly," said the ash-blonde stenographer with a Bachelor of Arts degree.

"You shot him, did you not?"

"Yes."

The answer was scarcely audible, as Miss Stretz fought to control her emotions and attendants closed in around her. But they were not needed.

The question was put with dramatic suddenness by Sam Leibowitz, her own attorney, less than an hour after she had taken the stand.

The short, stubby, little revolver with which she allegedly fired four bullets into Gebhardt's body last November was held before her. She was asked to identify it.

"I don't know," she said, and faltered.

Met Aboard Ship.

Under Leibowitz's guidance she testified she had bought a revolver "similar to that" after her mother died in 1930, because there had been robberies in her neighborhood.

Last year, while Gebhardt was wooing her, he took it, she related, saying he "didn't want me to have it."

Miss Stretz, who testified in a quiet, well-modulated voice, said she came to work for Gebhardt in his Fifth avenue trade promotion office after they had met aboard ship.

At the outset she said she had been married, but Leibowitz did not go into details except to bring out that her marriage—an elopement—ended quickly in an annulment.

Crowds stormed the police lines outside the courtroom when the 32-year-old defendant—she had a birthday in jail last month—took the stand.

Miss Stretz, who contends she shot Gebhardt to protect herself from "brutal assault," was alternately composed and weeping.

Fuehrer Warns World; London Talks Founder

Hitler Tells Powers 'to Keep Hands Off,' in Speech at Krupp Plant.

By the United Press.

Essen, Germany, March 27.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler tonight warned the world in general, and Great Britain, France and Belgium in particular, to maintain a "hands off" policy regarding Germany.

Hitler spoke from a platform atop a decorated locomotive overlooking the giant Krupp factory, in which 120,000 persons were jammed amidst huge cranes and other machinery. More than 700,000 gathered in the street outside the factory, thundering approval of Der Fuehrer, although they couldn't hear his words.

The area was a forest of swastikas, flags and banners.

"It would be better if some foreign statesmen worried more about their own countries and less about Germany," Hitler shouted.

Then, pleading for indorsement in the Sunday elections of German military reoccupation of the Rhineland, Der Fuehrer said: "I shall never surrender one single room in the German house to others."

"Neighbors should not mix in what their neighbors do in their own dwellings," he said.

"In our house we want to do what we like. To those saying this hurts the interests of others, I say, 'others have no interests in our house. And we have no interest in France, Belgium, Britain or other foreign countries. Foreigners also should not have any interests in Germany'."

Hitler spoke for 90 minutes. He began:

"Speaking in this factory, I see not only a plant for the manufacture of armaments, but also a plant for producing instruments of peace.

"There could be no more symbolic platform for speaking to the German workers than this. I chose it in

3 Youths Admit Murdering Chicago Doctor; Fourth Held

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 27.—Four youthful robbers were held tonight for the slaying of Dr. Silber C. Peacock after police captain Harry O'Connell announced three of them admitted they shot the pediatrician to death in a $22 robbery.

Michael Livingston, 17, was siezed at his home after he had been implicated in the slaying by Emil Reick, Robert Goethe, alias Mitchell Didich, and Durland Nash, alias Joe Dziedzic, each 19.

Capt. O'Connell said the latter three admitted they shot the pediatrician to death in the course of a criminal escapade during which they committed some 200 robberies, automobile thefts and house burglaries. Livingston did not make an immediate statement, but was held for questioning.

Reick collapsed and was sent to a hospital in the course of the questioning during which, Capt. O'Connell said, the trio confessed they lured Dr. Peacock from his home the night of Jan. 2 by telephoning he was needed to attend a sick child.

He said the gang awaited the pediatrician at an address they chose at random from the telephone book, closed in on him as he stepped from his car, and shot him when he resisted.

They dragged the pediatrician to his auto—accounting for numerous scalp lacerations—rifled his instrument case and dumped him in the machine which they drove away and abandoned, the captain said.

Then the gang proceeded to a tavern and divided the $22 loot four ways, Capt. O'Connell said.

Dr. Peacock, 41-year-old specialist in children's diseases, left his apartment the night of January 2 in response to an "emergency call," and was found shot to death in his abandoned car 21 hours later.

Eastern Roads Will Offer New Rail Fare Plan

Leaders Confer on I. C. C. 2-Cent-Rate Order; Will Ask Delay.

By the Associated Press.

Major Eastern railroads yesterday announced a move to substitute their own "experimental" passenger fares for sharply reduced rates recently prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Presidents of Eastern lines, after a meeting here, reported they would seek a delay in the June 2 effective date of the commission's order, which cut the basic coach rate from 3.6 to 2 cents a mile and eliminated the Pullman surcharge. The Pullman rate was fixed at 3 cents.

The commission's order was country-wide in scope, but its chief effect would fall on the Eastern carriers, because experimental low fares already are in operation in the West and South.

A statement issued by President F. E. Williamson, of the New York Central, said the Eastern rail heads had "made a careful study of passenger statistics following the commission's decision" and that "it was the conclusion of the large majority of the lines represented" at yesterday's meeting "that application should be made to the commission requesting a deferment of the effective date of the order."

Plan Experimental Bases.

"In the meantime," Williamson added, "certain experimental bases of fare are to be established during the interim period."

Although declining to be quoted individually, others at the conference indicated that the commission would be asked to give the roads a "trial period" of perhaps six months or a year in which to test the results of experimental fares other than those set by the I. C. C.

Such fares would be established at some point between the basic 2-cent rate prescribed by the commission and the present 3.6 cent rate.

The action yesterday indicated that heads of other Eastern lines had reached an agreement with Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, who has championed the rates fixed by the commission.

Negotiations have been under way for some time between Willard and heads of other Eastern lines, looking toward some compromise action.

With the exception of the B. & O., Eastern roads offered a united front in opposition to any reduction in the 3.6-cent basic rate, charging that a cut to 2 cents would cost them millions of dollars annually.

Commuter Travel Cited.

They argued that a large proportion of their passenger traffic resulted from commuter travel, which would not be increased by a reduction in rates.

The commission, however, cited increased passenger revenues to Southern and Western roads following reductions in fares and predicted a similar upturn would follow a rate cut in the East.

Heads of the Eastern roads met after a general session of directors of the Association of American Railroads.

President John J. Pelley said the board discussed negotiations with labor representatives on methods of protecting employes displaced in coordination projects.

He expressed hope that some solution on this long-standing question could be reached and said that "we are making a lot of progress."

Besides Williamson and Willard, those who attended the conference on passenger fraes included H. S. Palmer, trustee of the New Haven, and Presidents M. W. Clements, of the Pennsylvania E. S. French, of the Boston & Maine, and E. S. Scheer, of the Reading.

Relief

relief. With their dependents they number 20,000 persons. Approximately 1,000 of this 20,000 are members of families in which there are children eligible for dependent aid. The other 19,000 employables on relief are to be shucked off the rolls.

Street and other members of the board said there was little or no hope that any considerable number would be able to find jobs in private employ at wages which would buy them enough for the bare necessities of life. Washington is not an industrial town, they pointed out. It doesn't have "booms" outside of the Government service.

So far, there have been certified to the Federal Social Security Board 1,361 children as eligible for aid under the dependent children law. About 1,000 of these are minor children of unemployables. The others are children of employables. This last group and their families number about 1,000 persons.

Under the dependent aid law, the District may allot $18 a month for the first dependent child under 16, and $12 a month for each additional child and the Federal board will pay the District one-third of such payments. These Federal funds will, of course, be used to piece out the depleted local funds.

Hope for improvement in the situation after the first of the next fiscal year, July 1, is not held out by relief officials. The $1,590,000 provided by the House in the annual District appropriation bill will not be enough to care for more than unemployables and dependent children, they said.

$8,500,000 More Needed, Plea.

Congressional appropriations contemplated for relief here will be "entirely inadequate" and should be increased by $8,500,000, the District department of the American Federation of Government Employes protested last night.

The organization was told the discontinuance of direct Federal relief meant that only $2,000,000 would be spent in such work here during the next 12 months as compared with $10,500,000 in the fiscal year now drawing to a close.

Edna Kury, president of the Public Assistance Division Lodge, obtained a favorable report on resolutions demanding an increase in the local outlay and assailing contemplated heavy personnel and pay slashes in the public assistance division.

Machinery Of Paying Off Veterans' Bonus Starts To Move At Treasury.

By Franklyn Waltman

SLOWLY the wheels of machinery in what is perhaps the "biggest pay-off" in history have started to move. The Veterans' Administration yesterday sent to the Treasury the first list of 3,500,000 World War soldiers to whom $2,200,000,000 will be paid, either in cash or in redeemable bonds before the summer ends.

The first list contained 2,000 names, duly certified, along with the amounts due to them. None of these veterans will receive their bonus bonds before June 15, but the Treasury immediately started to work making out in their names bonus bonds and checks for the amounts due to them. On June 15 the rain of bonds and checks will commence to fall over the land.

Payment of the veterans' bonus will have widespread repercussions. Not only will it send the total of Federal expenditures, deficit and debt soaring upward, but it is expected to stimulate activity in multitudinous economic endeavors. Expenditure of most of the $2,200,000,000 almost as soon as it is received is expected to put the final glow of New Deal prosperity on the country—just as the Presidential campaign gets under way seriously.

For instance, one economic statistician in the Government service who has been unusually accurate at such computations, estimates that bonus money will be used to buy 300,000 new automobiles, chiefly in the low-priced categories. This would be 300,000 automobiles which otherwise would not be sold, he figures. If he is correct, that expenditure will not only send the Detroit automobile factories into high gear but it will be felt in the steel, glass, rubber and several other industries.

But the automobile manufacturers and dealers will have to fight to get these bonus dollars. Many other industrialists would like to get some of them. The Federal Housing Administration, for instance, is planning an advertising campaign to persuade veterans to use their bonus payment to purchase a home—that is as the down payment. Realtors generally are expected to take up that cry.

Undoubtedly the railroads and steamship companies will be ready with a plea to the veterans to use their bonus money to "See America" or "Revisit France" or just take a trip. But a substantial amount of the bonus money paid out will be used to pay indebtedness, while many veterans will either hold their bonds or put their bonus into stocks and bonds.

Before the point is reached, however, when this money will be spent, the Federal Government must perform one of the greatest tasks that has been dropped on it since the soldiers were mustered out of the army after the World War. The job begins in the Veterans' Administration, which has taken a building on Connecticut avenue, once used by NRA, to house the clerical staff employed to handle payment of the bonus.

Veterans must make application for their bonus bonds, on a form prescribed by the Veterans' Administration, accompanied by their bonus certificate. If the veteran has borrowed from a bank with his certificate as collateral, this information must be given, in order that the Government may pay off the debt and get the certificate.

The amount of each veteran's bonus is computed, checked and rechecked—more than 8,000,000 interest computations alone are necessary for all the veterans—and finally is cleared in the form of a voucher to the Treasury Department, stating the sum due the veteran. Meanwhile the Treasury already has started the gigantic task of engraving 38,000,000 bonus bonds in denominations of $50 each. The largest number of bonds which the Treasury has issued so far at one time has been 4,000,000.

As fast as the names of veterans are certified by the Veterans' Administration, they will be inscribed on the bonus bonds and checks for the odd amounts made out. That is, if the amount due a veteran is $843.75, he will be sent 16 $50 bonds and a check for $43.75. These bonds must be registered and tabulated.

The Federal Reserve Banks will act as distributing agents for the Treasury. As an illustration, all bonds and checks for veterans living along the Pacific Coast will be sent in bulk to the San Francisco Federal Reserve Bank, which in turn on June 15 will mail them to the veterans in registered letters. Other sections will be handled in similar fashion, except that the Treasury will make the distribution direct in the case of the Fifth, or Richmond, Federal Reserve District.

This operation sets in motion the financing of the payment of the bonus. Secretary Henry Morgenthau will include in his June 15 financing operation $1,000,000,000 or more to provide cash for those veterans who wish to cash their bonds at once. But the Treasury bookkeepers will be busy making their entries, pyramiding expenditures, deficit and debt even before the veteran cashes his bond.

As soon as each Federal Reserve bank mails out the bonds assigned to it, it will notify the Treasury of the total amount thus sent out. The Treasury bookkeepers will write down as an expenditure and at the same time adding the amount to the public debt. The checks sent out will be recorded as expenditures as soon as they are cashed.

Thus in the last two weeks of June it is possible that as much as $2,000,000,000 may be added to the expenditures of this fiscal year, bringing the total to a peace-time high for one year in the neighborhood of $9,500,000,000, and correspondingly raising the annual deficit and the public debt to new record figures. Part of the bonus payment, however, will not be recorded until the new fiscal year starts on July 1, thus boosting somewhat the totals for that year, and further confusing the budget-balancing issue which is destined to be foremost in the coming campaign.

'Slavery' Charged to AAA

ture Henry A. Wallace perpetrated upon the South the greatest iniquity since the 'bo' evil,' that * * * child of a decadent capitalism and a youthful fascism, the AAA."

W. C. Irby, organizer and secretary of the Alabama Farmers Union, told the afternoon session that he had participated in the last 18 months in the organization of more than 25,000 Alabama farmers in his union, all of whom had sworn to buy only union-made goods and union-produced foodstuffs. He pointed to organization as the sole means of achieving the aims of the various unions, and said it was now easy to organize mill workers and textile workers, merchants, miners and other groups in Alabama since the Farmers Union had begun to show its power.

Irby told the gathering that although he had been fired on, and that ex-convicts and other imported hoodlums had been brought in by landlords to drive him out of various sections in Alabama, he had never been forced to leave a single section without successful organization work.

"Just leave me talk to 'em five minutes," he shouted, "and tell them the truth, and they protect me from any of the owners."

Other speakers included J. L. McLaughlin, supervisor of the Pine Mountain Valley project in Georgia, near Warm Springs, who told of the success of the project in providing a "real income" of from $700 to $800 yearly for each of some 250 families in the project. He admitted the project was not of a type likely to succeed on a national scale since it had many advantages peculiar to itself, but thought if the Government appropriated $1,500,000,000 it could handle 500,000 farm families.

At the morning session yesterday Secretary Wallace greeted the delegates briefly, stating that the administration of farm labor conditions was one of the Nation's greatest problems. He said a considerable step forward would come from passage of the Bankhead-Jones farm tenant bill.

At the conference were delegates representing unions in California, Colorado, Idaho, Nebraska, Montana, Ohio, Florida, New Jersey, New York, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Alabama.

Florida Deaths Blamed on Lack Of Gale Notice

Wilcox Sees 'Act of God,' but Says Warning Would Have Saved Veterans.

Representative J. Mark Wilcox (Democrat) Florida, yesterday blamed an "act of God," and not the Federal Government, for the deaths of 168 World War veterans in a hurricane on the Florida Keys, but he declared adequate storm warnings would have prevented the disaster. He charged the Government with a responsibility for the dependents of the dead veterans because trustworthy storm warnings were not given before the hurricane struck in November, 1934.

Wilcox appeared before the House World War Veterans Committee. It is seeking to fix responsibility for the loss of life among veterans sent to three relief administration camps on the keys.

Asked by Chairman Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, if he believed the Government was responsible for putting men in a hazardous place, Wilcox responded: "I believe the Government should make compensation—like any other employer should. But the Government is not to be blamed for sending men there, because it is a fine and healthful place to work. An act of God came along and caused the trouble, and the men ought to be compensated.

"I am making no charges," Wilcox continued. "I am more concerned now in doing something to prevent a repetition in my district, for we are not going to be able actually to accomplish anything or restore one life when we do fix responsibility."

Would Co-Operate With Britain.

Saying it was comparatively easy to chart the course of a hurricane in advance, Wilcox urged that an agreement be made with Great Britain for closely spaced weather stations in the Bahama islands to keep check on storms. He said he had been unable this session to have $25,000 appropriated for warning facilities "because the weather bureau wouldn't sufficiently back me up."

Emphasizing his plea for more government weather stations, Wilcox said that in the stormy season amateur weather prophets cried "wolf" so often that Florida residents came to disregard all storm warnings.

"The suspense," he said, "of being scared to death is almost as bad as the hurricane."

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, brought out that native residents did not evacuate the district in anticipation of the storm and that there had not been a serious hurricane there previously since 1912. Transportation to remove veterans and residents was available before the storm broke, questioning disclosed.

Vienna Hears Carol, Helen May Rewed

Vienna, March 27 (AP).—The Viennese Diplomatic Corps was stirred tonight by the oft-recurring report that King Carol, of Rumania, was about to be reconciled with his divorced wife, Princes Helen.

More than usual credit was given to the report because urgent domestic and foreign problems are facing Rumania. The King's advisers are said to be admonishing him to strengthen his dynasty in the esteem of the people.

The question immediately raised in legations here was what would happen to Magda Lupescu, Carol's intimate friend who, during her many years at the Rumanian Court, has exerted an extraordinary influence over the King.

The answer, in usually well-informed quarters, was that Mme. Lupescu would be persuaded to live abroad for an extended period.

Helen, who now is living in Florence, has refused several times to consider returning while Mme. Lupescu remains at Bucharest.

Ohio River Sets All-Time Peak For 981 Miles

Relief Measures Pushed; Refugees Encouraged by Forecasts.

By the Associated Press.

Flood relief measures were pushed yesterday while the Ohio River rose above flood stage along its entire 981-mile length for the first time in recorded history.

Residents who deserted their homes along streams tributary to the Ohio as the water crept higher around them were encouraged by a forecast of fair weather. A respite of 48 hours, weather experts said, would enable the river to carry off moderately heavy rains later without further damage.

The highest flood level along the Tennessee since 1932 was forecast, scores of families evacuated to higher ground.

Pennsylvania officials agreed to convene a special session of the Legislature on May 4 to deal with flood rehabilitation and other problems.

In Massachusetts Gov. James M. Curley vetoed a legislative appropriation of $2,000,000 for flood relief with a statement that "funds must be made available immediately without any strings attached." The proposed appropriation would have made the money available only after the Federal Government had refused to contribute needed funds.

The Ohio Senate approved and sent to the House a bill to appropriate $500,000 for flood relief.

Rehabilitation efforts in the Midwest, slowed down by the Ohio's new crest, were resumed rapidly.

Hartford, Conn., one of the heavier flood sufferers, marked a step on the road to recovery by removal of the last curfew restrictions imposed in the city.

Senate to Debate Naming of Hardy

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's nomination of Lamar Hardy as United States attorney for the Southern District of New York will be debated by the Senate next Tuesday, with Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, opposing confirmation.

Norris yesterday asked the Senate to reconsider its action confirming the nomination of the Meridian (Miss.) lawyer who went to New York and became a prominent figure in law, city government and business. There was no objection.

"It was generally known that I wanted to oppose this nomination," Norris said in obtaining unanimous consent to reconsider.

Norris is a member of the Judiciary Committee.

A sub-committee heard objections to Hardy by the Bar Association of the City of New York, based upon his previous connection with the defunct State Title & Mortgage Co. Hardy was incorporator and a director of the title company, some of whose officers have been indicted in connection with an investigation of the "mortgage racket" in New York City.

12,500,000 Estimated Idle Speeds Action

White House and Congress Show Renewed Interest in Creating Jobs.

By the Associated Press.

A new Federation of Labor estimate that 12,500,000 Americans were jobless yesterday coincided with indications of intensified interest in the unemployment problem by both the White House and Congress.

The federation estimated that figure for February, saying it represented a decline of 95,000 from the previous month. The increase in employment was attributed largely to a pick-up in agricultural employment due to spring planting.

Two developments within the last 24 hours gave substance to hints that both the Administration and sections of Congress believed some of the job-spreading objectives of the invalidated National Recovery Administration might be salvaged. Yesterday a move gained headway for a Senate investigation of labor conditions since the death of NRA. On Thursday President Roosevelt created a committee to make a round-up analysis of NRA's deeds.

Jobs Urged by President.

In his relief message to Congress less than a fortnight ago, Mr. Roosevelt urged a co-ordinated effort on industry's part to whittle down the number of unemployed.

Maj. George L. Berry's council of labor and industry has joined the American Federation of Labor in the position that legislation to regulate wages and hours is needed to reduce unemployment.

These factors have set labor representatives to speculating upon whether Mr. Roosevelt would propose new NRA legislation if the unemployment total is not sharply reduced before the next session of Congress.

The A. F. of L. said "industry as yet shows no signs of re-employing any significant portion of the unemployed."

"In February," the unemployment report added, "the spring upturn had not yet started and business activity still registered a decline.

"Slight employment gains on the railroads (52,000) and in manufacturing (17,000) were more than offset by losses in building (83,000) and trade (37,000). In agriculture alone was there any significant re-employment, where 172,000 were taken on in preparation for the spring season.

Answer Is Industrial Work.

"Remembering that the answer to unemployment is not relief but work in industry, it is significant to note that our relief rolls last year exceeded the pay rolls of our five largest industries: Textile and clothing, railroads, building, machinery, iron and steel and their products.

"These industries employed 4,737,000 (average) in 1935, while relief rolls averaged 4,793,000 cases. * * *

"Unless a determined effort is made to create work, we may expect that for many years millions will be denied the chance to produce wealth and the Nation will be taxed to maintain them in poverty."

Included in the Federation's total of unemployed were the 3,853,000 on Works Progress Administration jobs, and 117,000 on PWA projects.

Laska Conviction Upheld by Court

Denver, March 27 (AP).—The conviction of Ben L. Laska, elderly Denver attorney, for conspiracy in the $200,000 kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma oil millionaire, was upheld today by the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals.

Laska was attorney for Albert L. Bates, who, with George (Machine Gun) Kelly and others, kidnaped Urschel and held him for ransom.

The Denver attorney was accused of accepting part of the Urschel ransom from Bates. Laska contended it was a legal fee.

Experts Say Air Pocket Caused Crash, 14 Deaths

Mexico City, March 27 (AP).—Aviation experts, reviewing the possible cause of the plane crash which killed 14 persons near Mount Popocatepetl, expressed the theory tonight that a terrific downward air current dashed the ship against the rocky volcanic saddle.

Pilots explained that at this time of the year the region surrounding Popocatepetl and Ixtaciuatl is swept by strong currents which frequently lift or drop a plane several thousand feet in a few seconds.

The huge airliner smashed into the saddle between the two volcanoes yesterday, carrying 10 European tourists.

Kiki Roberts Seeking To Marry First Time

New York, March 27 (AP).—Kiki Roberts, blonde chorus girl once the sweetheart of "Legs" Diamond, slain gangster, may be married on Easter Sunday to A. J. Savarese, advertising agent, it was learned today from the Rev. John A. McManus, who said she has asked him to perform the rite. He is investigating an application made to him a few days ago.

Father McManus said the marriage license bore the name of Frances Peterka, but the girl told him, he added, she had been known as Kiki Roberts. She gave the date of her birth as 1908 and said this will be her first marriage.

Civil Service for Federal Jobs?

ONLY 50.7 per cent of all the jobs in the Executive branch of the Government are today under civil service regulation. Yet, in 1932, the figure was 80.8 per cent.

WHY the drop? Is it an indication that we are on the way back to the spoils system of Andrew Jackson's day?

DO the voters of the Nation believe that all jobs in the Executive branch . . . regardless of the emergency and with the exception of those having to do with important matters of policy . . . should go to those receiving the highest marks in civil service examinations?

THE latest poll, conducted by the Institute of Public Opinion, has quizzed the national electorate on just this question. For the answer, see AMERICA SPEAKS in tomorrow's

Senate Group To 'Consider' Process Taxes

Harrison Hints Action Will be Taken Before House Passes Bill.

Processing taxes, effectively sidetracked by a House Ways and Means sub-committee, may be considered anew by the Senate Finance Committee if the House throws some $221,000,000 of the farm levies out of its revenue bill, it developed last night.

At the same time, it was reported that House legislative draftsmen have begun work on a bill embracing the principal proposals in the $799,000,000 revenue report made early this week to the House Ways and Means Committee.

The first hint that the President's proposal to revive processing taxes may again be dragged into the revenue picture was given by Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, who told reporters that the Senate committee will "consider" the President's recommendations as a whole, processing taxes along with the rest.

Speedy Action Expected.

Harrison, who indicated the Senate group will not be bound by House action, said he hopes to call his committee together before the House moves its tax bill to the floor, so that speedy Senate action may be assured. He said he would act sooner, were it not for the fact that Treasury and Joint Committee on Internal Revenue experts were now needed by the House tax draftsmen.

Controversy developed anew yesterday between Republican and Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee, when Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the group, charged that Chairman Robert L. Doughton is setting a precedent in undertaking "to pass on all requests for time" at open hearings beginning Monday.

"Formerly applications for appearances have been accepted by the committee clerk as a routine matter and applicants were listed on the calendar," Treadway said.

He declared that, in a tax program so revolutionary, there should be no drastic testimony restrictions when the hearings open, and offered to aid witnesses in getting all the time they need to testify.

"Any attempt to prevent the general public from being heard to the fullest extent is certain to meet with severe condemnation," Treadway said.

Doughton has promised full hearings, but has declared he intends to do everything possible to expedite the hearings. He was in North Carolina yesterday. Speaker Byrns hopes hearings can be completed in time to bring the bill before the House before mid-April, possibly before the new relief appropriations are considered.

Notice of Hearings Sent Out.

Although the full list of witnesses has not yet been published, the Ways and Means Committee has sent notice of hearings to more than two score individuals and organizations which asked for the notice. Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering, acting for the Treasury in tax matters in the absence of Secretary Morgenthau, is expected to be the first to testify.

Organizations notified, so that they may send witnesses if they choose, include the United States Chamber of Commerce, the National Manufacturers Association, the Association of Railroads, Domestic Sugar Refiners, Independent Petroleum Association, Cotton Textile Institute, the New York Bar Association on Taxation, the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, the Machinery and Allied Products Institute, the tax committee of the American Management Association, and the Peoples Lobby.

How much consideration of the tax and relief measures will delay adjournment was still a matter of keen speculation, but leaders were reticent about hazarding an official guess. Chairman Adolph Sabath of the Democratic steering committee said it will be around May 16, but privately some leaders think it will be much later. Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, yesterday offered a resolution to adjourn Congress May 11, but it was speedily tabled on motion of Majority Leader William Bankhead.

AAA Tax Revival Urged.

Senator Harrison's statement that processing taxes will be "considered" by the Senate Finance Committee, followed expression of some sentiment for reviving the old AAA levies within the Senate group. Senator Bennett Clark (Democrat), Missouri, is one member of the Senate committee favoring them as a method of raising needed revenue.

Miniature Flood Follows Crash With Fireplug

Tons of water formed a miniature flood early yesterday in North Woodside when the car of Emil Sturman, of the Czechoslovakian Legation, 2349 Massachusetts avenue northwest, struck a fireplug on Georgia avenue near Grace Church road. Sturman and an unidentified young woman companion were treated for minor hurts by the Silver Spring Rescue Squad. The low-lying section west of Georgia avenue was flooded by the gushing water. Sturman told Montgomery County police that he was forced from the road by another car.

Hisey Doomed To Life Term In Girl's Death

Justice O'Donoghue Sentences Him to Maximum; Appeal Is Delayed.

Charles Frederick Hisey, 52, a printer, will have to spend the rest of his life in prison to pay for the slaying last August of pretty 20-year-old Virgie R. Lyttle.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday imposed sentence on Hisey, who, according to the Government evidence, had been consuming at least half a gallon of liquor a day prior to the shooting. Hisey, a slightly built, somewhat stoop-shouldered man, claimed during the trial that he had accidentally killed Miss Lyttle, a roomer in his home, while he was attempting to fire a bullet into his own head.

Charged with first degree murder, he was found guilty in the second degree, which carrels a maximum sentence of life inprisonment. In imposing sentence Justice O'Donoghue held that the District's indeterminate sentence law did not apply, since he could not tell how much one-fifth of a man's life was. The law reads that there should be a sentence of from one-fifth of the maximum to the maximum.

Miss Lyttle, a department store employe, was ready to leave for her work when Hisey called her into his room and attempted to press upon her a $200 loan. When she refused, the Government contended, he whipped out a newly purchased pistol and shot her through the head. He claimed at his trial he had bought the gun to kill himself.

Defense attorneys announced they did not plan an appeal at this time. They always have contended that Hisey was only trying to assist Miss Lyttle in her financial troubles, and had no intention of taking her life. Hisey was found guilty two weeks ago, and is now serving his sentence.

French Air Police To Patrol Border

Paris, March 27 (AP).—France served a stern warning that airplanes flying on frontier fortifications would not be tolerated by announcing tonight the establishment of a special air police force to pursue foreign planes illegally crossing the border.

The air ministry said as a result of "aerial indiscretions" by foreign planes watching posts have been established on all frontiers "especially along the Maginot line"—facing Germany.

Germany replied to a French protest over the action of two German planes in flying low over frontier fortifications today by saying investigation disclosed they were student planes carrying no photographic apparatus.

It was announced the pilots were "severely punished" for violating the order of the ministry of air barring all but transport planes from approaching frontiers.

Ankara, Turkey, March 27 (AP).—An earthquake destroyed hundreds of buildings in 12 villages in the Kars region near the Turco-Russian frontier today.

No casualties were reported immediately, but the population was terrorized.

Borah, Lewis Score Allies' Debt Defaults

Walsh Wants Administration to Make New Efforts to Collect.

By the Associated Press.

A bipartisan attack in the Senate against what was termed repudiation of British and French war debts ended yesterday with a Democratic request to ascertain if the Administration has made any fresh efforts to collect.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, ranking Republican of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Lewis, of Illinois, a Democratic member of the same committee, took Britain and France to task for failing to make remittances on their war obligations. The contention was pressed that recent speeches in foreign Parliaments meant full repudiation was in prospect.

The two speeches were followed quickly by a question from Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, as to whether the Administration had notified the debtors recently that millions were due and overdue which the American taxpayers had furnished to assist the Allies at the height of the World War.

Opposes Debt Commission.

Borah told the Senate something should be done. At the same time, however, he opposed the McAdoo resolution to set up another debt commission to negotiate fresh settlements.

"There is no occasion," he asserted, "for indicating that we propose to make another contract which, in due time, will also be repudiated."

Borah said the debate which took place in the House of Commons Thursday between Lloyd George and Neville Chamberlain "indicates unmistakably, taken in connection with the things which had preceded, that it is not the intention of Great Britain to pay its debt to us."

"The whole structure of international order," the Idahoan declared, "depends upon adhering to, obeying and carrying out international agreements, and there is not a contract, or a treaty, involved in the chaotic conditions which now embroil Europe which entails any greater obligation, legal or moral, than the obligation to pay these debts which were contracted to be paid after a thorough investigation.

Hits Repudiation as Unmoral.

"It is claimed that Germany has ignored the obligations of the Versailles Treaty and that Italy has ignored the obligations of the League Covenant and that, by reason of these actions, Europe has been placed again in a state of chaos and turmoil.

"There is no difference in law and morals, in international obligations, between the act of Germany and the act of Italy, and the acts of these nations in repudiating these debts.

"Greater consequences may flow from one than from the other. There may be differences in that respect, but so far as moral, or legal, obligations goes, the nations are just as much bound to respect these obligations as Germany was to respect the Versailles Treaty, and infinitely more, because Germany signed the Versailles Treaty under duress, at the point of the bayonet, while these debtor contracts were made after full, free, deliberate investigation and agreement to pay."

Lewis referred to Premier Flandin's statement that France would not allow her people to pay America "on a false claim of debt," and that America really owed France for "saving her" from destruction by Germany. Lewis then observed:

"We are asking nothing not due us. We are not asking of these nations to pay us only because they owe us. We call to their attention our flagrant and open needs. The war we fought with them has left us a debt to our own people of billions. The needs of our poor and the distresses of the depressed years make demand for billions of money to preserve millions of human beings."

Ship Parley Disappoints Robinson.

Off the floor, Democratic Leader Robinson, who represented the United States at a former naval conference abroad, meanwhile issued a statement asserting that the results of the latest parley were "disappointing," but that it was not surprising "with seapowers such as Japan and Italy declining to participate."

Robinson, also a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said there was little prospect of "notable success in efforts to limit and restrict when the conference met."

"There is a measure of gratification to be found," he added, "in the fact that Great Britain, France and the United States were able to reach even a very limited accord under the circumstances."

Ford Visions Machine Age Taking Rule From Capitalists

Motor Magnate Says Changed Order Will End Reign of Wealth; Holds Crop Curtailment Is Against Nature's Laws.

By the Associated Press.

Ways, Ga., March 27.—Henry Ford, combining a winter vacation with research on a new automobile motor, predicted today the Machine Age eventually "will take control of the world from the financiers."

The multimillionaire manufacturer said that the changed order would end the ability of the wealthy to "rule the universe" and that independence would come to the individuals who develop the machinery.

Transportation will figure largely in the future, he said, with present-day development of the automobile and airplane "just the begininng."

Ford and two engineers are carrying on their research in the seclusion of his 75,000-acre Cherry Hill plantation here. Their workshop is a small frame building.

Farm born and reared, Ford reiterated his view that "industry is going into the country." He has established a manual training school in this rural community to further his idea of correlating industry and agriculture.

A widespread use of the soil is what America needs most, said the motor magnate, who describes crop curtailment as against the law of Nature and the security of plenty.

"Everybody who can plant something should do so now," he said. "It would make more of our citizens. Even 6-year-olds should have a garden."

Governor Will Call Troops in Oil Fight

Oklahoma City, March 27 (U.P.).—Gov. E. W. Marland tonight prepared to declare martial law to enforce the State's right to lease and drill for oil on its capital lands, in opposition to the Oklahoma City council.

He instructed Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson to draft, at once, an executive order creating a military zone on 11 tracts of State lands.

"I'll use as many National Guardsmen as necessary to enforce it," the Governor said.

It was the first time Marland brandished the military arm of the State in the manner made famous by his predecessor in office, the militant William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray.

Austria Strengthens Patrols on Border

Innsbruck, Austria, March 27 (AP).—Austria's frontier patrols and passport controls were strengthened today as the result of a flood of invitations to young Austrians to go to Germany and become German citizens.

The communications, which promise "certain livelihood after fulfilling military obligations in the German army," are being sent by Nazi headquarters in Munich to youths believed or known to have Nazi sympathies.

Residents of the Tyrol, where many such letters have been received, said they believed the object was to recruit Austrians for the German army, since the promise of German citizenship was linked with military service.

13 Nazi Conspirators Convicted in Austria

Vienna, March 27 (AP).—Thirteen Nazis, charged with attempting "to bring about a change of government by force," were convicted at Wiener Neustadt today and given sentences from three months to a year in prison. Another dozen were arrested in the Austrian capital today as police continued their drive against Nazi conspirators.

Informed sources reported Austrian Nazis had plotted to burn the German legation to gain sympathy for their movement, but police officials refused to comment on the reports. Officials began preparations for manifestations of Nazi enthusiasm in connection with the German elections Sunday.

G. U. Students See Port Facilities at Norfolk

Sixty Foreign Service students of Georgetown University specializing in shipping, left Washington by steamer last night for a week end trip to Norfolk for the purpose of inspecting its port facilities.

Most of the students are members of the Propeller Club. Accompanied by several professors, they will be given the courtesies of the port by Norfolk officials. Today they will be luncheon guests of the Newport News Shipbuilding Co. and tonight will be entertained at William and Mary College at Williamsburg. They will return by boat Monday morning. Talman C. Budd, executive vice president of the Propeller Club, and Hal Ryerson and Robert Heller are in charge of arrangements.

'Queen Mary' Docks.

Southampton, Eng., March 27 (AP).—The new British liner, Queen Mary, reached Southampton today after a successful trip from the Clyde. Tugs nosed her into the King George V graving-dock, especially built for the new ship. After the hull is scraped and painted, the remainder of the fitting will be carried out.

Parker Will Speak.

Bristol, Va., March 27.—Senator Robert R. Parker, of Appalachia, who represents Wise and Dickenson counties in the Virginia General Assembly, will deliver the keynote address at the Ninth District Congressional convention in Bristol on April 4.

Vera Stretz Admits Slaying

A few of the fashionably-dressed women spectators, including Tallulah Bankhead, the actress, wept with her.

Declaring that Gebhardt had proposed to her, although she knew he had a wife and two children in Germany, she identified an aquamarine ring and said he gave it to her to seal their engagement.

He was to get a divorce and they were to be married this spring, she asserted.

The progress of her story toward the never-told events that preceded the shooting in Gebhardt's skyscraper apartment was slowed by the reading of letters which occupied most of the afternoon.

Miss Stretz sat numbly and outwardly composed as her lawyer read such phrases as—

"Dearest Darling Vera—I kiss you with all my force, and so tenderly."

Judge Cornelius Collins held the session overtime this afternoon.

The letters, couched in endearing terms, discussed their literary tastes, their ideals of love and marriage and other matters.

Called Friendship Sacred.

In one Gebhardt wrote: "I am grateful to Heaven for sending me an angel."

In another he spoke of "our friendship" as being "something sacred."

The witness sobbed convulsively during their reading.

They met on shipboard during a West Indies cruise in December, 1934. New Year's eve found them dancing in Havana.

"He kissed me—we were dancing and he just—kissed me," she said.

Following the cruise he took a short trip to Germany.

"After he returned from Europe," she went on, "he protested his love to me. He became more and more devoted. I grew fond of him, too. He was an unusually clever man."

"Go on, just describe him, please," Leibowitz said.

Buries Head and Weeps.

"It's hard for me," she moaned.

"A man of great education, was he not?" suggested Leibowitz.

"Yes," she sobbed.

Patiently, the lawyer pressed her.

"He was very exuberant—vivacious," she said.

"Sentimental?"

"Yes."

"Ardent lover?"

"Yes."

"Gallant?"

"Yes."

When he first told her of his love, she went on, she informed him she "didn't believe in love."

"Now, did you really mean that?"

"Well," she said, "I was amazed. He had been a very great friend."

"It was just one of those things that women say to men?"

"Yes."

Seeming to gain strength as her ordeal wore on, Miss Stretz returned calmly to her cell tonight.

Leibowitz said the high point of her story would be reached when she returns to the stand Monday and tells of the events that preceded the shooting, which occurred in Gebhardt's skyscraper bedroom November 12.

Tobacco Pacts Bill Approved By House Group

Floor Action Soon Sought on Opening Wedge for Farm Control.

By Robert C. Albright.

An opening wedge for control of agricultural production by State compacts was forged yesterday by the House Agriculture Committee, which reported favorably the tobacco compact bill, authorizing tobacco-producing States to enter agreements for the restriction of tobacco output.

It was the first significant attempt to circumvent the Supreme Court ban on Federal agricultural production control, since the AAA was invalidated. Opponents immediately charged the movement will spread to other farm and industrial products, setting up barriers against the free flow of commerce, if approved by Congress.

Reputedly carrying Administration backing and drafted by AAA experts in conference with State officials, the measure will be carried before the House Rules Committee on Monday, and an attempt made to force it to the floor Tuesday.

Although sanctioning compacts on flue-cured, Burley and dark fired tobacco, the measure is designed to speed an agreement on flue-cured tobacco between the States of Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina. Georgia would be brought into the plan by Federal loans to Georgia associations of tobacco producers.

An amendment was written into the measure requiring Congressional approval of State compacts on other commodities, but tobacco was made exempt from this restriction. Critics of the plan charged this exception itself will become a general rule, setting a precedent for Congress to grant similar exemptions to other commodities.

"If you can put through a compact for production and price control of tobacco, you open the way for similar compacts for any other product, either of agriculture or industry," declared Representative August H. Andresen (Republican), of Minnesota.

"The result will be trade barriers thrown up between different sections and destruction of the free movement of commerce. Instead of 48 united States, you will have 48 economic entities."

Andresen charged not only that the proposed compact is in violation of Virginia's State constitution, but also that every other State in the flue-cured group would have to amend its constitution. He said the plan violates the fifth amendment of the Federal Constitution as well.

The Virginia State Legislature already has passed what the Department of Agriculture regards as a "model state compact bill." South Carolina is ready to act. Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, of North Carolina, has been reluctant to call his legislature into special session for fear of repeal of his State sales tax law and inroads on his State budget. He has agreed to call a special session, however, if Congress approves the tobacco compact measure.

Georgia a Problem.

Georgia presents a problem all its own. Gov. Eugene Talmadge has taken the position that farmers should be let alone by the New Dealers. He will not call his legislature into session to co-operate with any plan that has Administration backing. So draftsmen of the tobacco compact measure have made special provision in their bill for loans to co-operating Georgia associations of tobacco growers, out of a $300,000 fund to be made available by the Federal Government. Loans also would be made from this fund to aid the States in setting up machinery to administer the law.

As approved by the House Agriculture Committee, the measure gives Congressional consent to any compact that may be entered into for regulation of production of flue-cured (used in cigarettes and exported in large quantities), dark-fired or burley tobacco, but representatives from Virginia and the Carolinas want authority to control the flue-cured output this year, and ask swift action, as planting already has started in Georgia. Control would be effected by heavy taxes on excess production.

Stricken from the measure at yesterday's session were two sections, prohibiting interstate or foreign shipment of tobacco from compact States in violation of the agreement and subjecting marketing and sale to State regulation.

The measure provides that all State act authorizing tobacco compacts shall be essentially uniform and in no way conflicting. Federal officials would act only in an advisory capacity.

Tax Right Questioned.

Opponents sharply question whether the State has any more right under the Constitution than the Federal Government to control production of a commodity, and therefore its price, through imposition of a prohibitive tax. Sponsors of the measure argue, on the other hand, that a strong implication was raised in the Supreme Court's AAA decision in favor of State control in such situations. The Supreme Court never has ruled specifically that States could use their taxing power in such a manner as to raise the question of whether a litigant was being deprived of a property right under which the due process clause might be invoked.

Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, together with Representative Harold D. Cooley, of North Carolina, will go before the Rules Committee Monday to request House right of way for the measure, which carries the name of Representative John H. Kerr of North Carolina, co-author of the Kerr-Smith tobacco law recently repealed by Congress.

Seeks Share in Estate

Alexandrian, Seeking to Oust Trustees, Says She's 'Prudent'

Miss Crocker, of 'Little Tea Room' Fame, Cites $120,000-a-Year Business in Effort to Obtain Father's Estate Share.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 27. — Gertrude L. Crocker, 40, who said she had built up her tea room at Alexandria, Va., into a $120,000-a-year business, took the stand in Federal court today to testify that she had reached "the age of prudence."

Miss Crocker appeared as her own witness in her suit for removal of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ethel C. Pierce, of suburban Hinsdale, as trustees of the $100,000 estate of the women's father, John T. Crocker, Milwaukee railroad purchasing agent.

The will provided that each of the six children should receive an equal share upon becoming "prudent enough to manage business affairs." Miss Crocker testified that the trustees had withheld her share on the ground that she cannot be trusted with its conservation.

"I've been so successful since establishing my tea room in 1918 that I now have a $120,000 yearly business," Miss Crocker told Judge John P. Barnes. "I have installed a tower from which guests enjoy a million-dollar view of Washington. My guests have included Mrs. Harding, Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Roosevelt, all wives or widows of Presidents.

"Woodrow Wilson himself used to stop for tea."

Eighteen years ago when Gertrude Crocker and her sister, Ruth, established their tea room on Arlington Ridge road between Washington and Georgetown, their acre and a half of land and building combined was valued at $14,000.

Today the "Little Tea Room" property, consisting of four buildings, including seven dining halls and a half dozen outside porches, and neatly spaced gardens, is worth an estimated $120,000.

Ruth Crocker died six years ago and since then her sister has managed the property with the aid of a brother. An instance of her enterprise was the setting off of three tables fronting on a moon view for lovers.

That was about two years ago. At the time Miss Crocker sketched the growth of the tea house for an interviewer.

"We began by only serving tea. But one day I got a telephone call for a chicken luncheon for two. I had never fried a chicken in my life. I worked all morning on my first luncheon. It was a success and we've never had trouble since.

"At first there were only a few rooms, and not more than half a dozen tables. Gradually business grew, and with it the house. The architect balked at the addition of the porches, but we have added them on, one by one, until we have the rambling structure you see now."

Mrs. Farrar Rites To Be Held Today

Funeral services will be held in the Great Choir of the Washington Cathedral at 11 a. m. today for Mrs. Frances Scherger Farrar, wife of Ross Farrar, accountant with the Interstate Commerce Commission. Bishop James E. Freeman will officiate. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Farrar died Thursday at her home, 14 Elm avenue, Takoma Park, Md., after a long illness. Widely known in Washington music circles, she had been soloist at the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church and at the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant. She was an active member of the Rubenstein Club. A native of Washington, she was a graduate of Central High School. She moved to Takoma Park in 1911.

Besides her husband, she leaves two young daughters, Elizabeth and Frances; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Scherger; a sister, Miss Bernadine Scherger; and a brother, Oscar Scherger. All live in Takoma Park.

Allen to Consider Beverage Proposals

Proposals of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board hereafter will go before the Board of Commissioners through Commissioner George E. Allen, it was decided yesterday.

Until now Beverage Board matters have gone to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen as president of the Board of Commissioners. The change was made because Commissioner Allen had been active in the drafting and enactment of the District liquor law, it was said.

Revocation by the Beverage Board of the class B retailer's license—off-sale beer and light wines—of Isadore L. Budman, at 619 Sixteenth street northeast, was approved by the Commissioners. Budman had been charged with selling on Sunday and with permitting a minor to make a sale.

every day he went to see Zimmerman.

"I'm sick of bread and cheese," he told Zimmerman.

"Why don't you apply for an old-age pension?" the clerk inquired.

So Smale did. Whether he had received encouragement no one knew. There was nothing in that bare room to indicate such fortune.

But Thursday Smale went into the grocery store grinning. "I'm tired of bread and cheese," he announced. "I think I'll have a feast."

He bought the sausages and the meat and the fresh things police found in his room, and laid his coins upon the counter.

Then he shuffled out and up Indiana avenue to the room which was to be a banquet hall. No one saw him alive again.

J. E. Lewis Rites To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Jonathan Edward Lewis, who died Thursday, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon in his home at Prospect street and County road, Kensington, Md. The Rev. Fred A. Kullmar, pastor of the Warner Memorial Presbyterian Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Lewis was born in 1856 in Loudoun County, Va. He was the son of Jonathan E. and Henrietta Lewis.

Until 15 years ago he was employed in the Library of Congress, and upon his retirement moved to Kensington. He was unmarried. He was hurt in a fall this winter which was a factor in his death.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Evelyn Scott, violinist; Marjorie Davis, pianist; Flora McGill Keefer, mezzo-contralto; Dorothy Radde Emery, accompanist, and The Opera Club Singers. Program: Violin concerto in G minor (Bruch), "Stornellatrice," "In alta mare" (Respighi), "Schneeglöeckchen" (Schumann), "Plainte d'Oriane" (Coquard), "The American's Creed" (Kelley), "Catalina," "Music When Soft Voices Die," "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" (Mary Howe).

With the Bruch concerto Evelyn Scott dealt very creditably, for this is a virtuosic work which the musician by avocation must approach with some hesitancy. Her tone was firm and her attack confident, and while there were a few discrepancies of intonation in figured passages, her technique was adequate for the task. Best of all, her reading was musicianly in phrasing and poetic in feeling.

If one puts aside "The American's Creed" as being more political than musical, the songs which Mrs. Keefer presented were fine examples of lyric craftsmanship. One enjoyed particularly the two by Ottorino Respighi, who writes for the voice with a true Italianate instinct and with an originality that is piquant without being obtrusive. Mrs. Keefer sang her group with artistry, and with a tone admirable for its clarity, rondure, warmth and firmness.

Good training was evident in the work of her Opera Club Singers, represented on this occasion by Norma Simonson, Catharine Warren, Betty Galbraith, Ione Hoffman, Velma Barnett, Fred Denniston, Philip Charles, and Dolph Atherton. Their singing had spontaneity and a pleasantly blended quality.

Mrs. Howe's part-songs, expertly written from the technical aspect, were delightful for their melodic and harmonic virtues. Her arrangement of the time-honored "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes" is the best that I have heard; the harmony is subtlely treated, and the counter-themes have a real Elizabethan flavor.

Local donations, officials said, are certain to exceed $32,000 and may reach $40,000 or $50,000. In addition to cash, numerous contributions of clothes have been made to the Salvation Army for Red Cross distribution in devastated areas.

Judge Fines Friend; Offers to Lend $10

Judge John P. McMahon, fined William E. Reed of 1331 G street northwest, his life-long friend, $10 for speeding, in Traffic Court yesterday.

"Hello, Bill," Judge McMahon greeted his friend as he stood before the bench awaiting Policeman H. D. Johnson, who was testifying.

Johnson said Reed was speeding 36 miles an hour on Georgia avenue early yesterday.

"Guilty, or not guilty?" McMahon asked in an apologetic tone.

"Guilty," was his friend's brief reply, as a smile wreathed his face.

"This is an unpleasant task, but I must fine you $10. There is nothing else I can do as a judge, but I can lend you the $10."

Reed paid his own fine.

Man Is Ordered Held for Jury In Crash Death

Policemen Tells of Chasing Smithwick, Allegedly Drunk, in Taxi.

Fred B. Smithwick, 23, of 204 Eleventh street southeast, was ordered held for action of the grand jury in the death of Miss Edith Scott, 47, 1348 Kenyon street northwest, by a coroner's jury yesterday.

Miss Scott, a passenger in an automobile driven by Charles S. Grange, 46, 4906 Fourth street northwest, was fatally injured March 18, when Smithwick's car, being pursued by police, crashed into Grange's auto, hurling the vehicle 64 feet onto a lawn, in the 400 block of L street southeast. She died at Providence Hospital on March 25.

Policeman J. I. Shotzberger, of the Fifth Precinct, testified he commandeered a taxicab to chase Smithwick on the complaint of another motorist that Smithwick had twice attempted to run him into the curb.

After the collision police said Smithwick attempted to escape on foot, but was captured by several Navy Yard employes. He was booked at the Fifth Precinct for driving while drunk and leaving the scene after colliding. Frank Clements, of the 1000 block of Virginia avenue, a passenger in the car, was booked for intoxication.

On the stand Clements readily admitted being drunk. So much so, he said, that he didn't know anything of the chase until the two cars collided.

"I was asleep on the back seat," he said, "and the impact of the two cars awakened me." Witnesses testified they saw only one person in the car during the chase and that if Clements were in the automobile he must have been lying on the seat.

Wheeler Avers He Asked Steel Men to Appear

Senate Committee Head Desired Their Views on Base Point Charge.

By the Associated Press.

Complaining that the previous "invitations" to testify on the basing point price system had been declined by the presidents of two big steel companies, Chairman Burton K. Wheeler, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, said yesterday he had "explicitly" asked their appearance.

W. A. Irvin, of the United States Steel Corp., and Eugene R. Grace, of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., said Wheeler previously had told him it was "inconvenient" for them to come here before the committee.

The committee is conducting a hearing to prohibit the practice of establishing prices by adding to the production cost of a commodity the transportation charges from factory to a given base point, regardless of the point of destination of the goods.

Testimony given by Robert Gregg, vice president of United States Steel, and Paul Mackall, vice president of Bethlehem, was "not indicative of a helpful, co-operative attitude." He said a previous witness was Walter Tower, executive secretary of the American Iron & Steel Institute, and added:

"Questions propounded to him by members of this committee were met with equivocations and evasions."

At yesterday's hearing session, Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, of Harvard, once a financial adviser to the Administration, said he did "not think that as a measure of recovery abrogation of the basing point system would accomplish much."

Enactment would "upset" industry, particularly those units set up in contemplation that the system would continue, Sprague contended.

There was, he said, "much force to argument of steel men that passage of the bill would foster monopoly."

Onions for Hugh? No! Cries Secretary

By the Associated Press.

Frances Robinson says she cooks "almost everything" for Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, in their office here—"but no onions."

That was her reply to reports that Democratic National Committee stenographers quartered in the same building had complained about "Robbie's" cooking onions for the General during working hours.

"It's ridiculous," Johnson's secretary told reporters. "In the first place we haven't been in Washington for more than a few days in the last several months. In the second place, I never cook onions because they don't agree with me."

Miss Robinson said that Johnson frequently invited guests to the informal luncheons she prepared. Among the recent guests, she said, was Charles Michelson, publicity chief for the Democratic committee. Some of Johnson's friends said they frequently had a steak in the general's office, but without onions.

3 Held in 2 Raids On Pin Ball Game

Members of the police vice squad raided two establishments, arrested three men and confiscated four "pin ball machines" yesterday after Assistant United States Attorney Karl Kindleberger ruled their use was an infraction of the gambling laws.

The new type machines automatically dispense tickets redeemable for merchandise if a high score is obtained.

In a restaurant at number 11 Fourteenth street northeast, the squad, led by Lieut. George M. Little, arrested James B. Bland, 46, Suitland, Md., the proprietor, and Cecil R. Burner, 26, 6331 Harlan place northwest, salesman, for the machine company. Both men were charged with permitting gaming and released under $500 bond. One machine was confiscated.

The Playland Amusement Co., 610 Ninth street northwest, was hit next. Carl H. Barlow, 42, who gave the Playland as his address, was charged with permitting gaming and three machines were confiscated. Barlow also was released on $500 bond.

When President Andrew Jackson indorsed that statement by replacing Government office holders with his own henchmen, he set a precedent that has been generally observed for almost a century of American politics.

Today Jackson's credo finds many supporters. "How," they reason, "can a party system of government survive if party workers are not rewarded?"

In 1881 the assassination of President Garfield by a disappointed office-seeker led to the establishment of the civil service system for the selection of Government office holders, irrespective of party affiliation. But this system, too, has disadvantages, according to some observers, because of difficulty in ousting incompetents.

Because of recently revived discussion concerning the two systems, we believe you'll be interested to know how American citizens feel today about these methods of selecting persons to fill Federal jobs.

Negro Is Seized Here in Attack On School Girl

Police, Fearing Lynching, Refuse to Return Him to Silver Spring.

A Negro answering the description of the man sought by Maryland authorities for an attempted assault on an 11-year-old Silver Spring schoolgirl, was taken into custody last night by Washington police.

Maryland police came here to take the Negro to Montgomery County, but Captial police refused to permit them to do so until the girl had identified him. It was said that the Washington police feared the man would be lynched if he was taken to Silver Spring because of the high feeling there.

Earlier in the day a heavily armed posse of police, volunteer firemen and citizens searched the Montgomery County countryside around Silver Spring for the man.

The possemen carried automatics, rifles and shot guns, and some of them penetrated the wooded sections on horseback, ready to track down the man, an excellent description of whom has been given them by authorities.

Child on Way to School.

Victim of the attack was a student at the Parkside School, in an isolated section of Silver Spring. She was on her way to classes at the time.

Her mother had taken the child, daughter of a Government employe, to the intersection of the Colesville road and Sligo Parkway, less than a quarter of a mile from the school.

When the child kissed her mother good-by and got out of the family car, she stopped to waye as it vanished up the road, and then turned, books under her arm, to walk to school.

As she trudged up a long flight of stairs that leads through a park to the school grounds, the assailant, evidently hiding behind some bushes, grabbed her.

His hands closed around her throat to prevent an outcry, and he struck her, blacking her eye. When the frightened child kicked him, he released his grip, and fled.

Girl Spreads Alarm.

Breathless, the girl rushed to the school and told what had happened.

She described the man as about 25 years old, of medium height and dressed in a long, dark brown overcoat. He wore, she said, a brown suit and hat.

The Parkside School is surrounded by woods. Numerous civic groups opposed this site for the school at the time the property was purchased by the county on the grounds that it was too isolated for safety.

Hauptmann

County prosecutor, replied sharply with this question:

"Why is the Governor now so concerned about a reprieve when he disregarded the law in granting the first?"

Attorney General Wilentz, chief prosecutor of the convicted killer of the Lindbergh baby, who did not oppose the first reprieve, said he would disclose his attitude toward a new reprieve tomorrow morning.

Meanwhile, C. Lloyd Fisher, chief defense attorney, said he had sufficient evidence to ask for a new trial if the Court of Pardons should reject Hauptmann's new plea for clemency now before it.

He did not disclose the nature of the evidence.

Hauptmann himself, visited in his death cell by Col. Mark O. Kimberling, prison warden, and the prisoner's wife, Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, was quoted as saying he was more confident than ever that "something will happen" to prevent his execution at 8 p. m. Tuesday.

The pardon court, if convened by the Governor, is expected to meet Monday. Attorney General Wilentz conferred with some members of the court today, and it was understood the question of a date was discussed. The court turned down Hauptmann's first appeal.

In his statement today, the Governor defended his January 16 reprieve, pointing out he was "exercising a right that had previously been exercised by many governors, including those of the prosecutor's own political (Democratic) party."

Would Exercise Right.

"I stated that there would be no further reprieve unless the attorney general might agree with me that such a reprieve would be necessary," the Governor said. "I stated at that time that I did not consider that I had the legal right to grant a reprieve that would extend beyond a period of 90 days after December 13 when the warrant of execution was signed by Justice Trenchard.

"If the brilliant Mr. Hauck and his legal advisers will advise me that I do have that right, I shall be glad to exercise it, because I am more firmly convinced than ever that Hauptmann was not given a trial in line with what we consider to be American standards of justice, and that the whole case reeks with unfairness, passion and prejudice."

The Governor directed some of his criticism of Hauptmann's prosecutors to the conduct of the trial of John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk, Va., shipbuilder, who confessed he hoaxed State police and Col. Lindbergh when he said he had been in contact with the "kidnap gang."

"Mr. Hauck is the young man who told the Hunterdon County jury that he was going to prove that John Hughes Curtis actually had contact with the 'gang' that kidnaped the Lindbergh baby," the Governor said. "He proved it, and then he later participated in the trial which 'proved' that Bruno Richard Hauptmann committed this crime single-handed.

"Mr. Hauck was so confused and so incompetent that the latter trial, although conducted in Hunterdon County, was taken out of his hands and conducted by the attorney general, for whom he was permitted to act only as an errand boy."

Hauck, replying to this today, said:

"If it is true that the Governor has designated me as the errand boy the attorney general, and if it is true that I am his errand boy, I would rather be the errand boy of the attorney general than of a convicted murderer."

Of the Governor's intervention in the Hauptmann case, he said:

"No man ever became successful politically over the murder of a baby and I feel the Governor's motives are purely political. If the Governor has any proof of unfairness, passion or prejudice, or of any point in the case that was framed, or that Bruno Richard Hauptmann is innocent, or that others are involved, he has never given such information to the attorney general or to myself as prosecutor of the pleas. We would welcome such information."

Arch W. Loney, PWA engineer at Washington, who asked Wientz to agree to a new stay of execution, said today he believed the Governor would let Hauptmann go to the chair.

Accompanied Governor.

Loney, a wood expert, accompanied the Governor yesterday on Hoffman's inspection of the attic of Hauptmann's home, and an examination of the nail holes in rail 16 of the kidnap ladder, and in the attic joists from which, the State claims, the board was taken.

In a report to the Governor he said he did not believe the board was part of the attic flooring.

Mrs. Anna Hauptmann visited her husband for the third time this week, and found him cheerful.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Arch W. Loney, middle-aged Government worker and prominent figure in the latest efforts to aid Bruno Richard Hauptmann, said last night he expected to be called back to New York and New Jersey by Gov. Harold Hoffman.

Loney said that "certain discrepancies" in testimony about the ladder linked with the Lindbergh baby kidnap-murder "should be cleared up" and that was why he "suggested" Thursday to Attorney General Wilentz of New Jersey that the Hauptmann execution—now set for Tuesday—should be delayed.

Loney, who said he was a "materials expert" in the Interior Department, declared his investigations in the Bronx home where Hauptmann lived had "convinced him" that there were serious doubts that a missing piece of attic floorboard was part of the kidnap ladder. This was claimed by the prosecution at the kidnap trial.

Top ranking Federal officials avoided any direct opinion in the case.

Joseph B. Keenan, chief assistant to Attorney General Cummings and in charge of Justice Department agents, said "the case is a matter solely for the authorities of New Jersey to deal with."

'Insulted.'

ALVAN T. SIMONDS, Boston manufacturer, who with his wife was escorted from the Hamburg American liner Reliance by a police guard at Manila.

Critic of Nazis, Wife Guarded; Attack Feared

Couple, Touring World in German Ship, Takes Refuge in Manila.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, March 27.—Police guarded Alvan T. Simonds, Boston manufacturer, and his wife in a Manila hotel tonight after they expressed fears of being attacked because Simonds had criticised the Nazi government in an interview.

The Simondses, passengers on the world cruising German liner Reliance, had a police guard of four men as they moved from the ship to hotel quarters. Two officers remained with them.

Simonds reported German passengers "openly insulted" his wife and some of them "even went so far as to spit on her."

He said "conditions became so bad" aboard the Reliance after he granted the interview in Singapore that "we remained in our cabin about five days, eating only canned food."

The manufacturer said one of his German friends who openly sympathized with him was beaten.

"I feared they would attack us," Simonds continued, "and wirelessed a friend in Manila to meet us with an armed guard."

Commodore Fritz Kruse, of the Hamburg America Line, aboard the Reliance, told Simonds he thought the protesting couple had "exaggerated conditions."

The manufacturer said, however, he and Mrs. Simonds would leave the ship here. He intended to protest to High Commissioner Frank Murphy.

"In the interview," Simonds related, "I said I didn't think anybody should agree with Germany on anything because she regards agreements as scraps of paper. I did not realize this would cause the German passengers to turn against us."

Simonds said officers and members of the ship's crew treated them "fine." The officers admitted there had been feeling between the Boston couple and German passengers, but denied anyone had spat upon Mrs. Simonds.

Jury Legality Ruling Delayed By D. C. Court

Attorney Says Presence of U. S. Worker in Panel Voids Cases.

A ruling that may result in the release of hundreds of prisoners from the District Jail, or that may seal their fate insofar as appeal from conviction is concerned, was being held in abeyance by Justice Peyton Gordon in the District Supreme Court last night.

Justice Gordon was called upon to pass on the question of whether a prisoner who had not objected to the presence of a Federal employe on the jury trying him, or the grand jury which returned the indictment, could at this time object to an allegedly illegal indictment or an invalid conviction.

The question was presented after the United States Court of Appeals held that the presence of Government employes on criminal court juries was prejudicial to the defendants. From that it was inferred, according to Attorney H. O. Pollard, representing Raymond Hawkins, who was recently convicted of conspiring to violate the liquor laws, that all persons convicted by juries that had on their rolls Government employes were illegally impanelled.

The appellate ruling was made in a case involving a petit larceny charge. The court held that persons so charged should be given the benefit of an impartial jury, and in an extended opinion pointed out that in many instances the presence of Federal employes on uries would, or might, be prejudicial to the defendant.

In the case yesterday, which Justice Gordon held under advisement, the entire question of whether all persons convicted in the last several months, or those who pleaded guilty under allegedly invalid indictments, were entitled to their freedom because of the presence of Federal employes on the juries, whether the question was raised at the trial or not. Defense attorneys contend such trials were void from the beginning, while Assistant United States Attorney H. L. Schweinhaut said they were void only when questioned.

A Fiscal Survey, Too.

For Washington as a community the most significant aspect of this week's public meeting on local health conditions was the evident determination of civic leaders to carry on the fight until the present disgraceful situation is corrected.

Every member of this group is interested in the restoration of items slashed from the 1937 District budget. But that is only a first step. Acceptance of the resolution calling for a survey by the United States Public Health Service, before consideration of the 1938 budget begins, clearly indicates the permanent nature of the movement to bring about more responsive municipal government in the District.

Presumably the President will order the requested survey as a means of assembling all the facts which Congress should have in making health appropriations. Mr. Roosevelt is properly interested in Washington's very serious health problem. When a few recalcitrants in the House attempt to perpetuate a situation that is not merely humiliating, but definitely menacing for Washingtonians, the President acquires a responsibility to bring the facts to light.

For a deeper reason, however, Dr. Willson's suggestion should be enthusiastically indorsed by the community. It offers a precedent for an even more fundamental study—that of the fiscal relationship between the District and the Federal Government. The neglect of public health, like most of Washington's other acute problems, stems from the failure of Congress, year after year, to work out a rational formula of financing the clearly national expenses of the Capital City. In the absence of such a formula there is always good publicity back home for Congressmen who seek to cut Washington's budget as a means of reducing the "lump-sum contribution" from the Treasury. It is an easy way to establish an "economy" record with constituents.

The time for an adequate survey of this difficult fiscal relationship is overdue. The President showed some interest in the subject a year ago by asking the Treasury to investigate comparative tax burdens in the District and other cities. While that is not the real issue, the Treasury experts found that "the great variations in the amounts and relative proportions of the Federal contributions, and, more particularly, their declining trends in recent years, have constituted an unceasing source of controversy." And they pointed out that such controversies could be minimized by Federal contributions "regularly determined on the basis of announced principle." To that end the Treasury recommended "a more extensive investigation, conducted with the assistance of experts within and outside of the Federal Government."

A fair study of this sort, accepted as a basis for the division of expenses of maintaining the National Capital, would relieve Congressmen of all obligation to vote what they misrepresent as a subsidy to Washington. For the Federal contribution would then be automatically determined each year. The Commissioners could formulate their budget with assurance that no local funds would have to be spent for national purposes. As a result, the local government could give the community the best municipal service for which it would be willing to pay.

Congressman Blanton charged on the floor of the House Wednesday that the Washington newspapers are "trying to make Congress appropriate $8,500,000 out of the public Treasury as a contribution to the local civic expenses of Washington people, so as to reduce the taxes of Washington people to the amount of $8,500,000."

So far as The Post is concerned, that statement is not true. This newspaper does not want the Treasury to contribute one penny to the "local civic expenses" of Washington. The Post has consistently taken the position that Federal funds should be provided to cover only those expenses necessarily incurred by reason of the location of the seat of Federal Government in this city.

Moreover, we have urged again and again that the basis for this reasonable division of expenses should be worked out by experts representing the Federal and local governments, along the lines recommended by the Treasury itself.

The Chief Source Of Jobs.

Industry cannot be coerced into absorbing unemployed labor. Rather it should be encouraged to provide work by the removal of existing obstacles to further expansion. That is the essence of various suggestions offered by the National Association of Manufacturers in a statement intended to afford a basis for study and discussion of employment problems.

The manufacturers, it is pointed out, are now carrying on their pay rolls about 2,000,000 fewer persons than the maximum number recorded in 1929. With from 9,000,000 to 10,000,000 unemployed, it is obvious that industry cannot provide work for the entire army of jobless. Yet the opposite impression is conveyed by the alternate scoldings and appeals which President Roosevelt is accustomed to direct at business men.

The question is not what industry ought to do but what it can do under given conditions. The N. A. M. states the case succinctly in saying that "neither an individual nor a business can employ at continuing loss nor unduly increase operating cost without jeopardizing through bankruptcy the employment of those now employed."

In other words, only a prosperous industry can sustain a permanent increase in employment. For a time jobs may be created by spreading work, and men can be kept on at a loss, if the employing concern has surpluses out of which to pay wages. But such reserves are soon exhausted if used to cover deficits resulting from employment of surplus labor.

An increase in employment, therefore, has to be sought through profitable utilization of investment resources—"stored up expansion." The manufacturers' association makes some constructive recommendations as to the way in which these "forces of recovery" could be "unleashed." First, it suggests that we ought to have accurate knowledge of the extent and character of unemployment. That is indubitably true. However, the United States Employment Service is steadily being built up to supply pertinent information as to the number of employable persons seeking work and unable to find it. A comprehensive census, such as the manufacturers apparently desire, would not serve the purpose, since it would be inaccurate to begin with and outdated before completion.

We already know that the durable goods and construction industries are the "chief pools of unemployment." Furthermore, there is no doubt that conditions are unfavorable to long-term investment operations needed to stimulate these industries. If they are to do their part in absorbing the unemployed, investment confidence must be strengthened by modifying policies that arouse anxiety. Thus, expansion of private enterprise would be aided, if governmental extravagance were curtailed and Government competition with private industry held in check. It is significant that a report just issued by George L. Berry, Co-ordinator of Industrial Co-operation, stresses this fact.

After its clear and able summarization of the general principles that should govern a rational approach to the unemployment problem, it is disappointing that the N. A. M. concludes with a bold assertion that the "importation of foreign goods affect injuriously American employment." Since the prosperity of our exporting industries depends upon our willingness to import, this assumption is clearly unfounded. Industrial prosperity must be widespread and well-balanced to provide adequate employment outlets. It cannot be limited to a few highly protected industries at the expense of other producing groups.

Two Anniversaries.

Two newspapers, one of 140 full-size pages and the other merely a single folded sheet, have arrived in this office. The first is a special edition of The State, of Columbia, S. C., commemorating the sesquicentennial of that charming Southern city. The second, dated March 25, 1836, is a reproduction of the first issue of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, distributed as an anniversary souvenir by the Philadelphia Inquirer, with which the Ledger is now merged. Both are valuable as reminders of the depth to which this Nation's roots reach down.

An interesting sidelight on the Southern paper is the fact that its editor, William E. Gonzales, was a Columbia newspaperman half a century ago, when the city celebrated its hundredth birthday. As he notes in his foreword to the special edition, Columbia was then a bedraggled town. Memories of the orgies of Reconstruction and the destruction of the Civil War still hung over it. But today as The State's admirable effort amply demonstrates, Columbia has more than found itself again.

As for the facsimile of the first Public Ledger, it too testifies to a growth, though more especially in the field of journalism. The editors devoted several paragraphs of their introductory announcement to the fact that "their cheap engine of instruction" was the first example of the "penny press" to enter Philadelphia.

The happy results of this new policy of making news available to the humblest citizen are seen in the tremendous support given by the public today to its successors, both lineal and otherwise. But however much circulation methods may have developed since a hundred years ago, there seems a certain identity in some of the editorial opinion, as witness the following from Volume 1, No. 1, of the Ledger:

> The Congressional news up to this date possesses not the slightest interest. Congress seems determined to fritter away its time, instead of rendering it profitable to the Nation.

The Records Of NRA

On April 1 the last vestiges of the clumsy organization created to administer the National Industrial Recovery Act will be officially interred. However, the work begun by the NRA's Division of Review, established last June to study and analyze the experience of various industries under the codes, is to be continued by a successor organization, with the aid of WPA funds.

Under executive order of the President this work will be located in the Department of Commerce, but it will operate under the general supervision of a Committee of Industrial analysts, upon which the Secretaries of Commerce, Agriculture and Labor are to serve, together with other appointees. Former NRA employes, transferred to the Department of Commerce last December, are eligible for appointment to the new divisions but are not automatically entitled to it. Although all positions are to be filled without regard to civil service laws, it is presumably the intention to man the projected organization with NRA research assistants who are competent to complete the work begun by the Division of Review.

While utilization of work-relief funds for this purpose is disgracefully slipshod administration, the $100,000 to be devoted to a comprehensive report on the NRA, and to the consolidation and indexing of NRA files, may prove to be boondoggling of an unusually high order. Dr. L. C. Marshall, director of the Division of Review, points out that the materials assembled by the NRA "constitute the largest and richest single body of information concerning the problems and operations of industry ever assembled in any nation." Excepting strictly confidential matter, these valuable data ought to be made accessible to Government officials, business men and students.

The Division of Review has already completed the bulk of numerous special analytical studies and code histories, but the comprehensive summary and the indexing of the NRA files remains undone. As these files contain some 40,000,000 items, it is probable that the indexing alone would cost considerably more than the sum allocated by the President to the newly created division. But that is in line with this Administration's technique of starting projects with a careful camouflage of their ultimate cost.

Nevertheless it is clearly important to make important records intelligible and accessible to those who will eventually be called upon to grapple with problems of industrial organization which may not have been settled by the decision in the Schechter case. Trade practice agreements and labor policies applicable to entire industries, as distinct from individual employers, can only be made effective through co-operative action. Hence, though the NRA is dead beyond the possibility of resuscitation, substitute proposals for achieving some of its objectives are certain to be brought forward in the future.

If experience is to afford protection against a repetition of past errors, its teachings must be made available to lawmakers and leaders of public opinion. For that reason, it would be short sighted to object in principle to a work of documentation providing a historical record of what NRA accomplished, and what it failed to do.

Pepys And Peeps.

Over a painfully protracted period everyone from World War generals to celebrated chefs has been writing his or her autobiography. There is no fear that our contemporaries will ever be known as the lost generation, for every phase of their private lives has been rather too carefully preserved for posterity. Just why we think we are so interesting is something of a riddle. It becomes the more unanswerable as a small army of ghost writers labors overtime to catalogue and display the psychoses of their employers.

Perhaps the worst weakness of all these memoirs is that they are so obviously written to impress the reader rather than to amuse the writer. The Pepysian flavor is foregone in favor of high-pressure press agent ballyhoo. There is nothing of the provocative peephole about them. Volume after volume is as disappointing and tiresome as an undraped view of the veiled ladies who promise so much on sideshow tent flaps.

At last, however, the more subtle diarysists are getting back to the well-tested upbetimes technique. They are rediscovering the delight of a four-walled horizon. Self-revelation will be really revealing when writing is done with an eye on the mirror rather than out the window.

Rose Macaulay recently recorded, as a matter of personal pleasure: "I have shoes with high heels." G. B. Stern, not to be outdone, states in her new autobiography: "A beige moth dies outspread on my beige canvas hat." Public-be-damned tidbits, but they are remarkably palatable after the heavy diet of date-and-deed diaries. This, indeed, is the sort of fare that causes literary gourmets to feel that they do "sup mighty well."

"A Chicago jeweler proposes that a badge be given a person when he pays his taxes."—Press report. Badge—or barrel?

The reason the depression is so deep is because of the big bluffs which preceded it.

On "Conditioning" Children.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A regular apparition on the woman's page of The Post nowadays is the article advising mothers to pay less attention to their children. The idea is to "condition" your child from birth to do without you. I regard advice of this sort as distinctly harmful.

The danger is, and it is a very real one, that a mother cutting herself off from her little ones in the manner indicated would not turn them anyhow eventually into self-reliant, self-determining but thoroughly wholesome human beings, which, of course, is the idea. For she would have to leave them to servants, or to schools, or to both.

When you turn a little child over to someone who isn't his own mother or father, in a place that isn't his own home, you have done something serious to him. The greatest need of children is the feeling of security. Security in their parent's love and possession. Destroy this feeling of being in a world that belongs to them, whose atmosphere is affection for them—no matter how stormy it gets at times—and you risk an adolescent who has completely cut himself off from outside hurts through a defensive mechanism which may take the form either of unusual reserve or inexplicable and constant rebellion. You have desocialized a personality.

The point I am trying to make is that it doesn't do to counsel mothers to desert their ships for a moment. A ship is a full job. There are plenty of things going on all the time in a properly organized home to keep the mother's attention from being unwholesomely fixed on the child, or the child's on the mother, without recommending enforced separations.

As for another sentence in that article, to wit: "Many mothers like to feel that when the children come home from school mother is always in the house to greet them." I can only add that so do the children and, risking a slang reply, "so does your old man," their father. Such need of her is a true mother's Congressional medal.

The Townsend Fallacy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial in The Post of March 26 under the heading "The Townsend Bubble Bursts" and the cartoon by Elderman on the same page entitled "Back to Earth" renders a great public service. Both by word and picture you clearly show the fallacy of a pension movement by an organized minority. It is human nature to seek something for nothing, and if it is money to spend it as fast as it is received. To encourage any pension movement whose anticipation creates a spirit of laziness and indolence would produce a cancer that would sap the vitality of our economic life.

A system that encourages thrift and progressive accumulation of funds during the period of useful employment of the individual by the combined contribution of the worker, the employe and the Government should be inaugurated instead of an outright dole camouflaged by a pleasant sounding name.

A properly devised system would not only act as a pension for old age but would also be in the nature of an unemployment insurance. It would encourage the individual to work more willingly and efficiently because he could anticipate a just reward for his labors.

Constitution As Goat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I do not believe that any American giving earnest thought to the details surrounding the discovery and peopling of this continent, (giving mind to the fact that the very essence of its foundation was that man might have a place to worship with a free conscience) will doubt that this Nation in which we live today had a Divine inception. That its very birth was founded on prayer is a matter of history. That a miracle was performed when 13 little colonies overthrew the power of Britain is also indisputable. What followed?

A new and peculiar type of government was born. A rule of governing was drawn up such as had never been heard of before, nor has there been another since. From this "code" grew the greatest nation on earth, barring none. And while we remember that a nation is the product of its law, let us also remember that this Constitution was not drawn up without prayer.

This is not written to attempt to prove the infallibility of the Constitution, for it is man-made, but to bring to the minds of those who, because this "code" crosses their own selfish purposes, want to put it aside, this one thought. Under the guidance of this rule of law, our Nation has made the most remarkable progress ever known in this world, especially from a humanitarian standpoint, and now thae some phases of our national life seem hopelessly tangled and uncertain, don't let's pick a goat and say, "It's all the fault of the Constitution." The truth of the matter is that some in our country have become so self-centered that no code will guide them.

Let's not be rash about the Supreme Court, either, but think of the reasons behind the desire to curb its power.

Ours Isn't The Life Of Reilly.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When you say the Italian worker "can either keep his mouth shut, or go to fill one of the vacancies in Ethiopia," isn't that just what the Editor of The Washington Post may do if he doesn't like what Mussolini is doing? (Of course you mean may instead of can in your choice English editorial.)

It's nice of you to be so concerned about poor Italian workers—you don't seem to be quite so bothered about our own poor down-and-outers. Tomorrow we shall have another effusion, I suppose, about your dear former Prince of Wales' visit to the slums, etc. Try minding your own business for awhile and set if it affects the sale of your second-rate paper.

Hoover Wanted.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: In the present flood disaster, the thought of one and all turns naturally to the man who, above all others, has dedicated himself to service to fellow-beings in distress, namely, Herbert Hoover. President Roosevelt knows full well, from past records, that there is not another person in the country so well qualified to administer relief work.

Let us hope that, for the sake of the sufferers, he will put Mr. Hoover in charge, thus at the same time doing himself a good turn by seizing this opportunity to refute the unsavory, all-too-frequent accusation that the White House is "much too politically minded for the welfare of the Nation."

Comments On Section 213.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am shocked by the sloppiness of the thinking of those who argue for and against section 213, forbidding husbands and wives in the same family to hold Government jobs.

All writers take it for granted that a Government position is a form of special privilege, that the Government is not an employer on equal terms with a private firm or corporation. This is a dangerous premise and is at the root of much of the extravagance and irresponsibility found among Government employes and Government departments. Civil Service, for all the advantages it confers, fosters this attitude. "You can't fire me."

Further, no writer on either side faces the basic principle behind the law—the assumption that a person can be denied a job if he or she belongs to a family that has a source of income. Carried to its logical conclusion, this would automatically debar from service anyone with an independent source of income—which would rule out the employment of a very large number of higher employes of the Government, from the President and members of the Cabinet down.

Section 213 as it stands is public proclamation that women are not people and are not included in the number who are protected by the Constitution.

C. A. O.
Lanham, Md., March 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are thousands of married women employed by the United States Government here in the District who keep willing, self-supporting people from having jobs. They get preference when promotions are made because friend husband is affiliated with the same organization or a personal friend of the supervisor and, as the combined salaries give them surplus friends, they are in a position to contribute to the interest promulgated.

Why should the public be taxed to support these husbands' wives, thus being taxed doubly?

Can anyone who faces the problem in its true light say that section 213 should not be enforced, and not only enforced but put in effect in the 'nth degree to help relieve the unemployment situation.

JOHNNY PUBLIC
Washington, March 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In yesterday's Post was a letter signed "Citizen" on the subject of section 213. From the tone of "Citizen's" letter I would judge that said "Citizen" is not a Government employe, as it is the general and entirely false impression of outsiders that all Government employes have "easy" jobs.

Section 213 is one of the most unfair laws ever passed by Congress. Does not "Citizen" realize that there are young married couples who wish to raise their standards, buy homes, plan for the future of their children and their own old age independence? Many young couples contribute to the support of their parents.

Imagine the feeling of one young recently married woman who must resign because her husband has a small-salaried Government position; when beside her is an older married woman who need not resign because her husband has a splendid position with a firm outside of the Government. Where is the fairness in that?

ONE OF THE MARRIED WOMEN.
Washington, March 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently there appeared in the columns of your paper a letter from the Government Workers' Council, requesting your support in helping to abolish section 213. This ban is one that very few can become enthusiastic over, since it is a policy that saves very little money for the Administration, accomplishes practically nothing, benefits no one, yet hurts drastically a few persons unfortunate enough to fall within its scope.

There are some who will say that Government employes are always squawking about something and are never satisfied, yet no one can deny that it is only through dissatisfaction with existing conditions that improvements ever arise in any group or organization.

A discrimination against certain groups or classes is an evil not lightly to be regarded, as it usually spreads rapidly from a small beginning. Once started a matter of this nature is difficult to stop, and there is virtually no limit to how far it can go. Unless bans of this nature are removed from the statute books, no employe will ever be able to feel that his or her position is secure and permanent, regardless of length of service or efficiency.

The Post Impressionist

Going Out Like A Lion.

Post Office, Saturday.

YOU may remember (at all events, we can't forget) that it was an ancient mariner—to be precise, Cap'n William Cabot Drake—who recently arrested our Column (yours as much as ours) and called us to account for saying, "It was two years ago that she started teaching Music-Appreciation" instead of just "Two years ago she started teaching Music-Appreciation." The outrage occurred early in this month, which optimistic William Morris called the "Slayer of Winter."

* * *

And you will remember (at all events, we hope Cap'n Drake will) that, by dawn of the 10th inst., we had furnished a pretty good accounting—through the evidence of 18 expert witnesses, including

Burke	Junius
Burns	Macaulay
Dana	Poe
Godkin	Shakespeare
Holmes	Tennyson

Well, we thought a dozen and a half—and such a dozen and a half!—names made quite a neat defense: Certainly, we haven't heard any come-back from the skipper. But Column-Reader Henry M. Ward felt that we might want to rally a few more conscripts—so he has been drafting them.

First of all, he finds the following "double" in the shamefully neglected works of Francis Bacon—referring rather to a philosopher of Rome than, as most contemporary American critics would assume, to a county in the well-known State of New York:

"It was a high speech of Seneca (after the manner of the Stoics) that 'the good things which belong to prosperity are to be wished, but the good things that belong to adversity are to be admired.'"

Concerning this sentiment, Mr. Ward says that it is "truly a comforting thought in the midst of 'the New Adversity.'" Concerning the English expression of the sentiment, we'll say that we welcome it to our distinguished company of "doubles," but that we should like to know what is felt about it by those purists who make such a poter over the word "that" as a demonstrative pronoun as opposed to the word "which."

However, Bacon of Verulam is going on:

"It is a yet higher speech of his (Seneca's) than the other, 'It is true greatness to have in one the frailty of a man and the security of a god.'"

* * *

Presumably, if you possess that double gift, you are King of the Romans and above Drakonian grammar!

* * *

"May I," asks Mr. Ward, "make an addition from Byron—and from memory?" Whereupon, probably having heard of our good nature—this helpful gentleman pauses not for reply, but straightway makes, not one, but two additions:

"'Tis not on youth's pale cheek the blush
Alone that fades so fast," and

"'Tis but as ivy leaves around

Nor does he forget a college classic, a predecessor of Dr. Eliot's five-foot bookshelf, and far more popular:

"'Twas off the blue Canary Isles
One glorious summer's day,
I sat upon the quarter-deck
And puffed my cares away . . ."

"Why," Mr. Ward recalls, "someone even said of the night of December 24th that

"'"Twas the night before Christmas.'"

As Mr. Ward, of course, knows perfectly well, 'twas Clement Clarke Moore—and not, as some maintain, Henry Livingston.

* * *

Mr. Ward expressed his "hearty concurrence" in our views as to the usage in question; but, says he—and we heartily concur with him—"there are times when 'it was' or ''twas' or 'if is' may better be omitted." F'r instance:

"It was no less than 87 years ago."

This, he well argues, "hardly sounds as well as 'Four score and seven years ago.'

"Luckily," he points out, "that speech was made in the 1650's. It was not 'by reason of strength' that the years were 'four score.' It just happened."

* * *

And then Mr. Ward winds up with a splendid example of the "double" from Rare Ben. As we have already intimated, we had thought our original list of witnesses was pretty formidable; but we now realize that no array of literary testimony would be quite crushing without Ben Jonson, plus one other.

* * *

So here is Ben:

"It was a mighty while ago."

* * *

Now all that we need to make our satisfaction with ourselves perfect, and our dissatisfaction with Skipper Drake complete, is a single instance from Herrick.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

In St. James's.

ST. JAMES'S PALACE is still a dull building, smudged with the soot of Welsh coal, and it looks less like a palace than the back end of a warehouse down by the railroad tracks in Indianapolis.

A sentry of one of the regiments of guards stands by his sentry box. He wears a scarlet jacket with white and gold trimmings, although he is only a buck private and he stands just so, with his head tilted back and his middle sucked up inside, as they say in the army. Even in repose he wouldn't have much belly, though, for if you disregard the splendor of the uniform and look at the soldier you notice that he is only a tall, limber, pink-faced kid of maybe 20 years.

Now and again some gadget trips a gear under the sentry's guilt buttons and he goes stiffly into action, shouldering his musket in so many counts. Then he stomps his heels on the concrete walk and sets off along his post, swinging his free arm in a certain way.

• • • •

THE Council of the League of Nations was having a meeting at St. James's Palace. Half a dozen London bobbies of enormous stature stood about the courtyard regulating traffic and herding back a small gathering of inquisitive civilians as the politicians of the Council rolled up in huge Daimler cars driven by very correct English chauffeurs, each car bearing on its windshield as a sort of passport a small white sticker with the letters "L. C." glaring forth in red. Beneath these initials were the words "League Council" in little letters.

It wasn't quite clear jus what the Council of the League of Nations had in mind for this occasion, because the British had taken over the negotiations with the Nazis and were running things, with only a polite bow to the other parties in the case. If the British can make a deal with the Germans which will show them a profit they will quit the French cold. If they can't they will help the French apply the necessary pressure in the name of God, humanity and democracy.

• • • •

THERE was a press entrance to St. James's Palace, and a gathering of about 150 journalists of many nations had assembled inside. They were sitting at little writing tables covered with blue felt or standing around the room dropping cigaret ashes and burnt matches on the royal scarlet carpet and discussing the deliberations of the League Council in terms of robust familiarity, like reporters hanging around the Governor's office in an American State Legislature waiting for the ways and means committee to sober up. Many of them were regular League of Nations men from the big house at Geneva, brought over because they know the statesmen by sight and know just how far each one may be trusted.

Mr. Titulescu, the gentleman from Rumania, went through with his frozen smile and ascended the scarlet stairs bowing this way and that to his familiars.

Reporters stood about whiling the afternoon away as their ashes whitened the carpet. A cigarete butt began to burn a hole, but nobody seemed inclined to stamp it out.

• • • •

IT WASN'T like this in St. James's Palace 20 years ago, but though the press has been strangled in Italy and Germany, it grows steadily more confident in the democratic countries. Even the German journalists seemed like men in these surroundings.

A few years ago when King George was sick in Buckingham Palace the men kept watch around the clock for weeks on end and finally discovered a household pub in the cellar where they could buy a few bowls of beer to while away an evening. They paid regular retail rates for their beer at His Majesty's little household pub and were able to report that George the Fifth ran a very decent, orderly little grogshop in the cellar of Buckingham Palace.

After a long time in St. James's Palace the Council of the League of Nations were unable to reach any conclusion and decided to adjourn. Close questioning failed to discover just what it was they were trying to reach a conclusion about.

The French Public

By Andre Vulliet.
Special Correspondent of the Post.

Paris.

FRENCH public opinion was galvanized into unity, or at least into a violent desire for unity, as a result of Mr. Hitler's remilitarization of the Rhineland. Yet the conflicting undercurrents of French opinion remain what they have always been. It seems difficult to reconcile them, except, of course, in case of war.

There are four distinct groups. Each one is strong enough to deserve attention. They are four, because they are the result of a double splitting. Both the Rightists, that is the nationalists, and the Leftists, that is the radicals, are split over the attitude that France should adopt in regard to Germany.

• • • •

THIS is a situation similar to what happens in America, when both Democrats and Republicans are split over some highly controversial matter as, even from as far away as Paris, is clearly apparent at the present time.

In France, 12 years ago, most nationalists were opposed to a rapprochement with Germany, and most liberals advocated it. Now that Germany speaks through Mr. Hitler at least half of the liberals and radicals of France will not have anything to do with their traditional enemy, while the rest of them remain faithful to pacifist creed of friendship between all peoples without exception, no matter how objectionable their leaders may be.

On the other side of the fence we observe a similar process, but in the opposite direction. Men of strong anti-Communist feeling, and men with Fascist leanings or sympathies are ready to abandon the rigid and unthinking anti-German attitude, which they stuck to during the early postwar years. They would talk to Hitler more readily than they would to a German democratic politician. In fact they almost like him.

Then, of course, there are the diehards. The amusing feature of it is that if a Frenchman talks with uncompromising hostility against Hitler, reciting all the reasons why France should never trust him, and still less accept his proffered friendship, that man may be a super-patriot of the old, sure brand; but he may as well be a militant Red, attacking the arch-enemy of his creed.

• • • •

AMONG Hitler's bitterest foes, those who are irreconcilable to him are first the communist leaders, with Marcel Cachin and their news organ, l'Humanite. Not so long ago they opposed military credits and tried to sabotage national defense. Now that, in view of the Franco-Russian pact, Stalin himself has given his okay to French armaments, the communists and their friends are probably the most ardent in France in their refusal to talk with Hitler under any circumstances. They regard him as International Enemy No. 1 and have no intention of changing their mind about it.

Now, except for this single point of resemblance, what is there in common between anti-Nazi radicals and anti-German nationalists? If it came to a vote as to whether France should listen to peace offers from the Fuehrer, the "no" from the one side would echo the "no" from the other.

Some of the super-patriots have lived through two wars, two invasions of France. They feel sure that Germany is preparing for further invasions. It may not be France's turn next time, and again, it may be. They do not trust England, nor Russia. The League of Nations looks no safer to them. It looks to much like a place crowded with foreigners. And you must not think that only old, bearded diehards react that way. This group also includes very young men who have seen no war at all and who, as a consequence, feel lightly about international feuds. They are sorry that the Allied troops ever evacuated the Rhineland. They say that the Armistice of 1918 came too soon. These are not many, but they exist. Gen. de Castelnau, a respected figure of the last war, is one of their leaders.

• • • •

THUS the extremes meet, in a common and uncompromising hostility toward the dictator of present-day Germany.

In the other camp, also, that is, among the promoters of better relations with Germany, we find the most heterogeneous gathering.

First, there are some near-Fascists, influenced by their admiration for the Hitler and Mussolini regimes, who wish a similar good fortune for France. They are not many, either, but they, too, exist. There is, again, an object of amusement in hearing them use the very same arguments that Briand, whom they hated, used ten years ago to promote Franco-German understanding.

And, of course, the picture could not be complete without those diehards of pacifism, so to speak, who extend their peaceful feeling to all the peoples in all the lands, and are still trying to reach the German people themselves, in spite of their Fuehrer. Romain Rolland, for instance, might have been their leader, but he, too, became a militant anti-Nazi and, after 20 years of advocating peace at any cost, he follows Stalin and now preaches resistance to Hitler.

• • • •

IF we sum up these various groups, strangely enough, it does not make enough of a total, to represent the whole of French opinion. How is that?

The reason is that millions of French people do not really belong to the Right or the Left, or else their allegiance to either is of a very mild nature. They really belong to some indefinite "Center," moderately nationalistic and moderately liberal, some of them moderately tempted by a few socialistic reforms and most of them immoderately prudent about any reform.

In regard to Germany, these people, who are strongly representative of average France, have not made up their minds yet. They have a great problem before them and the solution is not easy to find. They have no hatred whatsoever for the German people, and no respect whatsoever for Mr. Hitler, yet they know that the two are inseparable for the present.

Men like Henri Pichot, the leader of one of the largest ex-service men's associations, have views coincident with those of men like ex-Premier Pierre Laval. Big business leaders subscribe to popular opinions in this field and, what is more striking, some of the most influential military chiefs also belong to this moderate, watchful group. Their problem was expressed by the well-known writer Francois Mauriac when he wrote recently in the Figaro, ". . . either Germany must yield, or the League of Nations will perish; Germany should give up certain ambitions, yet she should suffer no humiliation and must not be thrown back into despair."

In the end, it is these moderate elements which will determine the attitude of France.

Golden Rule Topic Of Judge Greene

Guided by the principle of the Golden Rule, men today are concerned more with "giving" than with "getting," Judge Samuel W. Greene, of Chicago, declared in a lecture on Christian Science last night in Fourth Church of Christ, Scientist.

Business men of today are priding themselves on the slogan, "Giving" —"Serving"—"Doing unto others as you would be done by," the speaker told his audience.

"Many of the modern business luncheon clubs are emphasizing and exalting the thought of service, which is but the new-old Golden Rule of Jesus' enunciation."

Christian Science, he pointed out, rightly applied, enabled men to use the law of God continually and successfully in their daily affairs.

Judge Greene was introduced by Joseph W. Beattie, first reader of Fourth Church, which sponsored the lecture.

E. V. Kane, 46, Writer, Dies on Wedding Eve

Kane died just three days before he was to have married Miss Mary Lou Fisher, of Detroit.

Kane was graduated from Yale University. He was the son of the late John P. Kane, founder of the company bearing his name, which is now the General Builders Supply Corporation.

Military 'Sadism'

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Marcantonio Is Angry.

THE question whether the students of Penn State were playfully slapped by their fellow playmates because of their low scoring in the higher education of rifle practice, or were beaten with cartridge-studded military belts by orders of their major, may become a matter of Congressional inquiry. Representative Vito Marcantonio, of New York, said yesterday that on Monday morning he would rise in the House and demand that Congress, as well as the Army, look into what he termed "military sadism."

The mystery of the paddle line, Marcantonio told your correspondent yesterday, is to be exposed, and he intimated that he would press the matter so that there will be no whitewashing of it by military authorities. According to newspaper accounts yesterday, Maj. Arthur T. Bowen, of the Reserve Officers Training Corps, ordered the boys to be beaten for failing to hit the bull's-eye a sufficient number of times. The major is reported as having said the "paddling" was voluntarily administered by members of the corps, who looked with scorn upon the poor shots in the outfit. Vito Marcantonio says he is going to find out.

• • • •

THE Representative from Harlem is always sticking his chin out on matters like this, which do not seemingly concern his district. He has done it so often and so ferociously that Tom Blanton, the little man from Texas, has dubbed the youthful, black haired and dimunitive Congressman, "the leading Communist in the House." This Marcantonio vigorously denies.

"I am a Republican," he will tell you, adding, "and I'm proud of my party. It's a great party. Any party which will allow me and Ogden Mills equal membership, must be a great party."

Often you would not think Mr. Marcantonio is a Republican or even a Democrat. Coming as he does from a densely populated city area, where flowers never never bloom, and where breadlines exist, he is a passionate battler for the under dog. He is one of the outstanding defenders of the rights of the unemployed in Congress. Yesterday he fought against certain sections of the anti-lobby measure because, he said, it would require every unemployed person to register who might give a dime in an effort to get someone to go to Washington and petition Congress in his behalf. This, he shouted, was unfair.

IT is only natural that Marcantonio should be on the outs with many of his fellow Congressmen. He burns with a zeal for certain things he thinks are right and those who know him say even votes won't make him change his mind. They predict, some of them, that he will be defeated. A slim man with fiery eyes, he is, they say, a Cassius, "who thinks too much and does not sleep o' nights." Such men, as Shakespeare and Tammany alike know, are dangerous.

In doing so he is merely following his tradition. He was born in crowded lower Harlem and as a boy grew up in the same neighborhood where Norman Thomas was an active minister. The first time Marcantonio, a Catholic, ever saw trees was when the Presbyterian Thomas took him and other neighborhood boys on a church outing. He listened a lot to Thomas, but more, later, to Fiorello LaGuardia, who was known as the fiery Congressman before he became the Mayor of New York. He has spit now with LaGuardia because, as he says, the Little Flower went back on the unemployed and didn't back the parading jobless up when he and they were arrested for using the very picket line tactics which Marcantonio learned from none other than the Mayor himself.

One who has known him well tells me that Marcantonio has earned the wrongful title of Communist not because he likes communism more but because he likes fascism less. Once, in his Italian-crowded district, he was invited to speak at a Fascist meeting. Although those there had voted for him, he felt he could not honestly go. So he refused, and just to prove his point went to a restaurant across the street from the Fascist hall and sat there in the window so all might see he was not on the platform where his pet hatreds were being aired.

NOT long ago this young man, chided with being a very radical fellow for a Republican, said that he felt the Republican elephant should be changed in color from gray to at least pink. He was asked why.

"Well, if they don't liberalize themselves somehow they may find they have a white elephant on their hands," he is said to have answered.

Marcantonio spends every weekend in New York, to which he commutes by airplane. There he meets delegations of all sorts, mainly unemployed constituents. But on Thursday he opens his home here to his friends and stages spaghetti parties. The food is cooked by his wife, who is head of Harlem House, and well known as a social worker. Many of those who go like his spaghetti better than his ideas.

Above all else Marcantonio perhaps hates war the most. He doesn't think R. O. T. C.'s, etc., are nice things. And because they stand for, in his opinion, things with which he has no sympathy, he is going to fight for a thorough investigation of the goings on at Penn State, a college that gets some of its funds from the Federal Government and where military training is therefore compulsory. He's pretty mad about this episode, which he calls "military sadism," and when Vito Marcantonio gets mad, he also gets himself heard.

Voiding of Fine For Illegal Use Of Music Urged

Hotelmen Ask House Unit to Remove $250 Penalty in Copyright Laws.

By the Associated Press.

Hotel men appealed to the House Patents Committee yesterday for removal of the $250 minimum infringement penalty from copyright statutes covering the use of music for profit.

They were represented by Harry P. Summerville, managing director of the Willlard Hotel here, who appeared for the legislative committee of the Hotel Men's Association.

Sumerville said it was the view of 6,000 affiliated hotel men that if the penalty for using a copyrighted piece of music without license were removed, or at least reduced to $100, it would result in closer co-operation between composers and users of music.

"Don't you agree that it is the function of copyright laws to protect the property of music owners the same as other statutes protect hotel property," asked Representative Lanham (Democrat), Texas, acting chairman.

"Yes," Summerville replied, "but elimination of the fee would result in a better feeling between composers and users, and the latter would not be so reluctant to enter into contracts for the use of music if freed from the fear that oversights would be penalized."

He explained that hotels pay various license fees to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers for the use of music copyrighted by its members and to Warner Brothers for the use of music on which it holds copyrights.

"No hotel is going to jeopardize itself by conscious violation of the copyright laws, but so long as it is subject to penalty for inadvertently using the property of one organization when it believes it to be that of another, the hotel will hesitate to contract with either," he said.

Carnegie Institution Reveals Maya Find

Discovery of the "most remarkable collection of pottery thus far known in the Maya area," from recent excavations near Guatemala City, was announced yesterday by the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

The pottery, was found in two tombs. Cable advices received revealed that the second tomb contained many fine vessels, "some of which are covered with a stucco coating and decorated with paintings of the Maya gods."

Intra-Party Battles in Iowa To Determine November Vote

Question of Whether State Will Continue to Back News Deal or Return to Republican Fold Is Holding Pre-Convention Interest.

(Editor's note—This is the thirteenth of a series of Associated Press dispatches presenting an objective view of the State political situations as they fit into the national political scene.)

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, March 27.—Iowa political interest centers now on intra-party battles, preliminary to the national elections, which will determine whether the great "corn State" will return to the Republican fold or again cast its lot with the New Deal.

In the lull between the end of the State's bitterest winter in 117 years and the start of spring plowing and other farm work, political activity has received unusual attention. A Republican State convention exceeded expectations with its attendance and a Democratic meeting, scheduled for next week, is heralded as promising the "largest ever" attendance.

Political observers say the contests within the two major parties, for nominations at the June 2 primaries, are an indication of the intensity with which the national battle for the State's votes will be carried on next November.

Iowa's delegation to the Democratic National Convention will be selected here next week. If the example of the county conventions is followed, the delegation will be pledged for renomination of President Roosevelt. The county groups have unanimously affirmed loyalty to and support of the Administration.

The State's 22 delegates to the Republican National Convention are unpledged as to Presidential preferences, although Iowa's Republican Senator, Lester J. Dickinson, one of the New Deal's outspoken foemen, is a "favorite son candidate."

Dickinson did not attend the recent State convention, but observers who said they were supporters of Gov. Landon, of Kansas and Senator Borah, of Idaho, "sat in" on the sessions.

Dickinson is a candidate for renomination in the primaries, but has said he would not make an active campaign.

Dickinson's renomination, unopposed, was considered likely for a time because of the belief among his supporters that the party "owed" him loyalty for his consistent attacks on the Democratic Administration.

Mayor Ed Manning, of Ottumwa, shattered such hopes when he announced he was a candidate for the Senatorial nomination because the party and the people "demand new faces."

The Democrats have a contest of major rank in the Senatorial race. Gov. Clyde L. Herring, former auto salesman now completing his second term, and Representative Hubert Utterback, of Des Moines, both seek the party's favor as Senate aspirants.

House Passes Speeding Bill

school level," the report explained, "and increasing their course of study from two to three years it will provide opportunity for more extensive and more intensive trade training. It will also raise by at least a year the age at which pupils will be graduated, thereby somewhat increasing at least the possibilities of employment of qualified graduates."

Of broad significance is the bill to regulate the sales of goods in the District. Copied from the uniform sales law recommended by the Commission on Uniform Sales and by the American Bar Association, the measure is similar to laws in effect in 42 States.

There is no substantial statutory law regulating sales in the District. The bill defines the rights of vendor, vendee, and third persons in sales and related transactions. It does not cover conditional sales as that will be covered in subsequent legislation.

The fourth District bill merely amends in slight particulars the District unemployment insurance act. The most important of the amendments permits the issuance of stamps to employers for use in making small tax payments.

The Senate, like the House, passed a measure to authorize the acquisition by the Secretary of War of approximately 22 acres for addition to Walter Reed Hospital grounds over the opposition of the Budget Bureau. The bill now goes to the President and faces a possible veto.

Medical Center Land.

It carries an authorization of $204,162 to purchase land immediately south of the Army Medical Center. The addition is needed, according to War Department officials, for more facilities, especially quarters.

The Budget Bureau held it is now in accord with the financial program of the President.

Senator King blocked passage of the bill, passed by the House, to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to establish a model basin for aircraft and sea vessels in the vicinity of Washington with an authorized cost of $3,600,000. He said he objects to the expenditure of funds at this time.

It was explained that the measure is merely an authorization, and that the appropriation will appear in the naval supply bill, but King insisted that it go over.

A joint resolution authorizing the erection of a pedestal for the Albert Gallatin statue in Washington opposite the west entrance of the Treasury Department was adopted without debate. It carries an authorization of $10,000, which merely prepares the site and pedestal for a statue to be erected by a nongovernmental organization. Gallatin was Secretary of Treasury from 1801 to 1814.

Declared Falsification.

Shouse, in his radio talk, said that an implication in the Communications Commisison report that no telegrams were inspected except for the purpose of determining whether irregularities existed was a "definite falsification of the fact."

He charged that, while the commission said its employes copied only 65 telegrams, it forced the telegraph companies ot copy many thousands of messages and turn them over to the Black committee. He said description of telegrams asked for by the committee was so worded that it was impossible to obtain the messages without having access to all telegrams.

Shouse said that more than 22,000 telegrams sent and received in Washington during 10 months of last year were copied. He said thousands of messages turned over to the committee had no relation to the subject of the investigation. He called upon the commission to supply copies of the "alleged" subpenas issued by the Black committee.

"I am sorry there is not," O'Connor said.

Is Called Politics.

"That's a political amendment. It's just a thrust at the Administration, offered in a spirit of merriment," O'Connor said as the House shouted it down.

Representative Reed (Republican), New York, tried to amend the bill to prevent lobbying by Government officials and even to prevent them going to the Capitol without invitation.

"The inside lobby is the most dangerous of all," he said.

Smith asserted the measure would not prevent lobbying.

"The bill," he said, "will simply require that those who do so come forward and disclose whom they represent, who pays them and how much they are paid."

Termed Law Violation.

The Senate debate opened with an attack by Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, on a report of the Communications Commission on its activities in obtaining for the Black committee the contents of telegrams sent and received in Washington. He said the commission had authority to examine telegrams in the performance of its duties and that it had no authority to disclose the contents of these telegrams.

"The process of divulging the contents was in violation of law," he said. "This report may not be used to acquit anybody of anything."

Black replied that the report showed the telegrams had been obtained by subpena. He accused Steiwer of reading to the Senate only such portions of the report as he wanted the public to know about.

"If the Senator from Oregon desn't like the way this committee has acted, let him cite it before the Senate and make his accusation," Black shouted. "Let him join the issue, man to man."

Black charged that a "small group" wanted to prevent any more investigations "to expose corruption."

"They are trying to create a smoke screen to conceal the truth," he said.

Steiwer replied that "when we ask for light we get only heat."

"The Senator has permitted the argument to go entirely unanswered," he said.

Minton Apology Demanded.

New York, March 27 (AP).—Dudley Field Malone, New York attorney, today made public a telegram sent to Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, calling upon Minton to apologize generally for his speech in Congress yesterday attacking William Randolph Hearst.

Minton had accused Hearst of "prostituting" the freedom of the press for his own interests, having "a peculiar code of ethics for himself" and running his newspapers "on the same high plane he conducts his private life."

Malone, asserting that he never has represented corporations, utilities or vested interests, called the Minton speech "vulgar" and "an outrageous offense to public manners and to the fair-minded people of Indiana and the country."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

When the World War ended
On the last, lone gun,
I remember saying,
"Well, the goose step's done!"

I remember laughing
At the movie-news . . .
Nothing seemed so silly
As the goose step views.

On the goose step symbol
We had made a war;
As the bloodshed ended
We had said, "No more!"

As the Kaiser's forces
Straggled homeward then
There was no high stepping
By the beaten men.

Fritz had lost the battle
In the long, hard fight,
And his gait was normal
And his footfall light.

There was no loud tramping
With a stride intense,
And we rather figured
He had got some sense.

As the foemen weary
Wore expressions flat
There was no goose stepping . . .
They were sick of that.

In the years that followed
What a funny thing
Seemed a soldier marching
With that proud, stiff swing!

"Twas a laugh," we chortled,
And we thought so, but
They are back as ever
With that old-time strut.

There's a moral somewhere
And it's this, I'm sure:
When the goose step gets you
There is no known cure.

Can You Remember—

Away back when you saw a girl blush occasionally?

The other day the New York Court of Appeals ruled that a city can't close up a burlesque show, however disreputable, unless there has been a conviction under the penal law. Justice may be blind, but it can always see those strip dancers.

A lot of people are going to discover after the election is over that they are forgotten men.

Here politics are widely aired,
Finances ironed out,
Panaceas preached for war
And nations put to rout;

Are daubed with home-made ointments
By people who recline and wait—
Because they've got appointments!

U. S. Considers Foreign Trade Expansion Plan

Fields, Not Yet Touched, Contemplated; 2 Pacts Being Concluded.

By the Associated Press.

An expansion into foreign trade fields still untouched by the Administration's reciprocal treaties was under consideration by State Department officials yesterday, even as proposed pacts with France and Finland neared conclusion.

Eleven reciprocal trade agreements already have been concluded under the Roosevelt program and the signing of the French and Finnish pacts—expected within three weeks—will permit the trade agreements section's activities to be extended to other nations.

President Roosevelt's action yesterday in extending until May 15 the period during which France may continue to receive all benefits of existing trade pacts disclosed that the French pact was all but concluded.

Harry Hawkins, who is slated to become the chief of the trade agreements section when Henry F. Grady returns to University of California in July, and Paul Culbertson, of the State Department's Western European Division, are now in Paris putting the finishing touches on the proposed treaty.

Unless the French agreement is concluded by May 15, or the President gratns another time extension beyond that date, beneficial tariff reductions now granted on French goods may be withdrawn. Officials said, however, that they expected action before May 1.

Germany is now the only nation on whose goods the old, higher tariff rates are collected. All other nations have been granted advantages of all new rates contained in any treaty.

Officials declined yesterday to designate what countries might be contacted to open negotiations for additional treaties. Among those understood to be under consideration, however, are Argentina, Denmark, Portugal, Austria, Bolivia, Chile, Norway and Greece.

Trade pacts designed to stimulate mutually profitable commerce through reduction of high-tariff walls and other trade-blocking practices already have been concluded with Cuba, Canada, Switzerland, Brazil, The Netherlands, Sweden, Haiti, Belgium and Honduras.

Agreements are still under negotiation with Costa Rica, Guatemala, El Salvador, Spain and Italy, but the Italo-Ethiopian war has placed the Italian discussions in a state of suspended animation.

Did Garfield Die in Vain?

PRESIDENT James A. Garfield was mortally wounded in the railway station at Washington, D. C., July 2, 1881.

TWELVE weeks later, he died.

THE BULLET that caused his death came from the gun of a disappointed office-seeker . . . and crystallized the movement to establish a civil service system.

THE YEAR following the passage of the civil service law, 1884, 10.5 per cent of all jobs in the Executive branch of the Government were under civil service regulation. In 1924 the figure had reached 70.8 per cent. In 1932 it had climbed to 80.8 per cent.

TODAY it is 50.7 per cent. Since 1932 the New Deal has added approximately 235,000 jobs to the Federal pay roll and, according to a recent study, only 1 in every 107 of these is under civil service.

DO THE voters of the Nation believe that all such jobs should be under the "Merit" . . . rather than the "Spoils" . . . system? For the answer, see AMERICA SPEAKS in tomorrow's

Mary Cootes Back After World Tour

The Misses Shouse Stay in England to View Grand National.

By Dudley Harmon.

With the Misses Elizabeth and Marian Shouse, daughters of Mrs. Lawrence Groner, Mrs. Nora Bell, of Washington, and Miss Anne Warren, of Boston, Mrs. Cootes and her daughter sailed last September for China and Japan. In Hongkong they visited Miss Cootes' brother, Mr. Merritt Cootes, who is vice consul there. The Misses Shouse stayed with Mrs. Langhorn Bond, the former Miss Katherine Dunlop, of Washington, whose husband represents an airline in China.

They were widely entertained during their stay. Among the many parties they attended was the large reception given by the acting governor of Hongkong, Sir William Shenton, in honor of the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, who were en route to the inaugural ceremonies of President Quezon, of the Philippines. Miss Cootes, who won the District of Columbia tennis championship last summer, played tennis frequently at the Hongkong clubs.

Mrs. Cootes Stricken.

From China, the party went to the Philippines, arriving in time for the inaugural ceremonies. Mrs. Cootes, however, was taken ill in Manila and spent some time in a hospital, while Miss Cootes stayed with Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, sister-in-law of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former chief of staff of the United States Army. Mrs. Bell came directly home from the Philippines.

In India, the next destination of the party, the group visited Calcutta, Delphi and Jaipur, and drove through the famous Khyber pass, celebrated for the wildness of its mountain scenery. From India they went to Egypt.

"The harbor at Alexandria was crowded with Italian troop ships," said Miss Cootes, "but that's the nearest we got to the war in Africa."

In Paris, their last stop before sailing for America, Mrs. Cootes and her daughter stayed with Mrs. Bradish Johnson, Mrs. Cootes' cousin, who has an apartment in the Square Lamartine, near the Bois de Boulogne. Bradish Johnson, jr., Mrs. Johnson's son, who spent last winter in Washington, is at present going around the world as a stoker on a boat, according to Miss Cootes.

Says Paris Changed.

During her stay in Paris, Miss Cootes became much interested in the Croix de Feu, French political organization, headed by Col. de la Roque. She attended several of its meetings, and is now writing an article on its activities.

She and her mother were entertained during their Paris sojourn by Mrs. George Clark, the former Miss Anne Covington, of Washington, whose husband is attached to the American Embassy there.

"Paris has changed much since the devaluation of the dollar," said Miss Cootes, who studied at the Sorbonne several years ago.

"There are very few Americans, and the cafes and fashionable restaurants seem almost empty compared to what they were in former years. We did run into some Americans, however, among them Armar Archbold. He was in Paris after attending the Olympic games in Germany."

Mr. Archbold is the son of Mrs. Anne Archbold, of Washington.

Miss Dolly Corbin Hostess at Dinner; Covers Laid for 16

Miss Dolly Corbin, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Clifford Corbin, entertained at dinner last evening in the home of her parents on Wyoming avenue preceding the last of the Friday Supper Club dances of the season at the Sulgrave Club. Covers were laid for 16.

Col. and Mrs. Corbin, accompanied by their two daughters, Miss Dolly Corbin and Miss Edythe Anne Corbin, will leave Washington on June 2 for Honolulu, where the former will assume his new duties.

3 Dances Changed To F Street Club

Saturday, Instead of Sunday Fetes to Be Held.

The series of three supper dances which was to have been held at the Heigh-Ho Club on Sundays April 12, April 26 and May 10, will be given instead at the 1925 F Street Club. The dates will be Saturdays April 25, May 9 and May 23. Dancing will be from 10 to 2.

The change was made because members requested the dances be held on Saturdays instead of Sundays and it was impossible to secure the Heigh-Ho Club for Saturday nights. The later dates make possible the use of the garden at 1925 F Street Club. Attendance will be limited to 200 members.

Egypt Society Meets in Honor Of King Fuad I

Mr. Stoddard, Mr. Youssef Speak at Birthday Party of Society Here.

Mr. Lothrop Stoddard, distinguished author, and the Minister of Egypt, Mr. Mohamed Amine Youssef, were the principal speakers yesterday at the meeting of the Friends of Egypt Society, held in celebration of the birthday of King Fuad I, Egyptian monarch. The gathering, which was the second meeting of the new society, was held at the Shoreham and was attended by more than 100 guests, many of them Washingtonians who have traveled or resided in Egypt.

Mr. Fred Britten, acting secretary of the society, who, with Mrs. Britten, spent some time there several years ago, described the aims of the society to promote friendship between this country and Egypt. The Minister of Egypt expressed his appreciation to members of the organization for their co-operation, and Mr. Stoddard, who once had an audience with King Fuad, traced the progress of the country under his reign. Representative Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, acting president of the society, presided during the program.

Among those who were present for the program and cocktails which followed were Mr. Mustapha Youssef, son of the Minister, a student at Georgetown University; Mr. M. Malky, correspondent for the largest newspaper in Egypt, who came to Washington from New York for the occasion; Mrs. MacPherson Crichton, who lived in Egypt for several years; Major and Mrs. Parker West, Mr. and Mrs. William Shearer, Mrs. Austin Kautz, Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mr. Edward Harriman, Mrs. George Burnham, wife of the Representative from California; Col. John Greely, Mrs. Arthur Condon, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mr. Walter Wilcox, Miss Janet Stearns, and Mrs. Barron Dubois.

Members of the committee which founded the Friends of Egypt, headed by Senator Borah, sent a cable to King Fuad yesterday in which they explained the purpose of the society and wished him a long and prosperous reign.

Another function in celebration of the Egyptian monarch's birthday was the banquet of the Syrian-Egyptian-American Society, held at the Shoreham Hotel Thursday night after the reception at the Egyptian Legation in the afternoon. Syrians and Egyptians in the District and its vicinity were present, comprising about 200 guests. The entire staff of the Egyptian Legation was there, headed by the Minister of Egypt, and all spoke briefly. A feature was native music, played by those among the guests who were accomplished on native instruments, and native dances, also presented by guests.

Postmasters Under Civil Service?

SHOULD America take the postmaster out of politics?

SHOULD all jobs in the Executive branch of the Government, except those which have to do with important matters of policy, be under civil service regulation?

Expert in Charm Advises Femininity 'Rules' Offices

Executive Who Scowls Admits Weakness, She Declares.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

HOW TO BE BOTH EFFICENT and feminine in a keenly competitive business world is a problem confronting many modern women executives. Too often, perhaps, in their efforts to be firm at any cost, they achieve success along with a hard-boiled attitude, a grim visage and a harsh voice.

Margery Wilson, authority on charm, is convinced, however, that the woman who retains her femininity has an even better chance for success than the one who follows the line of least resistance and emulates some of the men who work with her.

A widely known authority on charm, Miss Wilson will tell how this is acquired when she talks Tuesday evening at the Shoreham Hotel under the auspices of the Hester Walker Beall Studio of the Spoken Word. Recently, devoting her attention to the value of a pleasing personality in the office, Miss Wilson informed a Post reporter that charm brings as great returns in business as in a drawing room.

"It is old-fashioned to suppose efficiency is indicated by whip-cracking," she declared. "The executive who scowls and commands is merely publicly admitting his (or her) weakness and inability to rule by personal force. The woman who, through charm, makes those under her want to please her needs no 'business-like' firmness to get a splendid performance from them."

In this connection Miss Wilson also listed five suggestions for the businesswoman who would be charming as well as successful. They follow:

1. Even if you wear tailored clothes, add at least one feminine detail to your ensemble—such as a piece of costume jewelry, or a flower in the lapel of your coat.

2. Have a flower or flowers on your desk.

3. Ask your employes to do small personal favors for you. Ask the men to move or lift something for you. (We always feel kindly toward the person we have helped.)

4. Do not be over-generous with compliments, but see that everyone gets a few. Learn to look at people approvingly.

5. Develop a fine continuity of breath in your speaking voice if you wish to have your words respected.

Miss Wilson believes some businesswomen develop grim features, sharp eyes and angular gestures because of mental tension and a frantic determination to distinguish themselves. "Then, too, there are physically unattractive women who, having no faith in their ability to win personal laurels, use their careers to 'show the world' they have value and power," she stated.

The chief quality of charm, according to Miss Wilson, is "freedom of expression. When one is really freed, there is no exaggerated thought of self," she averred. "Therefore, one's interests cover a wide circle."

She believes, also, "Charm is the quality that intrigues the interest and at least some of the emotions of other people. It is the ability to adjust perfectly and pleasantly to every person and every moment. Charm emanates from a completely released personality."

MARGERY WILSON, personality expert, believes charm brings a woman as great returns in an office as in a drawing room.

School Official Scores 'Standards'

Points Out Pupils Mature at Varied Ages.

Children mature mentally at different rates, says Carleton Washburne, superintendent of public schools of Winnetka, Ill., in an article in Parents' Magazine for March. A child is not stupid because he matures more slowly than the average, nor is he to be especially commended because his rate of maturing is fast. Just as the Chinese used to bind girls' feet to make them conform to an artificial standard, so are American schools binding children's minds to fit arbitrary standards, says Superintendent Washburne. The school that tries to fit its courses to the child's stage of growth, however, incurs criticism instead of encouragement from parents.

Ohio Law Clinic Gives Free Advice

Columbus, Ohio (AP).—Citizens who can't afford to employ lawyers, can obtain free legal advice at Ohio State University's law clinic. Senior law students handle the cases.

Welfare organizations such as the family bureaus and the Federal Emergency Relief Administration usually initiate cases. The questions are referred to the public defender who assigns the various cases to the law clinic.

"The law clinic," says Prof. S. A. Harris, "meets a definite need in Columbus' social welfare. The lack of an organized legal aid society here makes this educational feature a decided contribution to social service."

Foot Balance Demonstrated By Local Store

By Ruth Anne Davis.

DO YOU WOBBLE like a turkey when you walk? Or do you slither and slide along as though you were wearing snowshoes? If you have an awkward and ungainly gait, don't blame your poor feet. After all, they're probably innocent victims of vicious shoes.

Scientists who have been at work on walking problems for years have discovered that the foot must be perfectly balanced before graceful gait is possible. If the shoes are not fitted properly, or if they're improperly made, then automatically you're thrown off balance. The result—bad gait, fatigue and discomfort, and frequently serious foot disorders.

So that you can actually see the difference between the balanced and unbalanced foot in action, a Connecticut avenue shoe concern has in its windows now a little device called electro-basograph. Here are two dummy feet in motion. One is graceful, the other awkward. Which most resembles yours?

As the outcome of this scientific research, the firm has made shoes that do give perfect balance to the feet and enable you to walk faster and farther with less effort. They are proportioned to fit the foot in action and actually give you the graceful—and natural—gait you must have for health and beauty.

And unlike some shoes that are designed just for comfort and health—these are the last words in fashion.

Easy Window Washing.

WASHING windows has always been regarded as such an ordeal that comparatively few women will undertake the task themselves unless the budget insists on it.

Now, however, thanks to a new product, washing windows is simple and easy—and if you're Pollyanna enough — even fun. The product is a magic liquid. Just a few drops on a dry cloth, and you'll soon be able to clear up any soiled pane situation you're up against.

Not Easy Task.

THIS business of having lovely hands isn't half as easy as it's made out to be. Just using lotions and creams isn't going to do the job. No, sirree, not unless you take other measures, too.

For years beauty specialists have preached—"wear gloves," but who can really do her housework, or garden satisfactorily with gloves binding her hands? Well, now, that depends on the gloves. There are some new ones on the market that are ideal. They're soft and pliant, and fit loosely enough to enable you to work freely—and yet not so loosely they bother you.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE PARENTS of these children have no worries about keeping them at home. Because Alice and Thomas, jr., have the run of the house to enjoy themselves with no inhibitions. So do their young friends. As a result the place always looks a good deal as if a hurricane had struck it, but the children love to be right there, which is reward enough for any home decorations! The unexpected part is that Alice and Thomas, jr., are the most interesting and well-behaved of children . . . because their play, though utterly free, is always under the watchful eye of a very intelligent mother.

"But right now I've got to concentrate on the questoin of a new rug for the living room. I want something that looks attractive with maple furniture, yet a rug that is substantial and in the mood of informality that we like. As for colors, there isn't any pet scheme—we have an odd lot of shades I'm afraid, mostly early American."

Why not get a machine hooked rug? That would be mellowed in color and so it would blend with the other tones in the room. These rugs have the charm of the old designs with the dependability and warmth of a well-made modern rug. Most of them are copies of famous old motifs. And they don't show footmarks!

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "Prescriptions for Living Rooms."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Emphasize Physical Fitness.

DESPITE the preservation of life due to better sanitation, to widespread knowledge of the laws of health, to greater emphasis upon rest and play, are we as a Nation degenerating physically? A small proportion of the population—possibly 10 to 15 per cent—may be considered as possessing normal bodies when age and environment are considered. The balance are substandard in some respect.

While the average outdoor worker may show a powerful development of the back, shoulder and leg muscles yet the absence of an erect posture precludes normal chest expansion. Stand on the street and watch the pedestrians go by. There will be a preponderance of large abdomens which indicate weak abdominal walls and deposits of unneeded fat. In these out-of-balance bodies muscles are usually flabby and these persons often complain of shortness of breath.

Careless Postures.

Observe a group of school children; many are pale and underweight; but few know how to walk or even breathe properly. Although most youngsters indulge in considerable activity on the playgrounds, in entirely too many will there be noted a slouching gait and a careless posture. This is certain to result in subnormal vitality, as the chest and the spinal column are not developing to the point where adequate room is provided for the heart and the lungs. It is probably true that three-fourths of our large high school group will show some type of remedial defect. As a result young men and women seek nervous excitement and thrills because they lack the necessary body power for the pursuit of athletic games.

There is every reason to encourage planned games for children in which large numbers can participate. If nothing better offers, the old-fashioned calisthenics or the Army setting-up exercises, if carried out regularly day after day, will affect body building beneficially. The failure of school games lies in the fact that too few join in. Only a fraction of the total number make the basketball team, the football squad, the track team, etc. The boy or girl who is naturally athletic needs an exercise program the least; the quiet, bookish lad must receive it.

Moral Effects Cited.

The moral effect of a weakened physique is bad. The individual is likely to become introspective, to shun playmates, and to avoid activity simply because he cannot excel. In games the spirit of good sportsmanship is demanded. If it prevails, every participant will improve in skill and prowess under encouragement.

Schools with a system of medical inspection can greatly increase the value of the service if every youngster is given the benefit of a studied schedule of exercise fitted to his particular needs. Early cases of spinal curvature are not difficult to remedy, and exercises can be prescribed for foot deformities and underdeveloped chests, arms, and legs. Proper breathing is of the greatest importance. Insufficient oxygenation of the blood, through taking in too little air, may be responsible for a general lowering of body stamina.

'Lightning Part' Stirs Meeting Of Hairdressers

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—A "lightning part" that zigzags up one's head was acclaimed today as a clever new way for women to dress their hair.

"It's beautiful," said beauty shop owners who saw the "lightning part" introduced last night at their international convention in a coiffure style show.

Unusual ways to part hair featured the show, which presented 30 advance summer modes of hairdress—among them purple-tinted hair studded with real violets.

One parting was diagonal, ending behind the right ear. Then there was the double part—parallel lines going straight back or little crescents front and back.

A new trick for brunettes was the "star-dust" coiffure, sprinkled with silver flakes.

The beauticians also liked a silver and gold lacquered hairdress for evening, a gold spun "transformation" and a head with the curls laid like a series of rose petals.

Tinted hair—green, blue and orchid—is still good for "exotic types," said the hairdressers, and the "senorita type" of woman should wear long hair.

Proper Care Urged For Child's Teeth

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., March 26.—Tooth decay in children may be decreased by proper pre-natal medical care and by regular medical supervision during infancy, the Harvard Dental School has announced.

The announcement was based on a seven-year study of a group of approximately 100 children by Dr. Paul K. Losch and Dr. Fred W. Morse, jr., of the school's staff.

The children were divided into classes ranging from those free from dental decay to those which showed high susceptibility to decay.

Investigators found that 90 per cent of those mothers whose children were in the group free from dental decay had medical supervision during the full term of pregnancy, while only 63 per cent of the mothers of the highly susceptible group had such care.

Population Waves.

In 1870 three-fourths of the American people lived on farms and in small villages. Today approximately three-fourths of the American people are urbanized.

Sheer Suit for Spring and Summer

THERE IS an air of distinction about this navy blue and white street costume fashioned of crepe ilene, a new sheer fabric woven of acele yarn. Beneath the youthful jacket, with its waffled pique revers and Schiaparelli shoulders, is a smart one-piece dress with high neckline accented by a tiny collar with a rick-rack edge like the pique points down the front. The material is summer weight and ideal for warm weather. The dress may be purchased in a Washington store. Call Frances Mangum, The Post Fashion Editor, NAtional 4200, Extension 323.

TWO ON SAFARI

By George Agnew CHAMBERLAIN

Chapter XXXIV.

Pearls of a Price.

BALLARD leaned over and ripped open Ibn's outer jacket, disclosing the vest encrusted with pearls. "I'm not going to hand you over to any local commandant; I'm not such a fool. What would it cost you if I did?"

Tears rolled down the banian's cheeks. "Plenty," he whispered.

"Who rode away on the horse?" asked Ballard sharply.

"Agyah, father of my wife."

"Robbery," said Ballard. "The thing to do is to take you to the capital, where the British Consul General will see to it that no amount of money bails you out. Robbery and assault with intent to kill. Do you know what you'll get for that? As sure as Mecca lies due north, though you do your robbing to the east, you will get ten years in jail."

The tears rained down the banian's jowls. Suddenly he lifted his eyes to Mallory's face. "Master!" he implored, "Save Ibn, who was once your good friend!"

"That's what I was coming to," said Ballard. "What did you promise Agyah? Tell the truth or you'll get a taste of the sjambok."

"Twenty-six pearls," whispered Ibn.

"For riding a horse to death?"

"No, no, for assisting me to gain the mem-sahib whom I thought you had discarded or never would I have raised my eyes to her unveiled face."

"Well, you didn't get her, so you needn't pay him. I'll tell you exactly what it's going to cost you to get clear. Twenty-six pearls plus the price of two salted horses. I'll pick out the horses—and the pearls."

Ibn's tears ceased instantly, his thick lips pursed and then began to curve, his round face became wreathed in beatific smiles.

"All praise to Ormazd," he murmured, "who wars upon the evil spirits that dwell in darkness. Friend, free the hands of your friend that he may pay."

Questions Abdul.

In the meantime, followed by a reluctant Abdul, Josephine put the whole camp between herself and Mallory, then turned to face the Swahili who had been walking with his head over his shoulder. He was sullen at being robbed of the great treat of seeing a wealthy and despised banian brought to book. Indeed he might have refused flatly to accompany the Missis had not what she had done to Ibn's shins aroused fear as well as admiration.

She came to the point at once. "Abdul, do you remember Papu, the dancer?"

A flash lit in Abdul's eyes, but was immediately suppressed, leaving them peculiarly blank. "Aicona remember, Missis."

"Of course you do!" said Josephine impatiently. "You led me around half the village. This boy was dancing. You said his name was Papu and that he was the son of the chief." Abdul's face continued expressionless, positively stupid, as he swayed his head from side to side.

"Listen, Abdul," she continued sharply, "you're lying to me; I can't imagine why, but you are. Do you know a pearl when you see it?"

"Yes, Missis."

"Do you know a 5-pound note?"

The boy's lips spread in an uncertain grin.

She drew her hands from her breeches pockets and suddenly unclosed her doubled fists. In one palm rested the pearl given her by Ibn, in the other the tightly folded 5-pound note of which she had deprived poor Mrs. Semster.

"There you are—I'll give you one or the other if you'll bring Papu to me and get him to answer the questions I ask."

The struggle that now took place in Abdul's broad countenance between cupidity and terror was pitiful to see. The fear of being flayed alive by Mallory should he be caught tugged one way, and overpowering desire, backed by his Arab blood's inveterate love of intrigue pulled the other. Avarice gained; his eyes grew round with daring.

"For both I do him," he bargained.

"You can't have both," said Josephine promptly. "I've got to keep one of the two to pay Papu for what I want."

Again Abdul considered; say he should take the five-pound note, if he was ready with a shilling's worth of beads,, he could undoubtedly trade them for the pearl before Papu, being an inland native, had a chance to ascertain its value. Since the dancing induna had not been with Matogada's impi he must have stayed at Wemba and it would be easy to find him. The scales, a moment ago so nicely balanced between terror and greed, fell for greed with a thud.

"I find him. I bring him."

"When?"

"Not know, Missis. Today, tomorrow, next day. Abdul find him quick."

"You'd better or you'll get nothing." She started toward the camp, but turned back to utter a warning. "By the way, not a word to Mr. Mallory.

A Different Country.

He gave her a look of utter commiseration; did she take him for a blockhead? He went immediately about the business in hand, passing from one group of porters to another in search of some straggler from Wemba. He found none, but a sharp change had come over the country during the night's trek.

Here was unravaged land and already women had begun coming in with provisions. They formed a fringe beyond the carrier's bivouacs and were prepared to set from morning till night, each before her laden basket, awaiting just such an advance emissary as Abdul. He was shrewd enough to profit by the situation and during the course of the usual introductory banter he stumbled suddenly upon a golden nugget of news.

Upon praising Papu as one of the finest dancers he had ever seen and asking if any woman present had escaped his charms, a great cackling of laughter arose. He was taking pride in the success of his joke when he was first chagrined and then overjoyed by the discovery that the young matron he was addressing was none other than the dancer's wife. Through her he learned that Papu was sojourning at Mutambe's village, an hour's march away.

Only by an effort did he conceal his excitement. He uttered a final raillery and behind the screen of the resulting laughter made his escape to go in search of Josephine.

He found her standing on the outskirts of the throng which had gathered to watch the mendication of Iben-ben-Dur's shins by Ali under Ballard's direction. Abdul took up a position close to her shoulder.

"All right, Missis," he murmured out of the side of his mouth. "Tonight after chow, same place we talk."

She looked around, a question on her lips; he was gone. Strangely exhilirated she felt the hours until evening must inevitably drag, but to her delight, between watching Ballard attend to the sick, sort out the supplies brought by Ibn and purchase provisions, time actually flew, and the dinner hour fell suddenly upon her.

"I don't think I'll bother to change tonight," she said. "I'm too tired."

Ballard merely nodded comprehendingly but went through the usual routine himself—tea, bath, pajamas, a snifter and then dinner. During the meal he seemed distrait, but since silence suited her book exactly, she made no move to break it. At last he roused himself by a deliberate effort.

Mallory Is Baffled.

"Well, Jo, here we are—right back where we started."

"What?" she asked, startled out of her thoughts. "Where did you say we were?"

He laughed shortly. "Who knows and who cares. As far as finding the Honorable Laurence Morland is concerned we might as well be back in Inhambane. Perhaps better, for I'm beginning to think he never came in through that port at all."

"Oh."

"Is that all you can say? The way things have turned out I've completely lost interest, but I should think you'd be keener than ever. If you're not a liar you ought to be looking worried, and somehow you're not." He examined her intently. "What's happened?"

"Nothing," she almost stammered. "Why?"

"You don't seem exactly tired; you look as if you'd taken a shot of dope."

"That just shows how blind men are," she answered with a nervous laugh. "I'm so tired I'm going to tumble into bed straight off. I'm not only tired, I'm cold."

Upon entering her tent that remark about the cold gave her an excuse to drop its flaps. She turned on the electric lamp for a few minutes but made no move to undress. Presently she was lying in the dark on top her cot fully clothed and counting the minutes until she could slip out to her rendezvous. For a while she could smell the permeations of Ballard's Boer tobacco, then she heard him rise, yawn and go to bed. She forced herself to wait for half an hour before she snipped the edge of the bobbinet window at the back of her tent and crept out through the opening on all fours.

Before nightfall she had examined closely the course she must follow and without accident she arrived on the very spot where she had held her morning conference with Abdul. For a moment she thought he had failed her, then she heard a murmur at her very feet. She sank to her knees and immediately two figures became sharply outlined against the general glow of the campfires. Abdul was squatting cross-legged, tailor fashion, while Papu, kneeling, sat on his heels. His eyes, starting out of the ebony black of his face, seemed preposterously white, enlarged and terrified.

"You give me five pounds now," murmured the Zanzibari. "Abdul go away."

"You'll do nothing of the sort!" whispered Josephine sharply. "Listen, Abdul. Until you get Papu to take me to the white man who gave him that cap he's wearing, not a penny for you and no pearl for him."

New Dog Leash Ties To Belt So 'Milady' Can Carry Packages

New York, March 15 (AP).—Milady is going to be attached to her dog this spring, literally.

A new trick in togs for dogs is a leash that fastens to the dog owner's belt, thus leaving her hands free for carrying parcels when she takes Fido out for a walk.

Nothing is more chic says an apostle of this idea, than a pretty woman and a Pekingese with accessories that match.

Wide leather belts for the Easter parade have been created with matching canine collars, the whole business being held together with a leash. An average price for this harness is $30.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Between True Friends There Is Never Need of Sparring for First Place in Each Other's Affections.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I will be a junior in college next fall and, as usual, there arises the ever-perplexing problem of choosing the right roommate. A next year's senior has asked me to room with her and I have told her I would like to. We get along very well together, are active in sports and both socially inclined. However, her present roommate is planning on rooming with her again next year, although nothing has been said on which she can base such an expectation. The latter is a self-centered person, rather hard to get along with, and her present roommate doesn't wish to be with her another year.

Mary Haworth

* * * *

Then, something else has come up to further complicate the picture. Another girl, who will be a senior next year, has asked the first girl—let's call her Miss A—to room with her next year. This other girl heard me say a few nights ago that A had asked me to room with her next year, and that so far as I knew now, that was what I planned to do. Her subsequent action strikes me as a little queer. She is a likable person but doesn't go out and meet other girls the way most of us do. I do not mean she stays in her room all the time; she certainly doesn't do that. But she is a very sensitive person and therefore cares to have only a few intimate friends, most of whom are seniors this year.

* * * *

The baffling question which emerges out of this mix-up is: Should I give up a year of happiness which I might have in sharing a room with Miss A. and tell her to go ahead and room with this third girl, and take a chance on rooming with someone I don't know so well nor like as much? I have always thought myself easy to get along with, but I am rather particular about my roommates. I choose my most intimate associates carefully but am on good terms with all the girls in school.

* * * *

Please tell me what you think I should do to make a satisfactory adjustment for all concerned. I should like to know during the next week, as we have to sign for our rooms in two weeks. UNHAPPY.

Final Decision Here Rests With Miss A.

DEAR UNHAPPY: It seems to me the sensible and diplomatic thing for you to do in this mix-up is to leave Miss A entirely free to designate her choice of roommate for next year. Knowing that her present roommate is counting on her again for next year, nevertheless she asked you to room with her, and in so doing she invited responsibility for disentangling herself as tactfully as possible from the other girl's tacit claims on her company. As for the third girl's invitation to be her roommate next year, that, too, makes it necessary for Miss A. and Miss A alone, to reach and declare her ultimate decision. Having committed herself to you, it seems to me the only thing she can do now is keep her hand to the plow and go through with her original plan, conceived before she became the center of competitive rush.

* * * *

However, if Miss A should decide, in view of this rush, that the most diplomatic thing to do is stick with her present roommate and thus stamp out what might possibly develop into a general confusion of hard feelings, then I suggest you accept her decision with complete grace and generous understanding. Tell her you realize she has been placed in an impossible position and that out of consideration for her you are willing to make a whole-hearted sacrifice of her hoped-for companionship next year. In so doing—should necessity arise—you will be proving the quality of your friendship for her far more than if you take an aggrieved attitude at her change of plan. Between true friends, there is never need of sparring for first place in each other's life and affections. M. H.

Odds Against Swank School Girl Graduates

ODDS for matrimony are favorable for the girl whose family sends her to a fashionable boarding school. But this same girl will wend her way into the divorce courts before many years have passed, according to a survey by Fortune Magazine.

Of the ten schools included in the survey, nine were on the Atlantic Seaboard and one on the Pacific Coast. Boarding school statistics show that seven years after graduation practically every girl from America's best girls' schools is married. And divorce court statistics show that this class lead in divorces.

Asked the question, "What is the boarding school girl going to do in mature life?" They reply that she will in all probability become a wife.

Kind of Wife Is Question.

"The kind of wife she will be is not stated," says Fortune. "Her school does give her certain things to help her toward the inevitable destination. It gives her, in her most formative years, a strong, healthy body, a good education, a host of socially presentable friends. In these ways it makes her into a woman men will want to marry. But it does not train her to be a wife.

"It does not teach her to be a good cook; it does not teach her how to run a home; it does not teach her to live on a limited budget; it does not teach her anything about dress beyond neatness; it does not teach her how to take care of another person besides herself. But perhaps this rich boarding-school girl will not need to know these things when she is married.

"The chances are that she will marry a man with money, with social standing, with a business or official position of some importance.

"The social prestige of the school is attained by ruthless blue-penciling of the waiting list. In many cases girls enrolled years before they enter, and are reared in the tradition of the school.

"The cost of a year at one of these fashionable schools averages between $1,000 and $3,000, depending largely on the standing and age of the school. In the East, where more of the schools are concentrated, the prestige of the school depends largely on its prestige of yesterday. Consequently, numerous girls from the Middle-Western States are sent "back East" for culture.

Health Rules Made to Apply In Every Case

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THERE WAS a case of scarlet fever in the Brown family and the household was quarantined. Mr. Brown was permitted to go to work, but Mrs. Brown and the children were not permitted to go about, and no one came to see them.

The crowning injury, however, was a "Scarlet Fever" sign hung on the gate to warn away the unwary. Mrs. Brown felt like a leper and resented it. She expressed her indignation to all who cared to listen. That intelligent, public spirited citizens should be treated in such a way seemed to her unnecessary and absurd.

Tune Changes.

When, however, a little later, an epidemic of measles broke out in a poor section of town, Mrs. Brown's tune changed. She was all in favor of every possible precaution against the spread of the disease, and wanted to insure the strictest kind of quarantine, with every kind of sign and all the newspaper publicity possible. That there were people in the poorer section of town who resented being looked upon as pariahs quite as much as she did, did not occur to her.

Must Be Impartial.

There cannot be two sets of health rules, one for the ignorant, another for the well-informed. There are quite as many selfish and careless people among the well-to-do as among the very poor, and the only means of assuring public safety is to have an impartial and strict health board which makes no exceptions in anyone's favor.

There is no disgrace in being quarantined any more than there is in having the disease which causes the quarantine, and the man or woman who seeks exemption from the regulations is helping to break down the bars against epidemics which have been so laboriously built up. In a crowded world one's duty to one's neighbor is in the end one's duty to one's own family.

Cake Recipes Will Feature Post Contest

Formulas Submitted May Win One of Four Grand Prizes.

IF THERE is one dish in the entire universe that makes the sweet young thing with an eye on her waistline, the middle-aged golfer with a wide expanse just below his chest, or a calorie-watching dowager forget their limited diet, it is a homemade cake. It may be a Lady Baltimore cake with its towering layers bedrecked with drifts of snowy frosting, raisins and huts, a fluffy angel food, a spice with mocha frosting, or any number of other versions. But every man, woman or child who is cake minded—and there are very few who are excluded from this group—know that there is no confection in the world so satisfying as a freshly baked homemade cake.

A subject as popular as cake, then, deserves some recognition in this series of Post recipe contests. So next week the contest will be devoted entirely to your favorite cake recipes. The six outstanding recipes will be awarded $1 at the close of the contest.

If your recipe should win one of the six prizes, it will be submitted at the close of this series of contests with the other prize-winning recipes in the final judging to determine the winners of the four grand prizes.

The four grand prizes include, first, a waffle set in sparkling chromium and black which includes an iron, tray, batter bowl and ladle and syrup pitcher; second, a streamlined iron with a heat control for every type of fabric; third, an electric casserole which may be used for the actual cooking of foods as well as the preserving of already heated dishes, and fourth, a smart electric clock for the up-to-the-minute kitchen.

Prize-winning recipes in last week's contest for rhubarb dishes will be printed on the food page in The Post on Wednesday. But the new entries for the cake contest may be sent in immediately. Your favorite cake recipes should be sent to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure that you post your recipe in time to reach this office not later than next Saturday morning.

Mild Cured Corned Beef In Market

Minimum of Cooking Time Is Required of New, 'Smooth' Meat.

HERE'S good news for the lovers of that culinary classic—corned beef and cabbage. That favorite dish has slipped from the list of many housewives because of the time and care needed in the preparation. And now there's a new corned beef on the market, a perfect, mild cured brisket which needs neither parboiling nor soaking and comes out deliciously tender and palatable in the minimum cooking time.

You'll find that this new corned beef is just about as mild and "smooth" in flavor as any meat can be. It has all the tangy flavor of finer corned beef, with none of that oven-harsh, salty flavor which characterizes the less desirable cure.

In preparing this new corned beef only the choicest beef briskets are chosen. They are cured by this double quick, mild method and are distributed to dealers not soaked in the cure, but wrapped in several thicknesses of snowy parchment to keep them moist and in perfect condition.

Whole briskets weigh from 6 to 11 pounds. A whole brisket is a good buy for a family of five, for it provides at least three or four square meals of braised corned beef, corned beef hash, or sliced cold corned beef, all of which are dishes for which your family will cheer.

For a smaller family buy a half brisket. One end of the brisket is rather chunky, containing several layers of fat and lean. This is especially delightful for braising or cold slicing. The thinner, wider end may be left whole or cut in six or eight inch squares for cooking and serving with boiled cabbage or mixed vegetables for a real New England boiled dinner.

In cooking this new corned beef, be sure of one thing—that you follow directions in the wrapper for simmering rather than boiling the beef. High temperatures of boiling are bad technique for any meat cooked in water and corned beef is no exception. Once you have the beef cooked tender—which means approximately four hours of simmering—you can transform it into any of the following delicious dishes:

Braised Briskets.

½ to 1 corned-beef brisket
½ cup brown sugar
Whole cloves
Paprika

Wash the meat under clear water, place in a deep kettle with water to cover and bring to the boiling point. Turn the fire very low so that the water remains at a simmering temperature, i. e., just below active boiling temperature. Do not let water boil vigorously.

Cover closely and allow to cook for approximately four hours or until tender when tested with fork or skewer. Count cooking time from beginning or simmering period. It requires approximately the same time for half or whole brisket. Remove from cooking water and place fat side up in shallow baking pan. Cover with brown sugar, stud with cloves and sprinkle liberally with paprika. Bake in a 350 degrees F. or moderate oven until lightly browned.

Corned-Beef Hash.

2½ cups chopped corned beef
2½ cups chopped boiled potatoes (3 to 4 potatoes)
1 medium small onion, chopped
½ green pepper
2 tablespoons butter or meat fat
¼ teaspoon pepper
Salt to taste

Chop or grind potatoes, beef and onion. Mix thoroughly with pepper and chopped green pepper. Melt fat in frying pan, add hash, cover and cook slowly until thoroughly heated through. Uncover, press hash into compact mass and let brown. Turn out onto hot platter brown side up.

Hash may be baked in oven and browned quickly under broiler flame.

Discarded Chimneys Can Be Made Over

A reader of The Post who signed himself merely "Old Timer" suggests an interesting way in which an old abandoned chimney and fireplace can be made attractive and useful.

First, cover the chimney with slate, concrete or terra cotta slabs to keep the weather out. They must be cemented on. Then have a cabinet built (for the average fireplace, it will be about 3 feet square) with two shelves, 12 inches deep. It will slip right into the fireplace and the trim around it will hide the ugly blackened bricks. It will be a handy spot for books or nick-nacks whether in a dining room, living room, library or bedroom.

Bulletin Board Found Useful In Busy Homes

Many Needs Can Be Cared for by Handy Gadget in the Kitchen.

A FAMILY bulletin board is strongly recommended for busy rural homes in Michigan, by the State extension service, according to a report received by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It sounds like a good idea, but there is no reason why it should be limited merely to the rural homes. City families see less of each other than those in the country.

Of course any type of bulletin board should be placed where everyone can see it without fail and find it convenient to use. The kitchen has become a favorite place for a small blackboard with a piece of chalk or a slate pencil dangling from a chain at the side. The board in the kitchen can be used daily for market orders, menus, messages to the servants, etc.

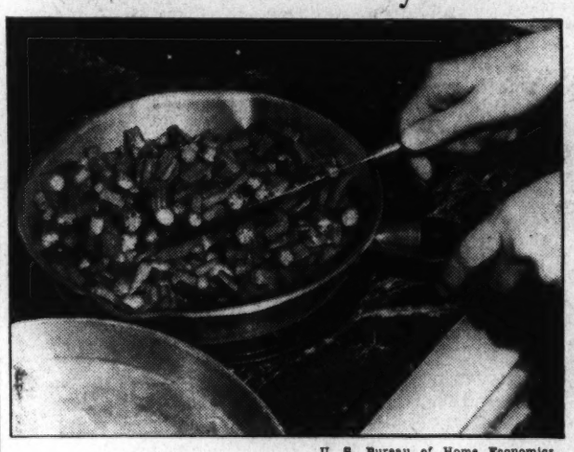
Handy Near a Phone.

It also may contain notes from mother to be read by the children when they come in from school, for they are sure to scurry first to the pantry for something to eat.

If the telephone is in such a position as to make it possible to hang a small bulletin close by without marring the appearance of the decorations, this, too, is an ideal spot for a board. Here all messages may be written for the members of the family who were out of call when someone phoned them.

The homemade bulletin may consist of beaver board with a wooden frame. A course cloth covering will give it a more attractive appearance as well as making it a better foundation for pins or thumb tacks.

When Okra's Hard to Handle The Cook Is Usually at Fault



U. S. Bureau of Home Economics.

Okra, which is a popular ingredient in soups and gumbos, may also be served boiled or fried, but no matter in what form you wish to serve it, you should know first the principles of okra cookery, for if not cooked properly the palate appeal of the vegetable is lost.

THE MAN who tried to eat spaghetti for the first time and found yards of it dangling from his fork, should never attempt to eat okra—unless it is cooked right.

How many housewives have tried to cook this Southern vegetable as they remembered it "down home" and failed? If cooked properly, nothing is so delectable as a dish of buttered okra. But on the other hand, no vegetable can be so unpalatable, as slick, stringy okra.

Tender Pods in Market.

For this reason, it is imperative to buy only the fresh tender pods, ranging in length from one and one-half inches to three inches. These are now abundant at the market. After the okra is washed and cut, place in a small amount of boiling, salted water. Care should be taken to wash the okra before cutting it. Boil slowly from 20 to 30 minutes, or until the pods may be pierced easily with a fork.

Remove from the fire, butter and season to taste. Two or three tablespoons of butter are generally required for a quart of okra.

If you don't care for the buttered okra, try frying it. For this purpose, the okra must be cut crosswise in pieces about one-eighth inch thick. Roll the sections of okra in cornmeal and fry slowly in cooking oil or vegetable compound. When browned on one side, turn with a pancake turner or a spatula.

Many Recipes.

There are many old Southern recipes for cooking okra. Ranking foremost is the famous pot of "black-eyed peas" and okra cooked together. Place the peas in the pot and boil until tender with a small piece of fresh side pork. When the peas are nearly done and the water has boiled low, place the okra, which has been washed and cut, on top of the peas and cover with the lid. By cooking in this method, the pods are steamed nicely and are seasoned with the peas and meat.

Another method of preparing okra is to stew it with tomatoes. A warning to those who use sugar in their stewed tomatoes is issued. Do not use sugar in tomatoes with okra, as it destroys the delicate flavor.

If you have tried cooking this vegetable and put it on your blacklist, give it another trial. Cooked properly it will appeal to the entire family and add another vegetable to your menu for variety.

It Is Not Really Christmas in Bermuda If Succulent Cassava Pie Isn't Served

Valentine, Post Staff.

There is a romantic charm about this old Bermuda kitchen that will never be caught by the modern designer of the streamlined room with its bright chromium, linoleum and electric switches. Here, over a flame of bright charcoal and cedar wood, dusky slaves first cooked the famous cassava pie, which to the present time has remained a traditional Christmas dish on the island.

But Lobsters, Too, Seem Among Favorites of Islanders.

By Dorothea Duncan.

PERSONS who trek to Bermuda year after year certainly do not return after a first visit because of the distinctive food in which they have indulged while there on their first visit. It is the vivid blue of sparkling water, the ever changing sky, the moonlight that drips down to transform the white-roofed cottages into fairy snow-covered huts that inspires the visitor to return year after year.

Certainly, I do not mean to cast any aspersions on the food in which I reveled while I was there. But I do mean that Bermuda's food production is too limited to make for many distinctive dishes on the island.

Really Giant Crayfish.

Though there are few dishes native to the island with the exception of fish in which one can indulge, there are one or two original dishes that are spoken of with enthusiasm.

I indulged freely in red snapper with butter sauce and lemon juice. Bermuda lobster has become one of my favorite dishes. I am not sure whether it is the flavor or the ease with which it may be eaten that intrigued me day after day into ordering it. Certainly it is not lobster as we know it along our coast from Maine to Washington.

The Bermuda lobster is really a giant crayfish of the type that is found in the warm waters around New Orleans. There are no claws, but spindly legs, five on either side and dashing tenacles stretching out before the head. The meat, then, is found in the fat, ruddy middle of this shellfish, and you will understand how, not being adept with a nut-cracker, I thoroughly enjoyed eating lobster with some grace by merely applying the forks to the plump, pearly white coral tinted flesh of the Bermuda lobster's middle. The meat itself is sweet, tender and not so rich as that of a real lobster, which means that you can partake of a real old-fashioned strawberry shortcake afterward without the slightest twinge in the middle. It was strawberry season in Bermuda, too, while I was there, which added greatly to my enjoyment, for this is perhaps my favorite fruit, and the berries were plump, red and deliciously ripe.

Main Yale Course.

The waiter who served me in the dining room of my hotel was coaxed, I hardly dare say inspired, into telling me about some of the more unusual Bermuda dishes when he found that my chief occupation revolved about food.

Harvey has always lived on the island and can boast a grandmother, who was a slave in the house, which is now the dining room of the hotel at which I stayed. A dish that his grandmother cooked over a hundred years ago was the cassava pie. Even Harvey who is steeped in the tradition of the island has no idea of the originator of this dish, but he did say that there has always been a controversy of opinion as to who might claim the invention.

The dish has always been in

Bermuda the main course of every Christmas dinner. Christmas dinner is the chosen meal because at that time of the year the cassava root (similar in appearance to a large gangling sweet potato) is abundant. The root which is thought to be poisonous is ground and the pulp squeezed free from juice through a fine cloth bag. The milk which is the poisonous part is set aside and the remainder of the root is mixed with other extravagant ingredients into the crust for a pie. The filling for this cassava crust will usually include chicken, pork and beef, and the whole after being swallowed produces quite a heaviness of body and drowsiness of mind.

The pie takes several days in preparation and is rather expensive to make for it requires besides the several kinds of meat, numerous eggs, spices, butter and brown sugar.

Casserole Dish Used.

Though the pie today is made in a casserole dish in a modern oven, in the time of Harvey's grandmother the baking was a more romantic procedure. The only ovens were brick fireplaces. There are many in use now among the dark natives on the island, and Harvey's own brothers of which there are six still insist that the bread that they eat be baked as it was baked when grandmother was living.

These cooking fireplaces are built waist high from the floor and are lined with brick. There is an adjustable rack which goes across the open fire and it is raised or lowered depending upon what is being cooked. To the right of the fireplace about a foot removed is the oven also of brick, but with an iron frame and door. It is here that the bread is still baked. The fireplace is used to heat the oven, but if there is any ironing to do another oven heating method is used. Charcoals and cedar wood are placed directly in the oven, and when they assume a white heat they are scraped from the oven and the bread is set in to bake. The hot coals are used to fill the hollows in the great irons with goose-neck handles. So one batch of fuel serves two purposes.

Simple Changes Aid Old Recipes

Will Taste New If Different Flavor Is Added.

You can make old recipes taste like new ones if you give them a new flavor. Cooking is like dressmaking; you can "make over" by simple changes and everyone will admire your versatility. Try these hints:

Succotash—Serve it in a cream sauce cooked with a few grains of nutmeg.

Pot roast—Dissolve six ginger snaps in the gravy for thickening and for flavor. Or rub just a little ground ginger on the meat at the time that you dredge it with flour.

Written Rules Not Verbal, Aid Maid Service

Simplified Rules Outlined by Writer to Provide Efficient Routine.

YOU WILL simplify the routine for your maid if you write out your rules for waiting on table instead of giving verbal orders, advises Bertha N. Baldwin, a successful hostess. In April Good Housekeeping, she outlines the basic instructions which she tacks up in her kitchen for a new or part-time waitress. Here they are:

Walk around table to right at all times. Serve hostess first, then continue around table.

Stand at left to place, remove and offer dishes. In case of beverage or dessert silver, however, place at right.

Exchanging Plates.

Until dessert course, always place fresh plate (empty or filled) when removing used plate, so the place is never empty.

When offering platters or dishes of food hold platter on palm of left hand, steady with right. Offer side of platter that is filled, so as to be near plate. See that serving silver is toward the one being served; rearrange if necessary. Offer platter low enough and close enough to make serving easy.

Filling Water Glasses.

Have service napkin folded in square, on left hand like a tray under all dishes (but not when exchanging plates, removing salad and butter plates, or carrying two plates).

Arrange serving silver on serving dishes with fork at left and spoon or knife at right (just as individual places are arranged).

Have everything ready for a course before starting to serve it.

Serve hot food hot on hot heated plates; serve cold food cold on chilled dishes.

Move quietly and unobstrusively. In emergencies, or if you are uncertain, do the thing that disturbs a guest least. A mistake made quietly is seldom noticed.

Salads a Favorite Luncheon Delicacy For Jaded Appetites

SALADS come right to the fore as a favorite main luncheon dish when spring first rears her lovely head. The crispness of fresh greens and the aliveness of vegetable and fruit colorings combined with the piquant flavor of salad dressing are the best tonic in the world for an appetite that is tired of hot wintry main dishes.

Cooked leftover vegetables instead of being reheated in casserole fashion may be combined with other fresh vegetables to form an attractive main dish salad for luncheon. Here are two salads that use cooked dried lima beans as a starter.

City Luncheon Salad.

2 cups cooked, dried lima beans
2 tablespoons minced pimiento or sweet red pepper
4 hard-cooked eggs
4 peeled tomatoes
½ cup French dressing

Add minced pimiento to limas and mix with French dressing. Arrange on lettuce leaves and surround with sections of tomatoes and hard-cooked eggs. Garnish with mayonnaise or cooked dressing.

Country Salad.

On each individual salad plate arrange three cup-shaped lettuce leaves. Fill one leaf with cooked dried lima beans mixed with mayonnaise dressing; fill the second leaf with diced cooked beets, mixed with French dressing, sweet pickle juice or vinegar, pepper and salt; fill the third leaf with potato salad to which has been added finely-chopped sour pickles. Garnish with radishes and olives.

2 Chocolate Dishes Sure To Find Favor

French Noblewoman Once Delayed Her Arrest to Eat Dessert.

LOOKING over a collection of particularly luscious chocolate dessert recipes is enough to make anyone's mouth water, but it also brings to mind one of history's most amusing and human culinary anecdotes.

At the time of the French Revolution, when the nobility were being brought captive to Paris to stand trial, there lived quietly on her estate not far from Paris an elderly noblewoman, the last of her line. Thinking that the revolutionaries had forgotten her existence she pursued the even tenor of her way. A lifelong devotee of good food and the happy possessor of a great chef, she found in her meals her greatest diversion. One day, at dinner, she had just finished her first course when an excited servant burst into the dining room and said, "Madame, the soldiers have come for you." With unruffled calm she replied, "Just ask them to wait for half an hour—then bring me my desert at once. The chef will never forgive me if I miss his desert—and I certainly should never forgive myself."

History does not state what dessert her chef had prepared for her, but if it were anything like the following chocolate souffle, the noble gourmand's anxiety not to miss her last course was understandable.

Chocolate Souffle.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
2 cups milk
½ cup sugar
1/3 cup flour
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon-colored.
4 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Add chocolate to milk and heat in double boiler. When chocolate is melted, beat with a rotary egg beater until blended. Combine sugar, flour, and salt; add a small amount of chocolate mixture, stirring until smooth; return to double boiler and cook until thickened, stirring constantly; then continue cooking 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add butter and vanilla; cool slightly while beating eggs. Add egg yolks and mix well. Fold into egg whites. Turn into greased baking dish. Place in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 1 hour, or until souffle is firm. Serve immediately with cream. Serves 8.

Chocolate Velvet Cream.

1 square unsweetened chocolate
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
⅓ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup heavy cream
½ teaspoon vanilla

Add chocolate to ¾ cup milk and heat in double boiler. Soak gelatin in remaining ¼ cup milk 5 minutes. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Add gelatin, sugar and salt, and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Cool. Add cream and vanilla. Chill until cold and syrupy. Place in a bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Turn into individual molds. Chill only until firm. Unmold. Garnish with whipped cream. Serves six.

Easy-to-Make Florentine Banquet Cloth

This beautiful crocheted Florentine banquet cloth, which can be made during spare moments, is used as a single lacy covering for the table, with the satiny finish of the wood showing through in the candle light; or, for a richer effect, with colored mat beneath. Approximate size, 72 by 100 inches. Directions for making will be furnished on receipt of a stamp by The Washington Post Bulletin Service.

Crochet Stitch Taken in Time Makes Antique

Lace Table Cloth May Be Passed On to Descendants.

IF YOU HAVE never given serious thought to becoming an 'ancester,' here is your chance to become one your posterity will appreciate and to whose portrait they will point with pride.

This beautiful crocheted florentine banquet cloth shown above can be made during your spare time, on vacation or at odd moments when you feel like doing something constructive.

Now is the time to begin that family heirloom, for smart women of the world may be seen with their crocheting and knitting at any fashionable gathering.

Imagine the tone of pride which will be voiced by your granddaughter in the years to come as she entertains her husband's boss at dinner and proudly displays the lovely lace tablecloth crocheted by grandmother while she was in Washington.

You will not only enjoy making this cloth and become a regular "crochet fan" because of the clear instructions, but you will enjoy using it on your own table. The most admirable quality of a crocheted tablecloth is that it does not deteriorate with constant use or the passing of years if cared for properly.

The cloth may be used as a lone cover on your table with the dull satin finish of your table shining through the lace in the candlelight, or a color effect may be obtained by the use of colored mats.

However used, it is a thing of beauty and to have one is to know that you possess something which marks you as a hostess who delights in the finer things money alone cannot buy.

The approximate size of the banquet cloth shown above is 72 by 108 inches. Directions for crocheting borders for eight 8-inch napkins to be used with the cloth are included in the general crochet instructions. The stitch is easy and fascinating.

Mail a stamp to The Washington Post Bulletin Service and start this week on your new family heirloom.

Use of Leftovers Saves Many Money

Some Women Actually Cook 'Two Meals at Once.'

MONEY may be saved by using leftovers. Many women not only use all the unplanned for leftovers, but actually plan for them by cooking enough food for two meals at a time. Her savings are doubled, for she does not waste food and her monthly fuel bill is reduced. It takes no more time to cook potatoes for two meals than it does for one. She saves both time and money.

Leftovers taste good when intelligently combined. If they also look attractive, nothing more need be asked. Perhaps you have made stews into meat pies, too many times. If so, try mushroom caps instead. Creamed dishes, or stew in a crusty loaf croustade, is a change, and the bread from the interior may be made into a fruit pudding.

Proper care of leftover foods is, of course, essential or they will spoil or dehydrate and so become unattractive. Keep all leftovers in dishes to fit the amount of the food, so that the refrigerator will be as free from a clutter of dishes as possible. Cover the foods, too. Let the foods cool before storing them away, lest the heat of the food bring up the temperature of your refrigerator.

Meat leftovers should be wrapped in heavy waxed paper before storing in the refrigerator lest they become hard and unattractive. If the leftover meat consists merely of a bone with a few juicy fragments clinging to it, remove the meat from the bone, discard fat or other unedible portions, wrap the portion to be saved in heavy waxed paper and store in the refrigerator. If the bones can be used for soup crack them and cover with water and let them simmer immediately, before they dry out.

HERE ARE THE REAL FACTS ABOUT BRAN

Brought Out by Tests with Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Some years ago, there was considerable difference of opinion regarding the use of bran. So to discover the actual facts of the case, the Kellogg Company asked for a series of laboratory tests at leading universities.

Experimental studies on a group of healthy women showed that the continued use of bran was thoroughly satisfactory. Unlike cathartics, it did not lose its effect.

Other independent tests on men indicated that, with certain people, the "bulk" in bran was more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables.

Laboratory analysis proved that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplied vitamin B and iron as well as plenty of bulk. This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle in action. It absorbs a great deal of moisture, and cleanses the intestinal tract.

ALL-BRAN corrects constipation due to insufficient "bulk." It is the natural way—far better than using pills and tablets. Serve as a cereal—or use in cooking. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Spring Delicacy Is Orange Tapioca

No springtime doses of sulphur and molasses for us nowadays, all because we know so well how to add the essential fresh fruits to our meals. For instance, tapioca blends to perfection with the refreshing tang of oranges in this orange tapioca dessert.

4 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¼ teaspoon salt
1 1-3 cup boiling water
½ cup sugar
1 cup orange juice
Grated rind ½ orange
½ cup cream, whipped

Add tapioca and salt to water and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add sugar, orange juice and orange rind. Cool. Fold in whipped cream. Chill until thickened. Pile lightly in sherbert glasses. Just before serving, garnish with very fine ¼-inch shreds of orange rind, free from all white membranes. Serves six.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

PROPONENTS of the merit system—and opponents—will find how the voters throughout the country feel about spoilsmanship and civil service in tomorrow's Post.

BAKER.

Under that uncannily accurate feature "America Speaks," which appears exclusively in The Post, one of the most comprehensive surveys we've ever seen on public service personnel is concisely presented.

Among the high lights of tomorrow's "America Speaks" are:

In 1884, the year following the passage of the civil service law, approximately 10.5 per cent of all jobs in the executive branch of the Government were subject to civil service examinations.

By 1924 this figure had jumped to 70.8 per cent, and in 1932 it climbed to 80.8 per cent.

But in three years, from 1932 to 1935, it dropped back to only 50.7 per cent. Not since the "horse and buggy" days previous to 1914 has it been so low.

National and sectional tabulations on how the voters feel about this question are included in the survey.

Herbert Smith Elected.

Herbert A. Smith, Forest Service, president; Frank Lombard, Forest Service, first vice president; John Gray, Personnel Office, second vice president; Joel J. Winkler, Bureau of Dairy Industry, third vice president, and Miss Mary O'Donnell (P), Bureau of Agricultural Economics, secretary.

In addition, the following were elected to the board of representatives of Local No. 2:

Miss Lottie L. Anderson, Mr. Gray, Elmer Thompson, Mr. Smith, Archie C. Edwards, Miss Helen L. C. Connolly, Daniel O'Flaherty, F. A. Ashbrook, G. L. Crawford, Henry Wold, C. E. Clement, Mrs. Daisy S. Edgerton, John H. Zeller, Frank Sammons, Mrs. Marie Heisley, Arthur Howell, Miss Jessie I. Wood, Peter Keplinger, Mr. Lombard and Nils Anderson.

Title Is Corrected.

Yesterday we referred to Dr. W. A. Craft as being named to "take charge of the Bureau of Animal Industry." Dr. John R. Mohler is chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry and there is no prospect of his resigning. Dr. Craft has just been appointed to take charge of research in breeding, feeding and management of swine.

Capt. Lucius W. Johnson, of the Naval Medical Corps, has won one of the 1936 Kober Foundation awards of Georgetown University. Capt. Johnson's work in plastic surgery won him this honor. He was the unanimous choice of the executive committee of the Association of Military Surgeons as the Kober lecturer for the year.

Transients Work in Forests.

More than 4,000 transients are now working on the national forests under direction of the U. S. Forest Service, says Chief Forester F. A. Silcox. The program, he says, is meeting social needs and the quality and amount of work being done are highly satisfactory. To quote further from Mr. Silcox's statement:

"Transient camp workers did nearly 90,000 man-days of work last December and January on 17 national forests, and of this amount over 80 per cent was put in on five major activities. The men are assigned to the camps by local transient bureaus. The work done includes trail building, fire-hazards reduction along roadsides, fence building, and tree and plant disease control. In addition to the work of 38 transient camps, the Forest Service is directing the work of several thousand ERA employes and nearly 500 CCC camps in national forests."

Clements Paid $12,585 in 1935

fer appeared to lose some of his urbanity.

"How much money have you made?" Sullivan asked bluntly.

"My total salary for 1935 was $5,200."

"Did you make an income tax report on any other income in 1935?"

"I did. I drew a salary from the Townsend Weekly of $250."

"A week?"

"For the year 1935."

"Anything else?"

"I drew in dividends from the Townsend Weekly $6,650."

In addition, Clements, said he drew the sum of $385 from the paper.

"Any income from real estate in California?" Sullivan asked.

"No."

"Well, that makes a grand total of income for 1935 of $12,585. Is that true Mr. Clements?"

He agreed that it was, and a moment later denied that he had any other money in safety deposit boxes here or abroad.

"How much money did you receive in 1935 for expenses from the Old-Age Revolving Pensions?"

"That has not been computed."

"The money—the $12,585—is what we would call, to use a common expression, pure velvet. Is that right?"

Clements did not like that.

"I don't feel like dealing in such terms," he said.

Asked what expenses OARP paid, Clements said:

"The rent of the apartment occupied by Dr. Townsend and myself was paid by the Old-Age Revolving Pensions Corporation."

It was brought out that he had in mind a suite which they formerly occupied in the Connecticut Apartments on Connecticut avenue.

"The rental," Clements said, "was $215 a month."

He explained that he is now occupying an apartment in the Calverton on Columbia road. That also, he said, is paid for by OARP.

"Is the grocery bill paid?" asked Sullivan.

"The grocery bill in the Connecticut apartments last year, the maid hire and incidental expenses were part of the expenses paid by Old-Age Revolving Pensions."

"I forgot to ask you if the electricity and gas were paid for you."

"If they were not included in the rent, yes."

"By the way, is your laundry paid for?"

Clements explained that he had to make a hurried trip across the continent and left without much of his haberdashery. In Denver, he explained, he had a shirt laundered and put the cost on his expense account.

The spectators laughed.

Sullivan then began reading from Clements' expense accounts, which had been obtained by House investigators.

These included such items as the following:

Tips to porters, $1.95.

Breakfast, $1.40.

Lunch, $1.50.

Dinner for self, Mrs. Clements and another person, $5.50.

The recess was taken to Wednesday in order to allow Clements time to gather figures and documents wanted by the committee.

The prospect is that the hearing will extend over several weeks.

Milwaukee's Traffic Plan Study Urged

Senator King Suggests Action Before Parks Commission.

Board Reaffirms Its Support of Gravelly Point for Field.

Milwaukee's traffic system will be studied at first hand by one or more representatives of the District government if action taken yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission bears fruit.

Told by Senator William H. King, of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee and a member of the planning group, that the auto problem here is growing steadily worse, the commission approved King's suggestion that a personal study be made of Milwaukee's traffic methods.

King reported he has proposed the study to the District Commissioners. The plan also has the indorsement of Chairman Frederic A. Delano, of the planning commission, who is now on a fishing cruise in Southern waters with his nephew, President Roosevelt.

Supported by Sultan.

Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, told the planners he, too, favors the idea. If the plan is approved by Commissioners Hazen and Sultan, the study probably will be undertaken by John Nolen, jr., director of planning, and a representative of the municipal government.

The plan board reaffirmed its support of Gravelly Point as a municipal airport site and discussed the effect of the recent flood on plans for extending the George Washington Memorial Parkway to Great Falls.

Praising the editorial published in Monday's Washington Post, Nolen said the Commissioners the time is opportune to push the land acquisition program on both sides of the Potomac between Key Bridge and Great Falls.

The editorial pointed out that the flood having removed many of the dwellings and other buildings along the parkway route, negotiations for purchase of land should be expedited before reconstruction begins.

The flood, which inundated Washington Airport, would have inflicted no damage upon an air field at the Gravelly Point site, members of the planning group declared. Gravelly Point is on the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, a short distance below Highway Bridge.

An inspection trip to proposed recreation areas in Chevy Chase and Rock Creek Park concluded yesterday's session. The meeting will be resumed this morning.

Art Projects Favored.

The Fine Arts Commission yesterday considered and approved plans for new memorials, park improvements and a variety of other projects.

H. P. Caemmerer, executive secretary, announced indorsement of plans for a 7-foot shaft to commemorate the early settlers whose land grants contributed to establishment of the Capital City. It will be located south of the Ellipse, west of Fifteenth street.

Delos H. Smith is architect and Carl Mose is sculptor of the proposed memorial, which will be erected by the National Society of the Daughters of American Colonists.

General approval was given landscaping plans for several parks and recreation areas which were submitted by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital parks. They include Rawlins Park, the new Petworth Playground, Chevy Chase Recreation Center and the boundary channel bridge on George Washington Memorial parkway.

Design and location of the proposed memorial to Grover Cleveland were discussed with the executive committee of the association sponsoring the enterprise. Among those present were Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, George P. LeBrun and George Henry Payne a member of the Federal Communications Commission.

The centennial of Cleveland's birth falls on March 18, 1937, and the association hopes to hold cornerstone laying ceremonies on that date.

A memorial to the late French Ambassador Jusserand, wartime envoy to the United States, also was discussed. Suggestions on landscape plans were offered by Gilmore D. Clarke, landscape architect member of the Fine Arts Commission.

Architectural aspects of the proposed addition to the Government Printing Office were considered. Plans were described by Louis A. Simon, supervising architect of the Treasury, and Charles Z. Klauder, chairman of the Treasury Department's architecture davisory board.

"Veterans of Future Wars" Hold Conference Here

90 Days Given G.W. to Comply To Safety Code

21 Buildings Subject to Ban; Formal Notice Is Sent by District.

Formal notice that 21 buildings now occupied by George Washington University do not comply with the fire and safety regulations was ordered sent the university by the District Commissioners yesterday.

Eleven of the buildings must have fire escapes placed on them, others must have firewalls about staircases, additional stair space, self-closing doors, fire-extinguishers and other equipment added or changed, the Commissioners said.

Among the buildings which do not conform to the law are those occupied by the Faculty Club, the home economics laboratory, Lisner Hall and several sororities.

Ninety days was given within which to bring the buildings into conformity with regulations or abandon present uses of them.

Buildings cited in the formal notices were the following on G street northwest: 2013, 2015, 2019, 2023, 2027, 2029, 2031, 2033, 2022, 2026 and 2101; the following on H street: 2026, 2016, 2014, 2012; the following on Twentieth street: 704, 712, 714, 716 and 720, and 725 Twenty-first street.

Most of the buildings have been taken over by the university within the last year, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president, said. Their use was made necessary by expansion of the university, he explained. The buildings have been used without prescribed occupancy permits, apparently through oversight by university officers and District inspection officials.

Dr. Marvin refused to make any statement as to what would be done.

"I cannot make any statement until after the matter has been passed on by the board of trustees," Dr. Marvin said. "The next regular meeting of the trustees is to be on Wednesday."

"Of course," he added, "the board of trustees of the university are law abiding and always have been, and we certainly shall conform to every provision of the laws."

The notices approved by the Commissioners were the result of inspections during the last few weeks, it was said at the District Building.

Builders Sign Pact With Carpenters

Signing of a new one-year working agreement, between Washington's union carpenters and the Master Builders Association, was announced yesterday by Frank J. Sheehan, executive secretary of the employers' group. It continues for another year, beginning May 1, with a $1.37½-an-hour scale and 40-hour week.

Only one conference of representatives of the Carpenters' District Council and the M. B. A. was necessary to reach agreement, Sheehan declared. Previously there were many clashes on working hours and wages, some of which resulted in long drawn out strikes.

Although the builders' organization is composed of local contracting firms almost exclusively, the terms it makes with union carpenters are adopted also by the out-of-town construction companies employing thousands of workmen on the new Interior building, Library of Congress annex, and other big Government projects here.

'Future Veterans' to Seek Bill For Immediate $1,000 Bonus

Thomas Riggs, Jr., Princeton Student, Visits Home Here and Announces Plans for 'High-Pressure Lobbying Tactics,' Next Week.

High-pressure lobbying tactics "in the best veteran tradition" will be resorted to early next week in an effort to obtain the introduction into Congress of a bill providing for immediate payment of a $1,000 bonus due June 1, 1965, to all members of the "Veterans of Future Wars."

This announcement of a new "bonus drive" was made last night by Thomas Riggs, jr., a student at Princeton University and one of the organizers of the National Intercollegiate Organization of Future War Veterans, formed less than two weeks ago to insure the payment of the next bonus in time for the beneficiaries to enjoy the money before they go off to war.

Riggs, who lives in Washington, came down yesterday for a week-end of "intensive discussion"—which, he admitted might be termed lobbying—with a number of pro-bonus Congressmen. At a conference with members of the newly organized District of Columbia Chapter of the Veterans, he mapped out the "strategy" to be followed.

"The veterans have been so successful in getting what they want, and since we only want what they got, we intend to go in for a campaign that will be in the best veteran tradition," said Riggs.

At the conference with Riggs were a group of students of the School of Foreign Service of Georgetown University who have organized a District Chapter of Veterans of Future Wars. They were John I. Loving, of this city, department commander; P. Verner Lindhard, vice commander; John G. Shields, treasurer, and Bennett H. Berman, secretary. Edwyn Stickel, adjutant in charge of the Home Fire Division, was not present.

The Home Fire Division is the organization's auxiliary unit for future mothers, wives and sisters of the veterans of the next war.

Although the District chapter has been established only a few days, Commander Loving reported subsidiary units were being organized at Columbus and George Washington universities, as well as at the Schools of Foreign Service and Law at Georgetown. The Georgetown units, Loving explained, have no official connection with the school, but are composed of students attending the university.

Each member pays a 25-cent membership fee for which he gets a veterans' button, a membership card and a subscription to the weekly news letter of the organization. Half of the fees is kept by the local units and half goes to the State organization.

Collections are proceeding splendidly, almost $1,000 having been contributed since the founding of the organization, reported Riggs.

"If we continue on the present scale we'll turn out to be another Townsend scheme," he added, laughing. "However, we aren't paying any salaries to anyone but a few typists."

Hospitalization Plan's Support Almost Tripled

7,000 to 20,000 Increase in Subscribers Shown at Annual Meeting.

Subscribers of Washington Group Hospitalization, Inc., have almost tripled in the past year, Joseph H. Himes, president, told the organization's annual meeting last night.

With the list of participants increased from 7,000 to 20,000, he predicted "the day will come" when all local hospitals would devote their entire facilities to group subscribers.

He emphasized the plan requires local residents to pay only 75 cents a month to be assured of a hospital bed without added expense for 21 days a year in case of serious illness.

Himes reported all of the trustees consider their responsibilities as a "splendid opportunity" for service to Washington and its people.

"To the subscriber, the average man and woman for whom the plan was devised," he added, "it is our purpose to make readily available the splendid facilities of the nine leading hospitals of our city; to relieve him of the cares and worries attendant upon the largest single element of his expense in serious illness, and to do this simply and effectively.

"Our responsibility to him is to see that he gets what he pays for—that the funds he entrusts to us serve the purpose for which they were given."

Another desire of the organization, Himes explained, is to reduce free cases and stabilize the income of hospitals.

Washington's hospitalization plan is considered as a model throughout the country, Himes declared, and has made the Capital City a better place in which to live.

Trustees elected included Mr. Himes, Henry P. Blair, Gen. Frank T. Hines, Howard W. Kacy and Mark Lansburgh.

Mr. Viner will aid the fund by presenting a cash gift matching the sum raised by the ball. Arrangements for the ball are being supervised by a committee headed by Henry Salus.

800 NRA Employes Open Fight To Save Jobs Expiring Tuesday

Eight hundred NRA employes yesterday began a fight to save their jobs, due to expire automatically Tuesday.

A committee from NRA Lodge, American Federation of Government Employes, sought to see M. Kerlin, administrative assistant to Secretary Roper, without success. An appointment, however, was arranged for today.

Committee members included Jessie Buck, Henry Ryan, Alvin David and Paul Hutchins.

President Roosevelt by executive order decreed that the task of completing a summary of NRA results should be assumed by the new committee for industrial analysis, under the Secretary of Commerce.

Before his executive order was announced the 800 remaining NRA employes were notified their jobs would expire Tuesday. The executive order said they would be eligible for employment under the committee, but their retention would not be mandatory.

Committee employes, however, are to receive security wages of around $55 a month as on other WPA projects. The NRA employes will contend they should be retained at their regular classified Government salaries because of their familiarity with the work.

"To cut our wages to such an extent," a committee member said, "would be a disgrace and would be an active threat to every Government employe in town.

"We intend to kick up as much dust as possible because we are entitled to these jobs. We certainly know all about the work and can do it better than new people."

Ex-Bus Boy To Get Chair For Murder

Death Mandatory With Official Sentence Likely Friday.

Thomas Jordan, dapper 30-year-old former convict, must die in the electric chair for the murder of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes during the Garden T Shoppe holdup five years ago.

A jury of 12 men, after having been deadlocked for more than 24 hours, yesterday found the former chef and busboy guilty of murder in the first degree.

The sentence of death is mandatory, and Jordan will be officially condemned to death by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, before whom he was tried, probably next Friday.

Throughout yesterday morning Jordan, who had spent a sleepless night in District Jail, paced his basement cell in the courthouse.

When the foreman of the jury knocked on the door of the venire chamber and said that an agreement had been reached, he was taken to the courtroom.

Jordan's face blanched when he heard the verdict. He swayed slightly, then steadied himself as he was led to the patrol outside.

Charges Frame-Up.

"It's the dirtiest frame-up I ever heard of," he whispered to a marshal who was guarding him.

"I was framed, do you hear? Framed!"

"I'll burn, and I'm glad of it."

The condemned man has four days in which to file an appeal. Although his attorney, Richard Bowman, made no statement after the verdict, it was regarded as certain he would seek to save his client's life by appealing the case.

No sooner had the Jordan verdict been announced than authorities redoubled their search for the two other participants in the crime—Edith Dodsworth, the discontented waitress and an unknown bandit who joined in the robbery Good Friday evening in 1931.

The Dodsworth woman was indicted with Jordan. She was blamed throughout the trial by Jordan for leading him astray.

At request of defense counsel, the jury was polled and each man sternly pronounced Jordan guilty of all six counts contained in his murder indictment.

In the front row of the crowded courtroom sat William Jaynes, widower of the woman who was slain when the hooded bandits entered the cafe shortly before midnight.

Went to Jury Thursday.

"I feel that justice has been done," he said. "I want Edith Dodsworth and the other masked gunman punished, too."

But only Thursday night, when the jury still was locked up, Jaynes had said:

"I know my wife, if she could come from her grave, would not want Jordan executed."

The case went to the jury Thursday at 1:43 p. m., after Assistant United States Attorney Roger Robb submitted a rebuttal argument to the jury. The verdict was returned shortly before 1 p. m. yesterday by the veniremen who had spent the night in a hotel.

With the verdict came the solution to one of the most baffling of Washington's murder mysteries, which took place on April 3, 1931, in the Garden T Shoppe on Columbia road.

Maj. Gen. Westover Tells of Air Thrills

The thrills of modern flying—from piloting high speed Army planes to being lost in the Canadian woods after a balloon race—were described to the National Geographic Society last night at Constitution Hall by Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps.

Gen. Westover traced the history of military aviation in this country, and showed motion pictures of air corps activities in both war and peace. He also described some of his experiences in balloon flying and racing.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society, who announced that the Air Corps commander recently had been elected a member of the Board of Trustees of the society to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Gen. A. W. Greely.

Fabulous Movie Salaries Attacked by Father Walsh

Georgetown Vice President Questions Policy of Big Pay Checks for Film Stars, With Nation's Presidents Underpaid.

Fabulous salaries paid to movie stars of "questionable intelligence" drew biting sarcasm last night from the Rev. Edmund J. Walsh, S. J., Georgetown University vice president, in a Gaston Hall lecture.

He pointed to the fat pay checks of the cinema performers in protesting against the comparatively small salaries of the President and other public officials.

"Democracy in the United States," he said, "has been notoriously deficient in the compensation paid to public servants.

"The President of the United States receives $75,000 a year to administer a gigantic organization involving the destiny of over 120,000,000 citizens.

"He is cast aside after four or eight years with no emolument or pension or public mark of appreciation. Yet the president of a corporation in New York was recently reported as receiving an annual salary of $364,432.

Need Money for Alimony.

"There are movie stars of questionable intelligence, but with provocative technique and a string of divorces to their discredit, who will receive for a single erotic picture more than the President of the United States earns for 365 days of killing service and unending responsibility.

"To be sure, many cinema heroes and heroines will need that balance to meet alimony charges, maintain their yachts and provide funds for a new matrimonial lottery."

Father Walsh repeated his often voiced warning against the danger of Communism.

"Russian absolutism in its very charter," he said, "is limited only by the planet. Every ship that brings a new consignment of immigrants to an American port or lands a new official for a Russian trading corporation or a Soviet embassy may be a carrier of the disease.

Fish in Every Crisis.

"And the propagandists of revolt were taught in Moscow last August how to fish in the troubled waters of every national crisis, whether it be one of unemployment or financial stringency or panic or shortage of food.

"Man lives so much in his physical being that his social, his religious, his material and his political development are frequently conditioned to a measurable degree by his physical environment and should these surroundings be such as to foster discontent, exhaustion and bitterness, a situation ensues which is cunningly and deliberately manipulated by the radical agitator in his quest for world revolution."

Sen. Pope Calls For Law to End Profits of War

He Outlines Peace Program at Dinner Opening Women's Rally.

Speaking at a dinner of the American Association of University Women at its clubhouse last night opening conference of delegates from the South Atlantic States, Senator James P. Pope, of Idaho, proposed a two-point program to eliminate war.

He urged that profits from war be taken away through legislation and that the United States co-operate as far as practicable with other countries in preserving peace.

Co-operation with other countries he defined as keeping the exportation of goods to warring nations down to peacetime levels. He said that this country's legislators for the last three years had been "aggressively active in domestic affairs, but aggressively passive in dealing with foreign affairs."

The critical international situations that have arisen to frequently are due, the Senator said, to the lust for power of such leaders as Hitler and Mussolini. In all countries, he stated, the people feel a strong desire for peace.

In an open discussion after his speech, Senator Pope spoke favorably of arbitration. Talking things over around a table, he said, gave all participants a chance to "cool down."

The conference will continue today with committee meetings this morning and a luncheon at 12:30. About 85 delegates are attending, 60 of them from points outside Washington.

Five Kite Contests Scheduled April 4

Five kite contests will be held at playgrounds throughout the city next Saturday under direction of the District Playground Department.

Locations will be Monument Grounds, Anacostia C, Anacostia D, Banneker, and Garrett Park, Md. Three classifications of kites will be plane surface, with tails; plane surface without tails, and cellular kites subdivided into box, tetrahedral and coyne types.

Tuberculosis Battle Gains Are Outlined

Physiological Society Told of Strides Made Against Disease.

'Canned' Blood Transfusion Work Also Described to Group.

New researches, termed a great advance toward conquering the "white plague," in which new determinations of 170 different substances manufactured by the tuberculosis germ in the human body have been made, were announced yesterday at the meeting of the American Physiological Society.

Dr. R. J. Anderson, of Yale University, in summing up nine years' work by several experimenters, said that three of these chemicals, an acid, a sugar and a protein, have been isolated and their chemical nature learned.

The three, he said, are made by the tuberculosis germ itself from materials in the human body. They have been found to be poisonous to animals suffering from the disease.

Research is now going forward, it was learned, to find substances which will conteract the effect of these chemicals, and thus, perhaps, find a direct method for treating the disease.

"Canned" Blood.

How blood might be canned for future use in emergency transfusions was suggested by three scientists from the University of Tennessee.

The experimenters, John Stanbury, Edna Warweg and William R. Anderson, told the meeting that they had removed the blood of dogs and cats, substituting for it a salt solution in which were the blood cells of another dog or cat.

Technique of the process included putting the animal under ether and withdrawing a large amount of blood from a neck artery. Then the salt solution was injected in the same artery and the process repeated until all of the animal's blood had been replaced.

This, it was said, might be a new way toward possible preservation of blood in jars in readiness for transfusions instead of having to find a blood donor. The canning might be possible, it was said, if the blood cells could be preserved independently and mixed in the salt solution when needed.

Like Piano Strings.

Edmund P. Fowler, jr., and T. W. Forbes, both of Columbia University, described experiments which showed that the hearing mechanism is like a set of piano strings, each of which vibrates sympathetically to a sound of the same pitch to which it is tuned, and generates an electric current.

To learn this, the pair placed electrolytic solutions on the membrane of the middle ear of an anesthetized cat. The solution progressively destroyed tiny electric currents from tones of higher pitch to those lower and lower, making it appear that one string after another went out of commission.

Cherry Blossoms Expected April 5

Cherry blossoms of the single variety may be expected about April 5, it was announced yesterday by Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, after an inspection had been made by horticulturalists of his department under the supervision of David Saunders.

The double blossom cherry trees in the vicinity of East Potomac Park near Hains Point probably will not bloom for at least two weeks after the trees around the basin. There is possibility that they were harder hit than the basin trees also because they were under water much longer.

Plans are being carried forward for the annual cherry blossom festival despite the muddy condition of the park and the threat to the trees, and a large attendance is expected this year. In the past there have been as many as 500,000 visitors who have come to Washington for this show.

Music, Dancing and Arctic Romance Are Prime Factors in the New Screen Bills

Musical Farce Is Feature at Earle Theater

Paul Lukas Stars on Stage; Arctic Comedy at Fox; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"COLLEEN." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Robert Lord, adapted to the screen by Peter Milne, F. Hugh Herbert and Sig Herzig, featuring Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Jack Oakie, Joan Blondell, Hugh Herbert, Louise Fazenda and Paul Draper, with Marie Wilson, Louis Alberni, Hobart Cavanaugh, Burton Churchill, Addison Richards and Charles Coleman, Spencer Charters, Andre Beranger and Mary Treen. Music and lyrics by Harry Warren and Al Dubin; dances staged by Bobby Connolly. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

If "Colleen" fails to exert that devastating wallop that has been exercised by so many of the Warner Brothers' screen musicals, it is because the story is scattered rather than cohesive, intermittent instead of continuous and rambling where it should be direct. The musical numbers—and many of them are staggeringly spectacular — are interpolations that are not essential to plot development, as is also true, but in lesser measure, of the intricate dances that are introduced by Ruby Keeler, Paul Draper and one of those huge choral groups that invariably are photographed in overhead angle shots against backgrounds that seem to be miles in extent.

The trouble seems to be that the Warners, not content with telling a simple story in a naturalistic manner, attempted to crowd too much entertainment into "Colleen." In its individual departments it is superlatively well done, but these individual departments do not hang together any too well.

Mr. Ames Causes It All.

The whole business has to do with an eccentric millionaire, who owns valuable properties that are rented out to all manner of expansive enterprises. In the course of a round of his real estate holdings, Cedric Ames picks up a young wildcatter, who wishes to write his biography for $500, and winds up by becoming the Ames executive office manager; plucks a candy dipper out of the sweetmeat factory and proposes to adopt her as his daughter; closes the fashion salon just as Colleen Reilly is getting it on a paying basis, and otherwise manifests hilarious symptoms of the arrested mental development which quite obviously is his major handicap in the world of big business.

There are so many tangled love affairs mixed up in the melange that it seems hardly worth while to get into anything so complex. As it finally works out, to the best of my slightly muddled memory—it is the Cedric Ames influence—Dick Powell wins the favor of Ruby Keeler, Jack Oakie and Joan Blondell hit it off, Paul Draper is left out in the cold and Louise Fazenda practically dies a thousand deaths while her daffy husband, Hugh Herbert, chases a beautiful brunette all over the palatial liner on which they all are sailing to Europe for no good reason. On second thought, and remembering the general contour of that particular brunette, that Hugh Herbert Ames fellow may not have been as crazy as he seemed! Herbert's comic impersonation, incidentally, is a classic.

Top Honors Divided.

Top vocal honors, of course, go to Dick Powell; top comedy to Hugh Herbert and Jack Oakie; top dancing to Paul Draper and Ruby Keeler. If Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers are to have any close rivals on the screen, Mr. Draper and Miss Keeler seem destined to be the ones.

One of the song hits of the picture is "A Boulevardier From the Bronx," done with a fine touch of burlesque by Jack Oakie and Joan Blondell, while the waiter is removing the 1923 vintage wine and bringing them some of "this year's model!"

In the matter of production, "Colleen" is one of the most opulent of recent releases.

Paul Lukas, headlining the vaudeville portion of the bill, makes a thoroughly agreeable impression, although his brief colloquy with a blonde young woman seeking an interview is an "act" which enables him to reveal few of the qualities that have made him one of the most popular of screen leading men. He does, at least, betray a polished sense of humor and makes the graceful appearance of an actor who also is a gentleman.

Two "Stop the Show."

Two turns virtually tie the stage program in knots. They are Ada Brown, an Aunt Jemima type of songstress, late of "Brown Buddies," and Boy Foy, an intrepid blond young man, who offers a juggling turn aboard a unicycle. Ample Ada Brown scored emphatically with four songs—"I'll Take the South," "Tiny Little Fingerprints," "Snake In the Grass" and "Truckin'"—and the youthful Foy performed miracles of co-ordination in juggling and balancing feats while spinning around the stage on one wheel.

The bill introduced by the amiable Miss Audrey Sieber, in all of her new spring toggery, is opened by the Starnes, Annavan and Seymour Dance Revue, in which is revealed a vast amount of clever ballroom, adagio, acrobatic and tap dancing.

Paramount News and Freddie Clark's orchestral contributions round out a bill that will please those who find it possible to surrender to the spring's first implication that there really is such a thing as a "silly season."

Loew's Fox

"PETTICOAT FEVER." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play by Mark Reed, adapted to the screen by Harold Goldman, starring Myrna Loy and Robert Montgomery, supported by Reginald Owen, Winifred Shotter, Otto Yamaoka, Bo Ching and Iris Yamaoka. Directed by George Fitzmaurice. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

If you hunted high and low in the Hollywood hills and valleys, you couldn't find a better young lady than Myrna Loy to start a heat wave in Labrador.

So, with Myrna dropping out of the arctic skies upon poor, lonesome, romantic, impulsive Robert Montgomery, who never was and never wanted to be a man's man, there develops one of the smartest, briskest, funniest and most likeable little farces of the season.

It is very, very silly and probably as unimportant as it is impossible, but it is fun and fast and crisp.

Myrna is Irene Campion. Irene is encumbered slightly by a fiance, who causes Radio Operator Dascom Dinsmore (Robert M.) to observe to her, "You must have been very unhappy at home." Dinsmore (absolutely no realtion to Elsie), is also encumbered by a fiance of two years standing, but he has forgotten all about her, thinking such things outlawed "like bad debts."

Complications Set In.

You can see from this sketchy outline that when Dascom, Irene and the two encumbrances get together in a remarkably comfortable "shack" in Labrador, there are complications and the temperature rises.

Such an affair is simply gravy for both Bob and Myrna and they make a holiday out of it—though they must have suffered in those fur rigs. They are two of the handsomest and pleasantest of young acting people and know how to time their comedy.

Reginald Owen is the very sappy fiance of Irene, and Winifred Shotter, a new girl, is good as Dascom's bride-to-be. The Eskimos, Big Seal, Little Seal and Kimo, are very nice people.

Thanks are due Director Fitzmaurice for splendid pacing and some beautiful business, notably Montgomery's opening pantomime, the duet dance in the snow, and the gun scene.

On the stage this week, the zanies have it all their own way.

Powell Timberg, Et Al.

First and foremost, there is that drummer-artist, Mr. Jack Powell, of the black face and white drum sticks who plays on everything and anything in sight (even on the head of Speaker of the House Byrns at a Garner party once according to society editors). He has a heavenly time doing it too—full of little grunts and delighted murmurs.

Herman Timberg is back with Herman jr. and his assorted stooges. We'd like a little more of Jr.'s dancing and less stooges, but they do make you laugh most of the time.

The opening dance act Mae Wynn and Zella Co., is notable for its trick staging ideas, and the closing Tin Pan Alley Quintet can hardly play and sing their own song hits for the audience's applause. Personally, we're a little slow at identifying the numbers and just as we get around to recognizing a tune the enthusiasts start to cheer and we lose it. But the boys, Charlie Tobias, Al Sherman, Maury Mencher, Gerald Marks and Al Lewis, have written good songs.

Phil Lampkin's Western overture is particularly entertaining this week, and the newsreel with Al Smith, trading hats and kisses, completes the bill.

"THE STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR." First National picturization of a story and screen play by Sheridan Gibney and Pierre Collins, starring Paul Muni, supported by Josephine Hutchinson, Anita Louise, Donald Woods, Fritz Leiber, Henry O'Neill, Halliwell Hobbes, Dickie Moore and Ruth Robinson. Directed by William Dieterle. Reviewed Friday morning (second week return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

While the work of England's Sir James Young Simpson and America's Horace Wells and William Thomas Green Morton brought, through anesthesia, relief from the tortures of the surgeon's knife, there still remained the ogre of post-operative infection to beset the minds and bodies of the ailing.

It was not until Louis Pasteur finally spiked the theory of spontaneous generation and laid thereby the foundations of aseptic surgery that modern surgery really started on its present precision.

This second fundamental of medical science is one of the most thrilling in any history, and it is indeed fitting that "The Story of Louis Pasteur" is made to recount those earlier days.

With Paul Muni as the great Pasteur, the story is off to a flying start, for no other player could have been selected to interpret the part so flawlessly as has this master character actor. With a selected company, for their several parts, scarcely less well adapted to their parts than Muni to his, this picture forms not only a magnificent tribute to a great mind and an untiring scientist, but a record, as well, of struggle against overwhelming odds, with every foot the direct and simple truth.

Diverting short subjects and 15 minutes of Paramount and Universal newsreels make up the rest of a program of unusual merit.

Brings New Type of Taps to Films

As those who remember his week of personal appearances on the stage of the Earle Theater will attest, there is no dancer on the stage quite like Paul Draper, nephew of the famous diseuse, Ruth Draper. His extraordinary agility now has been transferred to the screen, and in "Colleen," currently on the screen at the Earle, he and Ruby Keeler execute some of the trickiest tap dances ever caught by a camera. Their ensemble backgrounds were directed by Bobby Connolly, former dance director for the Ziegfeld "Follies," and are among the most pretentious of the season.

"MODERN TIMES." United Artists' release of Charlie Chaplin's latest feature-length production, written, directed and starred in by himself, with Paulette Goddard, Henry Bergman, Chester Conklin, Stanley Stanford, Hank Mann, Lewis Natheux and Allen Garcia in support. Musical score composed by Chaplin and conducted by Alfred Newman. Reviewed Friday morning (second week) by Sally Stroud.

Charlie Chaplin is all things to all people. To the leftists, he is a prophet struggling to open a door cemented with tenacious falacies. To the sophisticates he is a slew-footed Puck. To the average movie-goer he is king of slapstick.

This story falls into his familiar patterns: A social misfit tries to "make a go of it," encounters all sorts of obstacles, disappointments, catastrophes. Finally walks outside camera range down a dusty road. But this time it is We Two, for he has Goddard by the hand.

It is said the story has no message. There seems a definite one: Modern high speed civilization has no room for amiable, befuddled, off-key individuals. This is a world of cogs, wheels, rush, hurry and scientific solution of problems. The least that the inadaptables can do is to try for adjustment. That failing, they can walk gracefully off-stage.

Comedy and Pathos Blend.

The thinly drawnline dividing comedy and pathos sometimes confuses, as in the scenes with the automatic feeding machine. The satirical sketch with the minister's wife concerning gastritis, the premature launching of the ship, the singing waiter skit, incidents in the tumble-down shack, all are fine, a steady sequence of sorrow, hilarity, heart-twanging sadness.

And through it all runs the tweedle-deeing of the Chaplinesque theme melody. Topped only by the brilliant use of heavy brasses, reeds and thin-singing violins to imitate the human voice.

Though his hair is four different shades, his satirical intent sometimes overly subtle, with all his faults, Charlie can put on a pair of skates, twist his minute moustache, and lick a regiment of modern comedians with both hands tied behind him.

A FitzPatrick Travelogue, "Gateways to Canada," "At the Lido," with a galaxy of celebrities and the Metrotone News, aftermath of flood disaster, Elsworth Vines, England's Steeplechase, the President receiving a degree from Rollins College and Fanny Brice and Jack Arthur in a very rare sketch about spring, in which there is a great deal of sneezing, complete the bill.

"WIFE VERSUS SECRETARY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Faith Baldwin, with screen play by Norman Krasna, Alice Duer Miller and John Lee Mahin, starring Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Myrna Loy, supported by May Robson, George Barbier, James Stewart, Hobart Cavanaugh, Tom Dugan and Gilbert Emery. Directed by Clarence Brown. Reviewed Friday afternoon (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

From the very title, down through the various departments of production, to director and, especially, the cast, "Wife Versus Secretary" could scarcely be less than a smart, sophisticated, fast-moving comedy-drama of the current era. And this Clark Gable-Jean Harlow-Myrna Loy opus is all of that, and quite deserving of its third F street week, which started yesterday.

Many a fan will not care what this trio of stars does or how it is done, persons and personalities being quite sufficient to justify attendance at the theater. Others, however, who are more particular in their likes even of this trinity, will find a refreshing variation of the usual theme suggested by the title, where the husband-employer is the third corner of that much-used amatory triangle.

In production and performance "Wife Versus Secretary" is quite up to the standards of producer and cast, thus assuring full value in entertainment.

The auxiliary program is one of the theater's recent best, comprising a release of the Paramount Pictorial, featuring the shifting sands of the Oregon coast, dress pattern making, and freak birds and animals; an issue of "Broadway Highlights," showing a galaxy of personalities in sundry New York establishments, and a release of the Metrotone News, full of entertaining and informative items.

Dr. Simon to Preach.

Dr. Abram Simon, rabbi of Washington Hebrew Congregation, will preach at 10:30 a. m. services today. His subject will be "And God Called Moses."

"FOLLOW THE FLEET." RKO-Radio picturization of the stage play "Shore Leave," adapted to the screen by Dwight Taylor and Allen Scott, starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, supported by Randolph Scott, Harriet Hilliard and Astrid Allwyn. Music and lyrics by Irving Berlin, ensembles staged by Hermes Pan. Directed by Mark Sandrich. Reviewed (fourth week) by W. A. Whitney.

Running true to Astaire-Rogers precedent, "Follow the Fleet" yesterday entered its fourth consecutive week—and well it should, for here Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers are seen quite at their top (hat) form, sending still higher the screen standard in the terpsichorean art. To what we, and others, have said, nothing has to be added at this time: Just read that italicized paragraph immediately preceding and draw your own conclusions—and you can not miss!

As it actually was in the earlier days of the engagement, "Follow the Fleet" might even now stand upon its four famous feet, yet further to augment the superlative qualities of the show, pictured history continues its onward progress in the twelfth issue of "The March of Time," a subject of highly informative merit.

"Li'l Ainjil," a cartoon of lesser import, and a release of the Pathe News round out a bill unhesitatingly recommended.

"NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH." The National City Players present the comedy in three acts by James Montgomery, under the direction of Wilda Kilbourn, with settings designed by Zeno Kent. In Vermont Hall, 1308 Vermont avenue northwest, March 27 and 28. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

The relative impossibility of a strict adherence to veracity was demonstrated again last evening when the newly organized National City Players offered James Montgomery's hilarious "Nothing But the Truth" before an enthusiastic audience in Vermont Hall.

Since the original production, in the fall of 1916, of this commentary upon the value and wisdom of a judicious utilization of white lies, this dramatization of Frederick S. Isham's story of the same name has been part and parcel of the average acting group's catalogue of productions.

And they have not been ill-advised, for quite generally, as it was again made plain last evening, "Nothing But the Truth" offers a sure-fire, almost actor-proof comedy. Logically contrived and studded with dialogue and situations that cannot fail to draw forth round after round of spontaneous laughter, the play is practically ideal for a beginning troupe.

As others have done, so did the National City Players score a hit, with Clifford Weare upholding the cause of unmitigated veracity against Bennett A. Mossbarger, Harold L. Minor and Joe C. Fought, as the doubting Thomases who shared equally in covering the $10,000 wager. What little love theme there is, is prettily carried by Lillie Beinz.

Others in the cast, victims of the relentless truth-teller, included J. Robert Boatman, Marjorie Russell, Olga Dryden, Madelyn Burry and Lucille Martin. Laney Payne Sadler played the customary maid.

Incidental music of the evening was furnished by the National City Orchestra, under the direction of Klaud Bittner.

Arts Club

"AN EVENING WITH 'GODEY'S LADIES BOOK." The Costume Committee of the Arts Club of Washington, in association with the Drama Committee, presents a program suggested by the famous women's publication, arranged by Mrs. Charles Bittinger and directed by Pauline Stanley, with Lofton Moneyway as master of ceremonies. At the Arts Club, March 27 and 29. Reviewed Friday night by W. A. Whitney.

THE PROGRAM:

"MR. AND MRS. WOODRIDGE," reading by Lofton Moneyway, with accompanying pantomime.

A CHARADE, acted in three scenes.

"THE QUILTING PARTY," is one scene.

THE FASHION PARADE.

Another of those unusual evenings for which the Arts Club of Washington is widely known was enjoyed last night when the costume and drama committees successfully translated to the stage the spirit and the time of the famed "Godey's Ladies Book."

Arranged by Mrs. Charles Bittinger from sundry issues of the magazine over its publication life—from 1830 to 1897—the presenting group admirably re-created the delightful life of that era, even though to more modern eyes it seemed almost too fantastic for belief.

Opening the evening was the combination reading-pantomine of "Mr. and Mrs. Woodridge," taken from an 1841 issue of the journal. Here was unfolded, in the words of Lofton Moneyway and the miming of the players, the story of Mrs. Woodridge (Mrs. Charles Pigott), whose household parsimony and personal extravagance were the topic of common gossip, especially by Mrs. Squanderfield (Dorothy Winchcole) and Mrs. Pinchington (Elizabeth Clark). As a result of overhearing a recounting of her foibles, Mrs. Woodridge mends her ways and becomes a paragon of all wifely virtues. Arthur McManus plays the husband.

The charade—whose answer should not be divulged—was played in three scenes: the first, the first syllable; the second, the second syllable; the third, the whole word. Performing were Maurice Leisenring, as guardian of Lila LaGarde, who was in love with David Betts. Lansing Hall was the confidante of Miss LaGarde.

Fashion Parade De Luxe.

The most enjoyable portion of the program perhaps was the "Fashion Parade," with which the evening's entertainment came to a close. For a full 20 minutes there paraded across the stage examples of the couturiere's art not only ove rthe period of the Godey series, but amplified, as well, to include costumes back to Colonial times and forward to the present.

Throughout the evening in various interludes, music was furnished by Mrs. Robert Lefevre, soprano, and Margaret Tolson and LaSalle Spier at the piano.

Term-End Bill Is Offered by Stage Students

National Academy Pupils Are Presented in Last Program of Term.

TERM-END DRAMA AND DANCE RECITAL. S. E. Cochran presents the students of the National Academy of Stage Training in a program of dramatic sketches, under the direction of Maurice Greet and Mildred Coleman, with a brief dance prorem arranged by Marion D. Venable, with Alice Applegate, accompanist. At the National Theater. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

The Program:

"THE MARRIAGE OF KITTY," the first act of the comedy by Cosmo Gordon Lennox.

"PAGING TITO," one-act comedy-drama by Harriet Robinson, directed by Mildred Coleman.

"A MOMENT OF DARKNESS," one-act drama by Mary Thurman Pyle, directed by Mildred Coleman.

"DRAMA IMMORTALIS," one-act fantasy arranged and adapted by Mervin Gentry.

Presenting its tenth term-end show, the National Academy of Stage Training, formerly the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts, brought to a close its 100th week of operation, offering a program of three one-act plays, a portion of a full-length comedy and a brief dance recital.

Following the final curtain three diplomas and two awards of honor were conferred upon five students completing three terms of specified instruction. The diplomas were granted to Eleanor Charis, Marion Anderson and Mary A. Clagett, with the awards being presented to Helene Wallack and Idalyn Cohen, members of the junior classes. Presentation was made by Director Maurice Greet, assisted by Mildred Coleman.

In the dramatic numbers presented, the students did commendable work, showing the results of studious effort. While the productions themselves failed sometimes to be all which might be desired from an audience point of view, the youthful thespians, nevertheless, worked hard, giving their best in the cause of their art. The opening bit was the first act of Cosmo Gordon Lennox's "The Marriage of Kitty," a fortunate choice in that this act is relatively complete in itself.

In the role of Kitty was Betty Brunstetter, an ingenue of potential talent. John Edmonston was her godfather who, to save an inheritance, marries her off to a client, played by R. P. Dickerson. Katherine Hyde and David Levine completed the cast.

Effective Playlets.

"Paging Tito" is the serio-comic treatment of jewel-selling racketeers in Paris, preying on the gullibilities of visiting Americans, with Betsy Smith as the "sucker," who is saved by Anna Nathanson from the machinations of Beatrice Moore and Eleanor Charis. Gertrude Smith was the ubiquitous maid. Of the group, it was Miss Smith who seemed to be most at home in her part.

Played on a earlier program, "A Moment of Darkness," by Mary Thurman Pyle, is still a tense drama of life within th swing room of the woman's ward in a State penitentiary, during the period of an execution. Margaret Mary Edmonston, not unknown even now in local drama circles, was the outstanding performer, depicting the condemned man's sister who commits suicide immediately following, in a moment of darkness, the murder of the matron, played by Justine Corby. Others in the company included Josephine V. Luongo, Catharine Ryan, Ruth Richardson, Marguerite Cooke, Marian Anderson, and Betty Seibert.

Closing the dramaturgic portion of the program, Marvin Gentry's fantasy, "Drama Immortalis," was offered, peopled by 14 of the more famous Shakespearean characters gathered more or less to talk things over and to pay tribute to "our master." Ted Tenley, as the Bard, tells his characters that they are immortal notwithstanding those who depict them may pass away. Mr. Tenley, also prominent in Washington play groups, was especially effective, although Eleanor Charis' Lady Macbeth, Eleanor Ray's Ophelia, Karen Lloyd's Puck, Gladys Gibson's Ariel, Billie Stull's Juliet and Catharine Ryan's Portia were among the convincingly read roles. Betty Siebert, Ralpha Randall, Mary Agnes Eberhart, Helene Wallach Ruth Richardson, Idalyn Cohen, Alice Sturtevant and Jean Graves also were present.

Dancing Shares in Bill.

Breaking the dramatic program into two parts, Terpsichore had her chance, and, under the direction of Marion D. Venable, the embryo Pavlovas presented their routines with genuine, though occasionally belabored, sincerity.

Especially good were the solo gavotte by Nancy Nellis Warner and the more lively polka by Mary Jo Hall, Betty Jane Holland, Betty Hall, Ruana Dubel, Mary Theresa Heveran, Idelyn Kass and Jacqueline Lanier.

Other dancers were Gladys Gibson, Billie Stull, Eleanor Ray, Nancy Brumbaugh, Ann Harris, Lelias Scott, Frances Miller, Jean Graves, Carolyn Tucker, Yvonne Julihan and Emily Lindsay.

You run into all types of pests and nuisances in this business . . . One that is indigenous to spring, when the saps are out, is the sender of the phony telegram, and his is a curious mentality . . . Invariably the telegram carries the news of a celeb's marriage and when it arrives, as a matter of routine, your secretary calls the celeb, learns that there is no truth to the wire and chucks it in the wastepaper basket . . . A phony telegram can be spotted as far away as Walter Johnson can throw a silver dollar, because there is always a false ring to it . . . The signature generally is sufficient to prod your suspicions, for they attach signatures of friends who never go to the formality of wiring . . . Unwise Doubles.

A player considering making a penalty double should give the most careful consideration to various factors. First, he must realize that he is about to give the declarer some invaluable information as to the location of key cards, hence he should weigh the value of the potential penalty against the additional chance he is presenting to the opponents. This does not mean that he should "lean over backward" in doubling for penalties, but simply that he should take care that his doubles are not mere boomerangs, to return and slice off his own head.

It is particularly foolish to double a suit that you know will not be the final contract, unless you feel reasonably sure that either you or your partner can take care of the opponent's best suit.

In today's hand East should have known that there was no chance of North's six club bid standing as the final contract. Therefore, he merely wasted his breath in doubling it, and made the declarer's slam contract in spades infinitely easier.

South, dealer.

4 Sp.	5 Ht.	6 Cl.	Double
6 Sp.	Pass	Pass	Double (final bid)

The fact that East had five clubs to the Q J made his double of that suit unwise. It was inconceivable that South, who had started with a pre-emptive spade bid, would allow the contract to stand. The double of six spades was much better, but its effectiveness was nullified by the previous double.

West opened the ace of hearts and the declarer ruffed. Six rounds of trumps, on the last four of which dummy discarded one diamond and three clubs, left East in an uncomfortable position. He had to keep four clubs to guard the dummy's four and was reduced, therefore, to the blank K Q of diamonds. Declarer conceded a diamond trick and took the rest, for his doubled slam contract.

Without the information that the clubs were banked in the East hand, declarer might well have tried to establish the suit by one ruff.

Nats Rally to Down Cardinals, 8-4, and End Losing Streak

Gelding Wins At Aintree, Ties Mark

Golden Miller Balks at Jump; Only 10 Finish; Bostwick Seventh.

By the Associated Press.

AINTREE, England, March 27.—A chorus from 250,000 throats welled over Aintree's sun-drenched countryside today as Maj. Noel Furlong's Reynoldstown, gallant 9-year-old Irish jumper, repeated his 1935 triumph in the ninety-eighth running of the Grand National Steeplechase and equalled a record that had stood for 66 years.

Completing the hazardous, heart-breaking 4½-mile course in the same careful, perfect manner that featured his victory last year, Reynoldstown became the third horse in the history of the classic to win twice in succession.

Only Abd-El-K'Ader, in 1850-51 and The Colonel, in 1869-70 tonight shared that honor with 34 other great jumpers, six of them American-owned. Poethlyn won in 1918-19, but the 1918 race was not run at Aintree.

Only Ten Starters Finish.

Only ten of the starters finished the gruelling, spectacular race, which saw Mrs. Violet Mundy's Avenger, 3-to-1 favorite, suffer fatal injuries after completing half the journey. Anthony Mildmay's Davy Jones, despised outsider, led the field to the last jump, only to swerve off the course when his reins broke. Dorothy Paget'se Golden Miller, 1934 winner, tumbled at the first fence, regained his feet and then balked at the same jump he refused last year.

George H. (Pete) Bostwick, 26-year-old sportsman, made the best showing of the Americans when he rode his Castle Irwell into seventh place—far behind Reynoldstown but proud that he had completed the course for the first time in three efforts.

Second place went to Sir Davis Llewellyn's Ego, a 66-to-1 shot. James V. Rank's Bachelor Prince, quoted at 50-to-1, was third.

Reynoldstown, carrying 170 pounds over the route in 9:37 as compared with 9:20 1-5 last year, won without once feeling the whip. His rider, Fulke Walwyn, known as England's greatest "gentleman rider," lost his stick after the race began.

Only once did the big gelding falter and that was on the final hurdle, a furlong from the finish, when the unfortunate Davy Jones, held at 66 to 1 in the betting, swerved across Reynoldstown's track after his reins had broken. But for this heart-wrencher, which left Davy Jones' rider and owner shaking with grief and anger, the crowd might have been treated to a thrilling finish.

When the leather snapped in Mildmay's hands, Davy Jones was leading Reynoldstown by at least a length—some observers estimated the advantage at three lengths. The consensus was that the 1935 winner would have outlasted the long-shot in the final run, but Mildmay, himself, entertained no doubt but that his horse would have held off Reynoldstown's challenge.

Four U. S. Entries Fail.

As it was Walwyn checked Reynoldstown soon after taking the final hurdle and loafed across the finish line 20 lengths in front of Ego with Bachelor Prince another six lengths behind.

Stretched out back of the three leaders in order were Crown Prince, Inversible, Provocative, Castle Irwell, John Hay Whitney's American-owned Double-Crossed, Comedian and Moorland View.

The four other American starters—Whitney's Rod and Gun, and Royal Ransom, J. B. Snow's Delaneige and Jesse Metcalf's Kiltol—found Aintree's jumps too difficult and fell.

Reynoldstown's two greatest rivals in the wagering—Golden Miller and Avenger—piled up at the same hurdle — a comparatively simple thorn hedge—a few hundred yards from the starting line.

The fickle Miller fell and dumped his new rider, Evan Williams, only a moment after the field had swept away like the charge of a perfectly aligned cavalary brigade.

Williams managed to remount, while legions of the Miller's backers groaned, and struck out in pursuit of the field. The plucky effort was unavailing, however, for the Miller refused at the identical jump where he unseated Gerry Wilson last year.

Avenger's finish was more tragic. The promising young chaser, which had been backed into favoritism at the last minute, fell at the first jump the second time round the course, breaking his neck and was destroyed.

The short odds on Avenger, running his first race over the national course, appeared justified when Mrs. Mundy's color bearer reached the grand stand the first time, running strongly behind Davy Jones with Double Crossed in close pursuit.

With Avenger out, Reynoldstown was left with only a group of comparative second raters to hound down and whip on the final round. Emancipator came up to join Davy Jones and Reynoldstown and stuck his head in front for a few strides

Bob Tow Knocks Out Janek in 3d Round

Chicago, Ill., March 27.—Bob Tow, Alexandria, Va., heavyweight, knocked out Lou Janek, Buffalo, N. Y., in the third round of a bout scheduled for six rounds.

Still suffering from a cold which hampered him in his recent contest with George Siake, Tow left immediately after the bout for Alexandria, where he will rest before continuing his sensational comeback.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Bradentown, Fla., March 27.

I HAD a feeling I was leading with my chin yesterday when I rushed into print with the statement that young Buddy Lewis was something of a bum at third base, where he was permitting himself to get caught in the middle of ground balls and generally acting in a manner unbecoming a good third baseman.

POVICH.

Well, I had to eat my words today. Out there at third base this afternoon against the Cardinals, the 19-year-old lad from Chattanooga looked like a composite of Ossie Bluege, Joe Dugan and Jimmy Collins.

The kid that I had called a Palooka made the greatest play these eyes have witnessed during the spring season.

Terry Moore hit a ball toward leftfield that scorched the atmosphere. With a spring that would have made a leopard look rheumatic in comparison, young Lewis flung himself into the air, slipped his glove far over his head toward the foul line and in some manner managed to hang onto the bullet that he had caught. It was a superb effort that succeeded, and only a guy with native instinct could have brought that ball down.

But that wasn't the end of the play. Even as he settled back to earth he turned and took in the situation on the bases at a glance. There was the runner who had been on second still 10 feet away from the bag and, on the same motion that he caught the ball, young Lewis flipped it underhand to Buddy Myer to complete a double play. He was thinking, in there, which also is no mean asset for a young third baseman.

This lad Lewis may not capture the fancy of Washington fans, but he is going to make it interesting for 'em. He will make his bad plays. He is by no means a polished third sacker. But he will make some astounding plays, too. Much like Joe Cronin, he is at his best on those hot shots that demand a quick break and a far range to right or left. And, like Cronin, who used to bobble the slow ones, Lewis is troubled most by dribbling grounders.

But when he has a bat in his hands, Lewis apparently needs no apologies. A guy who has been socking the ball at the rate which Buddy has been powdering it in the Nats' exhibition games must be better than a fair hitter. A fellow can't be that lucky, even against the inferior pitching the Nats have been facing.

At one point during today's game with the Cards, young Lewis in his last eight times at bat was batting .500 with triples alone figuring in the reckoning. Three times he socked the ball for three bases against the Red Sox Thursday, and today in his second time at bat he banged the first ball pitched on a line to center field for a triple.

He gets his power out of a spare, 6 foot 1 inch frame and a batting grip that utilizes every inch of his weapon. And, as this is being written in the eighth inning of today's game with the Cardinals, there he's gone and done it again. No, it's no triple this time. It's a home run. That ball he just hit was a line drive to centerfield and would have been held to a single had not Terry Moore stumbled in chasing it. But it was well powdered just the same and a legitimate sock.

In Short—

Lewis' newly presented hitting power has doomed the third-base ambitions of Senor Bobby Estalella, whose only claim to the post was his apparent ability to outhit Lewis, but that is now gravely doubted by Bucky Harris. At Sarasota today Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox declared that he would register no protest against the chemical heating pad Ed Linke carries to the mound with him to offset the stiffening of the fingers of his pulseless pitching arm. Cronin ridiculed the protest registered by the Detroit Tigers, who are retaliating for what they believe was Griffith's part in ruling out the bonus promised 'em by Owner Walter O. Briggs if they won the pennant. At the Cardinals' camp in Bradentown, the Cards are easy to recognize in the hotel lobby or on the street. Their shirts are always open at the throat and there isn't a necktie among the squad, apparently. They not only play like the gashouse gang, but look like it. The Nats quit the West Coast today for their Orlando base in central Florida, where they play the Browns tomorrow and Sunday.

Massey Due Here Today, Meets Scott

Accompanied by his new manager, Maurie Waxman, Lew Massey, Philadelphia lightweight, will arrive in Washington today to finish training for his 10-round bout against Howard Scott at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

Pete Galiano, Baltimore welterweight, and Frankie Milles, recent conqueror of Bob Wilson, will make passes at each other in a semifinal scheduled for eight rounds.

In a six-round preliminary, Mike Tardugno will tackle Joe Bruno. Bruno, the only professional to defeat Mike, also dropped one decision to the former Georgetown captain in another contest.

In opening four-rounders, Joe Doty will meet Angelo Neola and Al Dittaman will engage Frankie Flocco.

Cardinals, Terps Scrimmage Today

Coaches Frank Dobson, of Maryland, and "Dutch" Bergman, of Catholic University, will have the opportunity of observing their football teams in action under adverse weather conditions this afternoon at College Park where the two will scrimmage.

If weather conditions are too bad, however, the workout will be postponed to a later date. Bergman last night saw Chuck Rydzewski, Catholic's prize candidate for the Olympic boxing team, fight in the trials at Charlottesville, Va., but is expected home early this morning

Mangrum Tied With Picard For Title

Both Get 288 Totals in North-South Play; Playoff Today.

By the United Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 27.—Ray Mangrum, of Texas, and Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., today tied for the thirty-fourth annual North and South Golf Championship with 72-hole aggregates of 288.

Both started the final round with 54-hole totals of 216, and both toured the course in even par 72s. Horton Smith, who began the final 18 holes with a one-stroke advantage over Picard and Mangrum, finished with a 74 for an aggregate of 289.

The play-off for the title and the $1,000 first place money and the $700 second place prize will be held tomorrow over 18 holes.

Picard staged a spectacular finish. Needing a par 3 and a par 4 on the last two holes for a tie, the Hershey sharpshooter bagged a brilliant birdie 2 on the tough seventeenth when he sank a 15-footer. The putt rimmed the cup twice before falling in.

Picard couldn't get his par 4 on the home hole, however. He sliced his drive into the rough and his long iron second faded into the deep bunker guarding the right of the green. His explosion was too strong and stopped 20 feet past the flag. His try for a win was 2 feet short.

Horton Smith, who started the final round with a one-stroke lead over Mangrum and Picard, shot a 74 for a 289 and second money. Smith began the final round with two pars and an eagle, but not in the best of physical condition, he tired badly after the turn.

Fourth money went to Tony Manero of Greensboro, N. C., who has been slipping down here over the weekends to practice. Vic Ghezzi and Harry Cooper were next in line with 293's, and were followed by Frank Walsh with 294.

Gene Sarazen, who started the final round only three strokes back of Smith, the leader, went to pieces and took a 78. Out in 37, Sarazen lost his touch completely coming home and needed 41, for an aggregate of 296 and a tie with Wiffy Cox, Ed Dudley, and Felix Serrafin, last year's runner-up.

By the Associated Press.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 27.—Jerome H. (Dizzy) Dean, St. Louis Cardinal pitcher, was fined $100 tonight by Commissioner Kennesaw Mountain Landis for failure to participate in a charity baseball game at Chattanooga, Tenn., October 27, 1935.

Judge Landis ruled Dean's refusal to go through with the game was "distinctly detrimental to baseball."

A complaint against Dean was brought by Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga baseball club of the Southern Association.

It was Dean, however, who appealed to Judge Landis, the commissioner said. Judge Landis said he was asked "to do something to Joe Engel" because of what Dean said were inaccurate public statements about the failure of Dean to play.

The talkative pitcher was quoted by Judge Landis as saying Engel's alleged statements were injuring Dean's connection with certain merchandising enterprises.

Lakeland, Fla., March 27 (AP).—Lon Warneke, who beat Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe twice in the World Series last fall, did it again today in the Grapefruit League and the Chicago Cubs defeated the Detroit Tigers 5 to 4 in an exhibition game billed as the "Little World Series."

Three long and useful hits, a triple by Jurges with the bases full, and home runs by Frank Demaree and Gabby Hartnett won the game for the Cubs. Gerald Walker got a homer for the Tigers in the second inning. Hank Greenberg, fatigued by four hours of delayed training, did not play. Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis added a World Series touch by his presence.

Lakeland, Fla., March 27 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs beat the Detroit Tigers 5 to 4 today in an exhibition game billed as "The Little World Series." A triple by Jurges with the bases filled and home runs by Demaree and Hartnett gave Chicago enough runs to win. Schoolboy Rowe went the route for Detroit, and Lon Warneke worked five innings for the Cubs

New Orleans, March 27 (AP).—Manager Steve O'Neil, of the Cleveland Indians, said today "I honestly believe we are the club they'll have to beat to win the pennant."

Rydzewski is Beaten In Olympic Ring Test

By Ben Dulaney.

A Staff Correspondent.

MEMORIAL GYMNASIUM, University, Va., March 27.—Twenty-five roaring battles led the National Intercollegiate boxing matches into the semifinal round here today. Syracuse, with five men and Penn State and Wisconsin, with four each remaining, headed the parade of universities seeking titles and the chance to place men in the Olympic finals at Chicago this summer.

Last bout on the card and the one which had most interest for the 3,500 which filled Memorial gym, brought together Freddy Cramer, Virginia's heavyweight champion, and Ferdy Rydzewski, sophomore from Catholic University, who entered the ring undefeated.

Cramer the Aggressor.

Cramer won all three rounds largely by default. Heralded as a battle of giant proportions, the fight simply didn't click, couldn't be compared with some of the rousing engagements which had come before. The first two rounds went to Cramer because he was on the aggressive most of the time. The two men opened up in the third and Cramer caught one mighty right on his glass jaw which slowed him down. He came back, however, to capture the round.

Other colleges which have men in the semifinals tomorrow afternoon are: North Carolina and Duke, three; West Virginia and L. S. U., two; Loyola, California Aggies, Miami, Hobart, King, Miss. State, Western Maryland, Virginia and Kansas State, one each. Several of the entries reached the semifinals without raising a glove while six men had to fight twice today to attain that point.

They build their boxers tough in Kansas. And the only fighter in all of Hobart College is also a man of iron. Hobert's man bore the euphonious title of Egbert Courage and he swapped mighty and most extraordinary punches with Hund, of Kansas State, to contrive to present the best all-around bout of the day. Both men collapsed quietly at the final bell. Courage, big and tough and blond, was given a close but merited decision.

The number of bouts in the evening session which completed the quarter finals was reduced to 12 when Leon Shub, Columbia U. ace, failed to appear and Abe Konick, of Pitt, was ill.

125-pound class—Padner (Wisconsin) won technical knockout over Shores (N. C.). Shores failed to answer second round bell. Kelly (Loyola of South) won technical knockout over Pasolwski (Pitt), 48 seconds of third round. Welch (W. Va.) won technical knockout over Hall (V. P. I.), 1 minute 42 seconds of second round.

145-pound class—Harmon (Wisconsin) outpointed O'Banion (La. State). Donato (Penn State) outpointed Radubsky (Ga.). McGivern (Syracuse) outpointed Rawson (Columbus). Farrar (Duke) knocked out Niedwiadoni (Ohio Northern), 1 minute 43 seconds of first round.

Heavyweight—Pontecarvo (W. M.) scored technical knockout over Morris (Illinois), 1 minute 59 seconds, first round; Richter (Penn State) outpointed Dickerson (West Virginia); Brown (Syracuse) outpointed Blanchette (North Dakota); Cramer (Virginia) outpointed Rydzewski (C. U.).

St. Aloysius Beats St. Johns for Title

Score 25 to 21; Big Crowd Sees Rousing Game.

St. Aloysius defeated St. Johns, 25 to 21, in a bitterly contested basket ball game for the Parochial championship at the Merrick Boys' Club last night. Before a turn-away crowd, the two teams tied the score no less than five times during the game and at no time was either aggregation more than four points ahead.

Raedy, St. Aloysius, was high scorer in the game, accounting for some 10 points. A trophy, symbolic of the championship, was presented by Fred Altemus to Father Gallegher of St. Aloysius in the presence of Mr. Holbrook and Brother Edward, representing the losing team.

In a preliminary game, Merrick defeated St. Stephens, 22 to 17.

Americans Take $2,800,000 Of Sweepstakes Winnings

By the Associated Press.

AMERICANS will receive approximately one-third of the $7,268,770 paid to ticket holders in the Irish Hospital Sweepstake the world over. Newspaper estimates placed American winnings at about $2,800,000 on an estimated investment of $5,000,000.

Fourteen Americans held tickets on the horses which came in first, second and third—Reynoldstown, Ego and Bachelor Prince.

Five had tickets on Reynoldstown, which paid $150,000 each; four had tickets on Ego, worth $75,000 each, and five had tickets on Bachelor Prince, worth $50,000.

Three hundred and eleven, who held tickets on horses which failed to place, will receive $3,750 apiece; four residual prize winners will get about $26,000 each, and 607 winners of consolation prizes will receive $500 each.

A partial list of winners follows:

Miss Martha Wellington, New York, secretary to the national advertising manager of the New Yorker Magaine, $150,000. "I have no idea what I'll do with the money," she said.

Mrs. Fannie Lebowitz, Albany, N. Y., $150,000. She is "going to make everybody happy."

Amos Strout, 71-year-old bachelor, Salem, Mass., $150,000. He had a "hunch" he was going to win and left town before the race was run. His sister, Mrs. Grace Walkup, said Strout would give each of his sisters and an aunt $10,000.

Rose Langelier and Reva Shontell, Lynn, Mass., telephone operators, will share $150,000. "We have not the least intention of geeting married," they asserted. "We expect plenty of proposals and plenty of salesmen, but none of them will get inside the door."

Ten Scattered Hits Given St. Louis.

Lewis, Star Afield, Gets Fluke Homer; Rally Clinches Game.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

BRADENTOWN, Fla., March 27. The Nats brutally clubbed to death their three-game losing streak this afternoon, beating it into submission with 13 hits against the pitching of the Cardinals.

For the first time in a fortnight Washington blended good pitching with its terrific batting power, and the upshot was an 8-to-4 victory over the Gas House Gang.

It was a very large afternoon again for young Buddy Lewis, who fired the Nats' attack into action with his fourth triple in two days, later added a home run to his record for the day and choked off a Cardinal rally with a circus catch that evolved into a breath-taking double play.

Manager Bucky Harris tossed his No. 1 and No. 2 pitchers, Earl Whitehill and Buck Newsom, at the Cardinals, and it was a very fine job that they did indeed in limiting the Cards to ten hits.

Only One Hit Solid.

Six of those hits the Cards acquired against Whitehill, but only one was a solid knock. They did jolt Whitehill out of three runs in the fourth inning, but of the four hits that were made in that session, two were pop flies that either were a scratchy affair that hit in front lost in the sun or drifted lazily over Buddy Myer's head, and a third was of the plate and refused to return to earth until the runner was safe.

Newsom saw his spring pitching record marred by the one run he yielded the Cardinals in the last five innings. Until the eighth, when they finally scored against him, Newsom had pitched 15 consecutive scoreless innings in the South.

Bill McGee, the first of the two rookie pitchers Frankie Frisch sent to the mound, was holding the Nats hitless until Buddy Lewis came along in the third after Whitehill had walked. Then Lewis interrupted the rookie's dreams with a hot-shot triple over Centerfielder Moore's head and when Myer singled to center the Nats had a 2-0 lead.

Whitehill in Danger.

Whitehill was endangered in the second inning when Ogrodowski bounced a scratch single over Lewis' head and McGee beat out a hit to Myer on which Kuhel failed to cover the bag, but Lewis came to his rescue with a scintillating one-hand catch of Moore's liner that he converted into a double play.

The Cardinals bounced in front, 3-2, in the fourth on a collection of fluky hits, Pepper Martin's grounder in front of the plate required so long to descend that he gained a single and Medwick then popped a Texas leaguer over Myer's head. Ripper Collins got a single on a ball Stone lost in the sun and then Stuart Martin got the only solid hit of the inning, a single to center.

Beginning with the sixth inning, the Nats started picking up runs two by two. They got a pair off Jim Winford in the sixth when Travis doubled and Stone and Bolton singled and they jarred Winford for another pair in the seventh when Reynolds socked a tremendous triple against the centerfield fence, Myer walked and Powell and Travis followed with singles. Buddy Lewis accounted for the seventh and eighth runs in the eighth when he followed Bolton's double with a cheap homer to center, the result of a single that was misplayed by Moore.

It was a sterling exhibition that Newsom gave in those last five innings. Bringing to bear both his speed and his courage, he turned the Cards back runless in two innings before they scored a single run in the eighth.

The Cards had runners on first and third with one out in the sixth, but Newsom bent to his task and forced Stuart Martin to pop up to Durocher to fly out harmlessly. Even when Orgrodowski led off

Central Y.M.C.A. Virtually Clinches A.A.U. Swimming Title

Y Team Wins All 3 Places In Relay

Rolls Up 20 Points; G. W. Is Only Rival With a Chance to Win.

By John R. Vosburgh.

The Central Y. M. C. A. virtually clinched the District A. A. U. team swimming championship last night in the Shoreham pool although the finals of the annual District title meet are still to be held tonight.

Sweeping all three places in the only men's final of the evening, the 300-yard medley relay, the association paddlers rolled up 20 points to all but assure them of the championship won last year by the Shoreham Swimming Club. The "Y" supported its showing in the one final by placing nine men in tonight's finals.

George Washington University, the only rival retaining a ghost of a chance to stop the sweep of the "Y" team, qualified six men in the finals but the 20-point margin rolled up by the association appears too big a margin for the collegians to overcome.

Margaret Hoffman Wins.

In the only other two finals of the evening, Rita Augusterfer, powerful-stroking Shoreham miss retained her status as queen of District free-style swimming by plowing to the 200-yard free-style championship, by a wide margin.

Margaret Hoffman, the former Olympic swimmer, retained her 100-yard breastroke championship in even more decisive fashion though falling a second short of her own District record. Miss Hoffman and Miss Augusterfer thereby took the lead in the race for the women's individual point trophy held by Leonora Taube. Miss Taube and Ann Bono, 50-yard champion, are welll in the running, however.

One Champion Dethroned.

Only one champion was dethroned during the evening, young Stuart Fitzhugh, of the Shoreham, being eliminated in the first heat of the 150-yard backstroke by Paul Wilson, of the "Y," and Ed Thacker, of G. W. Buddy Hodgson, of the Shoreham, was hard put to qualify for the 50-yard free-style final, in which he is defending his title, being forced to swim against Henry Voder Brugge, of George Washington, in a special heat to become the fifth finalist. Hodgson won by a couple of strokes.

Shoreham had definitely lost its team title by the close of the preliminaries, qualifying only two men for the finals. Western High qualified four men; Central, two, and Ambassador, two. Two finalists are unattached.

Gevinson Is Another Tendler, Says Leonard, Retired Champ

By Bill McCormick.

BENNY LEONARD.

THE slightly, portly, dark-haired young man was watching intently every move made by the well-trained, equally dark-haired younger man who was battering an amateur opponent relentlessly about the ring.

"He looks more like Lew Tendler than any fighter I ever saw," insisted Benny Leonard, for he was the spectator. He was referring to District A.A.U. and Golden Gloves featherweight champion Lou Gevinson, declared by many less expert than Leonard, the best prospect developed in amateur ranks here.

"Most southpaws have only left hands," pointed out the retired undefeated lightweight title holder, who should know whereof he speaks about portsiders, especially portsiders who resemble Tendler. "This boy has a nice right hook, too. That alone makes him hard to beat, but he seems to have a lot of other things that in time will make him a truly great fighter."

"The way he bobs and ducks and blocks punches, for instance. The way he bounces back when stung and the fact that he's aggressive, which most southpaws are not."

"Even the way his eyes sparkle reminds you of Tendler," continued Bennah, who is a close student of even such little things as eye sparkles in the ring. "Tendler's eyes used to fairly burn holes in you. It made one very uncomfortable, indeed."

After Gevinson had punched holes in his hapless opposition for three rounds, he went into a long session with Leonard, than whom there never was a smarter boxer in the ring.

"You lack only one thing," Bennah told him, ducking and bobbing in a southpaw stance by way of illustration. "You stay too far away from your opponent now. You should get in close so you won't have to toss 'em so far to reach the spot. Pull yourself together with your hands and arms close to your body and instead of ducking away from punches, duck under them—and toward your opponent."

Bennah also showed Lou a few things about shoving a boxer slightly off balance, upsetting his equilibrium in clinches and making his opposition just miss with blows. Lou was practicing what the master had told him when Benney walked away.

Gevinson will have an opportunity to try out his new knowledge next Wednesday night when he faces an opponent from the Catholic Youth's Association, of Yonkers, in an amateur card at Turner's Arena.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

EACH day brings us closer to the time when we will be catching hardheads (croakers) two at a time, big ones. For the majority of anglers this fish provides great sport because of its abundance. It bites on most any kind of fresh bait, vigorously. Many anglers consider the hardhead a pest, that affords no sport, because it is too easily caught, without doing itself justice in the way of battle.

This writer has seen but very few occasions when a fly rod or light salt water rod has been employed to do battle, using one hook only. A hand line, heavy rod, four-ounce sinker with two hooks is the best known method for large catches, we agree, but what becomes of most of the large catches? Last year hundreds of thousands of pounds of this most edible fish were left to rot on wharfs and shores of Maryland and Virginia waters.

Only a small minority of anglers really considered the necessity and expense, which is little, to return their catches to this city for distribution to appreciative neighbors, or needful charitable organizations and hospitals. As one boat captain puts it, "the most edible flesh that swims our bay, and the most wasted."

A large number of children in this city are unfortunately dependent upon charity, for hospital treatment, shelter, clothing, food, or for all. The iodine content alone in these fish is more pronounced in quantity and taste during the first run of spring. This element may prevent many cases of thyroid or brights disease.

The croaker is a body builder and wholly satisfying to all lovers of sea food. Are we going to continue wasting these fish or are we sportsmen enough to do something about it? Year after year we see the same old sight—boats loaded down with 300 or 400 fine fish, weighing from 2 to 4 pounds each, packed in barrels, bags, boxes, on the floor—abandoned.

The writer believes that boatmen are only too anxious this year to provide large receptacles with ice to preserve the fresh flavor of these fine fish. This column will make arrangements both locally and at various fishing grounds for the care and transportation of all fish to local charitable institutions. All that will be required of the angler will be to label the fish you deposit with your boatman with name and address.

To anglers who are courageous enough to transport their catches back to this city and deliver same to these institutions, we will offer plenty of prize competition. To the highest 15 deliveries in pounds weighed by the institution, 15 prizes in tackle will be given the winners. Subsequent prizes of a pair of fishing scales weighing up to 30 pounds will be given to all contributors. We believe this will materially dispose of large numbers of fish that would otherwise be wasted.

Anglers have long been noted for their generosity to the poor and unfortunate. What do you think of the plan, fellows? Better than offering prizes for large fish that never feeds more than one family? Your replies are essential in order to make further arrangements with boat captains and local insitutions. We may tempt you with an outstanding prize for the largest hardhead caught and delivered with your catch.

Mrs. Juliet K. Hammond, widow of Charles M. Hammond, millionaire Detroit meat packer, $75,000. She could not be reached for comment.

Gumpel Sandberg, New York, retired clothing merchant, $75,000. He said he wanted to use the money to set his eight children up in business, but that all insisted that "poppa should keep the money."

Bessie and Sam Mash, 60 and 63 years old, Brooklyn, $50,000. They sold half of their ticket Thursday night for $3,200, cutting their winnings to $28,200. "Maybe we take a trip to Palestine," Mrs. Mash said in Yiddish, but her husband had other ideas. "See America first," he said.

Leon Rosenblatt, manager of a local of a cloak and suit makers union, New York, $50,000.

Leonard Pussinen, 19, Hohokus, N. J.; his mother, an aunt, a cousin and a friend will share $50,000.

In Washington the Internal Revenue Department kept an eye on the list of winners, but officials said they could not make an estimate of the Government's share of the money until they have full details of the distribution.

They estimated roughly that winners of the first prize of $150,000 would owe the Government $65,000 each in income taxes, winners of second prize would owe $20,050, and winners of third prize, $9,700.

Medica Stars In Collegiate Swimming

Washington U. Ace Wins 2 Events as Records Fall in Meet.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 27. Led by powerful Jack Medica, of the University of Washington, swimmers from the Pacific Coast and Middle West splashed off with the honors in a record-smashing opening day's session of the thirteenth annual National Collegiate Athletic Association swimming championships.

All of the six champions crowned today and tonight came from long distances to leave the home forces in their wake. Medica, a double winner, smashed N. C. A. A. records in both events he won, the 1,500 meters and 220 yards free style swims.

The University of Michigan 300-yard medley relay team also set a record pace to retain its title, while Danny Zehr, of Northwestern, twice lowered the intercollegiate record for the 150-yeard backstroke, coming close to his own world record.

Forced Into Record.

The Michigan relay trio was forced to its second record of the meet by a speedy Northwestern team which also came in under the record in the final. Michigan was timed in 2 minutes 58.2 seconds in the final, only a half-second slower than the American record for the event, and Northwestern in 2 minutes 59.8 seconds.

In their trial heat in the afternoon the Wolverines had lowered the N. C. A. A. and intercollegiate standard to 3:00.2 from the previous intercollegiate mark of 3:00.8 and the N. C. A. A. record of 3:01.8, both made by Michigan teams last year.

Zehr also smashed the listed record of 1:38 for the 150-yard backstroke, made in 1930 by George Kojac, of Rutgers, both in his heat and in the final. He was clocked first in 1:37.7 and in the final in 1:36.8.

Medica in Form.

The bespectacled Medica swam the 1,500 meters in a 50-meter pool in 20:23.7, beating the N. C. A. A. long-course record of 22:41, made by Dick Howell, of Northwestern in 1924. He came back tonight to capture the 220 in 2:09.6, nearly two seconds faster than his own N. C. A. A. mark.

McAboy to Pilot Miller Furniture

No little disturbed by published reports that Lyman McAboy, star infielder, and one "Louis Naples," an alleged pitcher, have quit the team and are seeking berths with other clubs, Johnny Miller, president of the Miller Furniture Baseball Club, last night announced that McAboy would manage the Millers in The Post Association Capital City League this season and continue to occupy his usual position at third base.

"As for Louis Naples," Miller said, "we've never even heard of him. I think it's a fictitious name. If not, he certainly never played with us and if any of the other clubs sign him they're entirely welcome to him."

The Millers also have entered the Industrial Week-Day League, in which they enjoyed a successful campaign last season, winning the second-half flag. They were defeated by the Heurich Brewers in the championship play-off. Bill Etheredge, formerly manager of the Sanitary team, will have charge of the club in its Industrial games.

'Dub' Sweeps Finals Scheduled Today

With the leaders closely bunched, the race is still wide open. "Reb" Orme, Washington Post League bowler, assumed command last week with a total for the first two blocks of 1177, eleven sticks in front of Carl Deavers, of the Saturday Nite Industrial League. Arthur Crown, Temple Minor League, is running third with 1150; Tom Youngblood, Washington Times League, holds down fourth place with 1145, one pin ahead of J. E. Humphreys and three in front of A. Scheele.

The field, which consists of 75 entries is divided up into two groups, the first getting under way at 2 o'clock and the second at 8.

Robert, Bisignano Wrestle Thursday

O'Mahoney Conqueror in Feature Match.

Yvon Robert, the young Canadian, who won fame recently by beating Danno O'Mahoney, disputed world wrestling champion, in an impromptu scrap in Holyoke, Mass., will meet Alphonse Bisignano in the feature match of the weekly mat show next Thursday at the Turner Arena, it was announced last night.

In the Des Moines Italian, Robert encounters one of the flashiest workmen in the business. Included among Bisignano's victims are such "names" as Ernie Dusek, George Zaharias and Kansas City Joe Cox.

4 Nines Added To Northern Va. Loop

League Organized in Two 6-Team Groups; Club Is Sought.

FOUR new clubs were admitted to the Northern Virginia Baseball League, Thursday night, at a meeting in the auditorium of The Washington Post Building. The league organized into two six-team divisions, formed on a geographical basis. Teams located close to each other were grouped in the same section.

Three of the new clubs, Leesburg, Ashburn A. C., and Warrenton, will play in the White Section or southern division. The other new club, Occoquan, was grouped with Arlington, Falls Church, Vienna and Fairfax Station in the Red or northern section. The other three clubs in the White Section are Purcellville, Marshalland Middleburg.

The league is seeking a powerful club to fill a vacancy in the northern section. Several teams are under consideration and others may be considered by notifying President James C. Buchanan, 1721 North Twenty-second street, Clarendon, or telephone Clarendon 742.

Buchanan was re-elected president. George W. Ferguson, former manager of the Arlington Club, was elected vice president, and Belvin W. Weekley, secretary-treasurer.

The league passed a new by-law requiring teams forfeiting games to pay the umpires unless the managers of both teams agree otherwise.

The Washington Post Sandlot Baseball Association will again operate the circuit through its officials. Purcellville, solely on the basis of its showing last season when it won the championship of its section, rates as the team to beat for the title, although the new teams are distinctly unknown quantities.

They did get a run in the eighth after Medwick and Collins led off with singles, but Travis started the Nats' third double play of the game to halt that uprising and in the ninth, it was the Nats' fourth double play, started by Myer, that sealed the fate of the Cards.

Rinaldis Prep For Tilt With Champions

Will Practice at Gonzaga, Shore in Condition to Resume Role.

RINALDI TAILORS will mobilize this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Gonzaga Prep gym for a workout in preparation for their postseason basketball game with the Globe Refiners, of McPherson, Kans., National A. A. U. champions, next Tuesday night at Tech High's gym.

Coach Davey Keppel, who watched his charges reach the third round of the national championship at Denver last week, was heartened yesterday by the news that Carroll Shore, his star guard, who was injured in the second - round game with Columbus, Ind., will be able to play against the Missouri Valley Giants.

Shore was on the side lines when the Tailors bowed to Denver Safeways. He is one of the most valuable players on the team, and will team with Ollie Tipton at guard. Hal Kiesel, of George Washington fame, will return to center, and Bobby Lucas and Bernie Lieb, Catholic University's former captain, will be at forward.

Another Workout.

Others who will be on hand for today's practice are Bill Noonan, center; Sammy Hook, guard; Pickles Walker and Cliff Keyser, forwards. Another workout will be held Monday night.

The game with the national champions, who have won 40 out of 45 games this season, looms as Washington's biggest basketball attraction in years. The Kansans will leave their home town this afternoon and are expected here Monday. During their stay in Washington they will be quartered at the Ambassador Hotel. Manager Russell Conn, hotel manager, and District A. A. U. Chairman Win Johnson are arranging special programs and entertainment for the visitors, who will leave the morning following the game for New York to compete in the Olympic tryouts.

Tallest team in captivity, with Joe Fortenberry, its 6 foot 8 All-American center, and Willard Schmidt, 6 foot 9 substitute center, the loftiest, the Refiners are heavy favorites to win the Olympic trials and the trip to Berlin.

This Rinaldi-McPherson game will begin at 8:30, and will be preceded by a contest between Eastern High's District champions and an all-star Government team—a game which looms as a thriller. The preliminary will start at 7:30.

Peggy Wattles Wins Augusta Tourney

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., March 27.—Peggy Wattles, veteran tournament contender, of Buffalo, N. Y., won the Augusta women's invitation golf title today after a close call from Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C., star. The score was 2 and 1.

Miss Wattles was two over par 39 on the outgoing nine, Miss Cothran five over.

Coming home, Miss Cothran rallied to take the tenth with a birdie three, but thereafter her game was no match for the steady play of the Buffalo contender.

In quick succession, Miss Wattles won the fourteenth and fifteenth, the former with a deftly played par three. Miss Cothran's game picked up on the sixteenth, when she was a stroke better than Miss Wattles. They halved the seventeenth and the match ended.

Miss Wattles entered the finals by eliminating Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Miami, and Miss Cothran beat Edith Begg, of Cleveland, tournament dark horse.

The cards:

Wattles	Out	545	353	555—40
Cothran	Out	575	355	564—45
Wattles	In	454	536	55—37

West Coast Nines Open Season Today

San Francisco, Calif., March 27 (AP).—The West Coast opens the Nation's baseball season tomorrow.

With advance enthusiasm and ticket sales giving club owners an optimism they have not known since the palmy days of half a dozen years ago, the Pacific Coast League will start its thirty-fourth pennant chase in four California cities. It is the first league of the country to open its parks.

San Francisco's Seals, champions last year, open against their hometown rivals, the Missions. Advance ticket sales, largest in seven years, forecast a turnout of 15,000 fans.

A new league president, four new club managers and two different club setups, were factors expected to help stimulate interest this season. The regular season of 24½ weeks will be climaxed by a playoff among the four highest teams.

Old Dominion League Lacks Baseball Fields

Teams in the Old Dominion Baseball League, American Section, are working out daily, including Virginia White Sox, McLean A. C., Park Lane A. C., Clarendon A. C. and Forestville. Difficulty in selecting diamonds is hampering the National Section, Parnell and Arlington Eagles being especially affected. The league schedule will be distributed to the teams in a few days. Candidates for teams in the league notify the managers.

Colonials Face Ohio Today In Opener

Bad Weather Has Slowed G. W. Nine; Game at Baggett Stadium.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S 1936 baseball season will begin this afternoon, weather permitting, on the soggy turf of Baggett's Stadium, Alexandria, where the Colonials will meet a busload of tourists from Ohio State at 2:00 o'clock.

Confined to the gymnasium by inclement weather with exception of a few days since the first call for candidates was sounded, the Colonials will send a hot-house baseball team out on the field for the curtain raiser, but it'll be no run-of-the-mine team Coach Ed Morris starts. All positions will be manned by veterans or promising rookies who have made some vets look bad in practice.

Not in their batting order yet, the boys will line-up with Burt Webb, Andy Horne and Lefty Johnson in the outfield; Fred Price, first base; Tim Stapleton, third base; Bob Williams, second, and Clarence Berg, shortstop; Steve Walker or Zolton Stamus will catch.

Morris can afford to be choosy about his starting pitcher, for he has a list of six good men available, including Vince De Angelis and Bill Noonan, southpaw and orthodox stars of the 1935 nine. It is probable that one of them will start Bob Wortych, Bill Lanker, Tom Bradley and Arnold Hope will be ready to step into the breach in any emergencies.

Ohio will rely on the same team that lost to Maryland Thursday at College Park, although Peters, of course, will not pitch.

Shot Up Wins by 2 Lengths in Feature Race at Tropical Park

J. E. Widener Horse Best Of Field

Swamp Angel Is Second; Four Choices Prove Successful.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 27.—J. E. Widener's handsome 3-year-old, Shot Up, making his first effort over a distance of ground, proved much the best of the small field that contested the mile and a sixteenth of the Pompano Purse here this afternoon. Taking the track a few strides after the start, the bay son of Chance Shot—Look Up stood off two challenges and drew off to register by two lengths under Wayne Wright.

H. H. Brown's Swamp Angel, a close second choice to the winner, closed resolutely to take the place by three lengths from the Southland Stable's Sandy Boy. R. W. Collins' Old Comrade always was fourth and last.

Shot Up was the third successful choice and the fourth in six races. With a winning 6-furlong race behind him, the bearer of the famous "peppermint" silks closed at $8.40 for $2. He got home in 1:45 2-5.

Wright broke the favorite well from the outside position and swung his mount into a wide lead around the first bend. Sandy Boy easily outfooted the other two and joined Shot Up midway of the backstretch, with Wright nursing the Widener color-bearer less than a half length in front. Sandy Boy was done as they reached the stretch and Shot Up demonstrated his superiority in commanding style, stealing clear and holding Swamp Angel safe when the latter staged a belated bid. Old Comrade had no speed.

$140,000 Handled at Track.

Castle Irwell, which was well up among the leaders before falling a mile from home last year, never looked like a contender. Some observers felt that Bostwick was too intent upon finishing the race, refusing to extend his mount to the limit. Bostwick, although somewhat disappointed, declared after the race he would like to have one more crack at the classic.

Double Crossed, which proved Whitney's best bet, made the first circuit strongly but found the pace too swift and straggled in among the tail-enders. Snow's aging Delaneige, second in 1934, and Whitney's Royal Ransom fell at the canal turn the first time around. Kiltoi failed to get half-way after enjoying an early lead. Rod and Gun, ridden by Louis E. Stoddard, jr., son of the former chairman of the U. S. Polo Association, also fell early in the race.

There was reason to believe that more money changed hands on the race than any other stake in British turf history. The amount placed with the bookmakers throughout the country was incalculable but the track totalisator handled approximately $140,000, which is a record for any British track where handbooks also operate.

The honor of winning was far greater than the financial reimbursement for victory carried with it a purse of only 7,000 pounds ($35,000).

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al:

Selections at Tropical Park.

Calling all Benningites. And it's the last call for the Beat-Bill-Bennings Contest. There isn't any prize for beating Bill Bennings, but there are two day passes for Bowie awaiting the person who turns in the most winners today. And then there's that crack at Eddie Keith and Malcolm Dickey, the two fellows who are leading for the grand awards of season badges, tax paid, to Bowie. They have seven winners, but could be topped with the proper mutuel prices. This is the final day of the contest, and I don't know whether to be glad or sorry. The work I've put in opening letters has had its reward in the many clever notes and the absence of knockers. Thursday's daily prize went to C. J. Kidd, who was the only contestant to pick five winners. He tripped on Miss Otis and Hollyhock, or they tripped on him, but he was right in the other instances. The card proved one of the toughest of the contest for the Benningites, with only 9 out of almost 1,000 picking four winners. Cut out the slip today, folks, and mail it early. I want every man, woman and child to be able to say, "I beat Bill Bennings."

BILL.

First race—Herondas has a class edge on this field of maidens and seems ready to earn his first set of brackets. Wright will do the riding. Blakeen and Brown David to take care of the others.

Second race—Mucho Gusto is a keen horse now and a front runner of parts. Handled properly he should account for the major portion of this purse. Rebekah and the lightly-weighted Speed are possibilities.

Third race—Relativity and Mixed Party should battle it out for the chief reward in this group. I prefer them in the order named. The Doris entry of Pay Rack and Malthias holds a fighting chance to defeat the top pair.

Fourth race—Moss Gal, a favorite of mine, seems capable of scoring in this group of juveniles. She will have Wright to do the saddle work and I believe she can take care of Little Shaver and Oddesa Girl.

Fifth race—Grog has been working well, Clocker Mike writes, and I'm inclined to give him a chance to upset this field. Gets in with only steadying weight. Dusty Dawn and Great Haste for the place and show.

Sixth race—Maeriel, going postward with only 109 pounds and having the services of Litzenberger, may score in the day's feature event. Chance Ray and Tempestuous for the other awards.

Seventh race—Mountainy Man would be much better suited in this field. He is fit and could take it all. Col. Green and Spixi to lead the others to the wire.

Eighth race—Nipantuck must be respected despite that 116 pounds. He is fit as that last and I see no reason for mistakes. Highest Point and Chatterdoo will be ready if the top one falters.

Best bet—Mucho Gusto.

Minneapolis Puts Wheat on the Skids

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 27.—Influenced by 2¼ cents a bushel liquidation collapse in Minneapolis to a new low price record for the season, wheat values here receded late today.

Gains scored in the Chicago wheat market earlier were more than wiped out. Demand for domestic wheat available to be used at once was poor, and all deliveries at Minneapolis fell to below $1, reducing the Minneapolis May premium to 3½ cents over Chicago, against 18 cents at one time this season.

Before making a right-about-face near the end of the day, the Chicago wheat market displayed notable strength, and advanced almost a cent. This was largely responsive to trade reports that twice the usual amount of moisture from now until harvest will be required over large areas of domestic wheat territory in the Southwest. Price advances, however, were seized upon to sell out holdings of May wheat.

Operating revenues of $12,937,099 compared with $10,718,085 last year, increased $2,219,014, of which the largest was in freight revenue, with an increase of $2,038,495.

Railway operating expenses of $9,787,125, compared with $7,947,753 a year ago, increased $1,839,367.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, March 27 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—Very little interest was shown in greasy combing domestic wools that were offered for sale. Asking prices were unchanged from recent nominal quotations. Most buyers did not show enough interest to make counter offers. Under these conditions holders followed a waiting policy. A little woolen type wool was selling at about steady prices. Scoured fall and eight months Texas wools brought 81@83 cents for a fair quantity.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Decline in Slow Trading; Francs Weak; Setback in United States Bonds.

New York, March 27.—Financial markets turned as dreary as the weather, and prices declined in most sections, including gilt-edged investments. Turnover in stocks was about the average of the week, under 2,000,000 shares, and prices at the close were not much above the worst. Losses from the previous day ranged from 1 to 3 points in pivotal stocks. May wheat closed ¾ of a cent lower at 96 cents a bushel.

Leading stock issues gave up 1 to 3 points, simply because bidders lacked interest. Pressure for sale was never particularly heavy, but it was a buyer's market. Chrysler lost more than 2 points in the motor group and the advance of General Motors was halted. Steels dropped 1 to 2 points and chemicals fell 1 to 5 points, leaving Allied Chemical again under the 200 mark. Rails were sluggish, giving up a fraction to a point. The railroad equipment issues were nervous and declines grew to as much as 4 points. Baldwin preferred was rather shaky.

Speculative Spirit Droops.

Oil shares looked tired and it was not until toward the close that Standard of New Jersey was able to attract buyers at even its reduced prices, which were 2 points under the previous close. Operations in Yellow Truck came to a stop, awaiting smoother sailing, and altogether the spirit of speculation was anything but rampant. Corn Products was about the only old-line industrial stock to show a firm tone.

Long-term investment in the stock market is continuous and at the moment its effects have kept the scales nearly in balance with profit taking sales among those who are more easily influenced by short-term development. No fresh scare on inflation, nor any revelations of a bullish nature on business, have taken place for some time to hasten the flow of long-term capital into the stock market; rather there has been a tendency of funds to go into high-grade bonds.

Recovery Expected.

With the investment stream running placidly the speculative currents have been disturbed by the week's contribution of less active business, largely because of flood damage, by the dust storm threat to Western crops, by the continued uncertainty of affairs abroad, both with respect to fighting by Germany and to the fiscal policies of the gold-standard countries.

Nothing bearish enough has happened to bring about a severe decline in stocks, and high taxation acts as a constant reminder to the would-be seller to beware of his capital gains taxes. The week has brought a large flow of corporation reports for the last year, showing in most instances a heartening increase in profits, but calling attention nevertheless to handicaps to future improvement, particularly on the tax side. Even the industrial news, bringing reports of lower freight traffic and a reduction in steel mill activity, was less unfavorable than expected.

Rapid recovery is predicted. Meanwhile the spurt in the motor stock has come from signs of a lively spring marketing season. It would seem that if much of last autumn's production was "borrowed" from this spring, the industry's credit was not greatly strained thereby and that repayments are being quickly made. Taking the shore view, the period of waiting for earnings to catch up with stock prices promises to be rather short, partly because ideas as to the proper ratio of price to earnings for stocks have themselves undergone considerable expansion over the last year or so.

Weakness in Exchange.

Weakness in French francs, which worked down within a fraction of the point at which gold will move from Paris to New York, unsettled the entire foreign exchange market. Franc futures were quoted at a discount of 28 points for three months, with no bids to speak of, which is a new low. The franc derived little support against dollars from the British control authorities, though the latter continued to buy francs at around 74.05 to the pound. One of the developments last week which the market disliked was the sharp increase in bills discounted at the Bank of France, more than 1,000,000,000 francs, coupled with a rise of more than 600,000,000 francs in note circulation, which suggested that Frenchmen were keeping large portions of their resources in cash.

Sterling dropped nearly a cent and Italian exchange, still quoted nominally, dropped to a new low sinc stabilization of the lira. Gold currencies and sterling area exchanges alike depreciated against dollars. In the Far East division yen slid lower, reaching the lowest quotation since the attempted seizure of the Government by an army clique.

Odds and Ends.

In the press report of the Long Island Railroad hearing, Public Service Commissioner Van Namee was quoted as saying that if J. P. Morgan came forward with the necessary money the Long Island might be able to meet its obligations. The official minutes show that remark was not made by Commissioner Van Namee; it was made by Commissioner Godley. Apparently the press reporters fell into an error of identity as between the two commissioners. This column is glad to correct the impression which it helped to create that Commissioner Van Namee did not know J. P. Morgan & Co. were not the bankers for the Pennsylvania Railroad and its subsidiary the Long Island. . . . It seems that every step taken toward stiffer margin requirements coincides with a drop in brokers' loans. The newest regulations abolishing the sliding scale on margins is expected to work out so as to bring a net increase in the amount of money while the stock trader will have to deposit with the broker. This week the Federal Reserve Board's weekly statement showed another sharp decline in loans a further washout of the expansion that took place in connection with the Treasury's new issues and the income tax payments. If stock loans are increasing at all the rise is offset by the thawing out of old frozen loans.

Freight Traffic Falls Below Week of 1935

Total Also Is Less Than Preceding Week of This Year.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended March 21 totaled 566,808 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was a decrease of 46,370 cars, or 6.6 per cent, below the corresponding week in 1935 and 43,228 cars, or 7.1 per cent, below the corresponding week in 1934.

Loading of revenue freight for the week of March 21 was a decrease of 50,054 cars, or 8.1 per cent below the preceding week.

This reduction for the week of March 21 compared with the corresponding week in the two previous years, and also with the preceding week this year, was due in part to flood conditions in the Eastern part of the United States and also in part to the seasonal reduction in the movement of coal.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 249,097 cars, a decrease of 5,828 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 14,847 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 20,687 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 147,939 cars, a decrease of 10,107 cars below the preceding week, 12,532 cars below the corresponding week in 1935 and 18,659 cars below the same week in 1934.

Grain Loadings Decrease.

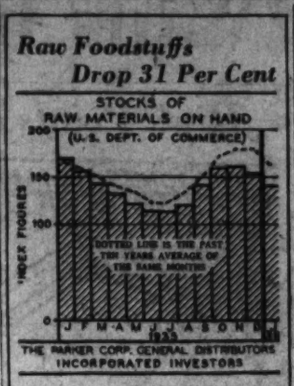
Grain and grain products loading totaled 32,368 cars, a decrease of 4,560 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 6,509 cars above the corresponding week in 1935 and 2,484 cars above the same week in 1934. In the Western District alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended March 21 totaled 19,995 cars, a decrease of 1,464 cars below the preceding week this year, but an increase of 4,013 cars above the same week in 1935.

Livestock loading amounted to 12,183 cars, a decrease of 39 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 1,501 cars above the same week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 1,460 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western District alone, loading of live stock for the week ended March 21, totaled 9,509 cars, an increase of 328 cars above the preceding week this year and 1,425 cars above the same week in 1935.

Forest products loading totaled 30,403 cars, a decrease of 562 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 4,356 cars above the same week in 1935, and 5,528 cars above the same week in 1934.

Raw Foodstuffs Drop 31 Per Cent



Boston, Mass., March 27.—A favorable condition is developing as the result of steady seasonal declines in the stocks of raw materials on hand. These stocks, taken as a whole, were 16½ per cent less in January than the year before, and had dropped 29 per cent from January, 1934. During the past year stocks of raw foodstuffs declined the most, 31 per cent.

Cotton Advances, Turns Irregular

New York, March 27 (AP).—Early advances in cotton were followed by nervous and irregular fluctuations today.

While near months were sustained by trade buying, later deliveries eased under liquidation. The close was steady, net 14 points higher to 2 points lower.

Selling was encountered on a mid-session advance of 7 to 14 points.

American Woolen Torn With Discord

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Mass., March 27.—A shareholders' battle for control of the $18,000,000 American Woolen Co. flared today with the re-election of the present management and accusations by minority interests that the concern is being used as a vehicle to make money in wool-market speculations.

The minority group, however, was able to poll only 147,000 votes, compared to 321,045 by which the controlling interests re-elected their candidates. These were three directors: William B. Warner and Charles Hayden, both of New York, and Robert H. Montgomery, of Boston.

W. R. T. Income Shows Increase Over Last Year

February Net Is $2,357; Which Is a Gain of $1,000.

Earnings of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., which operates the Sixteenth street bus line, were substantially better in February and the first two months of 1936 than in the like periods in 1935, reports filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday revealed.

Operating revenues in February totaled $40,433.25, an increase of $6,774.49 over February, 1935. Operating expenses and taxes required $36,437.87, an increase of $5,815.10 over a year ago and leaving an operating income of $3,995.58. After all other deductions were made from gross, net income for the month was reported as $2,357.27 as compared with $1,356.77, an increase of $1,000.50.

In the first two months of the year operating revenues of Washington Rapid Transit totaled $82,202.89, an increase of $12,306.36. Operating expenses and taxes absorbed $72,819.10, or $8,656.04 more than last year, and leaving an operating gain of $3,050.32 in the two months.

After all other deductions, net income amounted to $6,000.54 against $2,213.19, an increase of $3,787.35. The statement shows an increase in the number of passengers carried, but considerable of this revenue was offset by higher costs of operations. This is the bus line which the Capital Transit Co. is anxious to buy and make a part of the transit system, both being controlled by the North American Co.

One Day Left For Finalists In Essay Test

Papers Now Go to Faculty Members at 4 D. C. Universities.

With only one more day remaining for registration as finalists in the Third Washington Post Scholarship Competition, high school seniors in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, as well as the District, yesterday rushed to competition headquarters at The Post their original essays on governmental issues. Their papers, this week declared top winners in school finals, now go to faculty committees at American, Catholic, Georgetown and Howard Universities, where campus finals this spring will determine winners of the project's major awards of nine 4-year tuition scholarships.

To each of the finalists The Post is awarding a handsome silver medal and to the two alternates in each of the several hundred school finals will be presented a certificate of honor.

Yesterday's entrants included champions of intensive contests waged in four parochial high schools, Joseph A. Rattigan of St. John's; William Schmeich, of St. Paul's Academy; Margaret Viehmann, Academy of the Holy Cross, and Bernard J. McConnell, jr., of Gonzaga.

Rattigan, the son of Mrs. M. A. Rattigan, of 436 Crittenden street, presented a paper on "Current Trends in Our Latin American Relations." Brother D. Lewis, senior English teacher in charge of the contest, announced Donald I. Heany as alternate and John J. Hassett for third place. Rattigan is sergeant major of cadets, co-manager of his school paper, and member of the student council and debating and basketball teams. He ranks at the top in scholastics, especially in civics and science, and is ambitious for legal training at Catholic University.

Merchant Marine Topic.

Schmeich's paper is entitled: "What is Wrong With Our Merchant Marine?" He, too, hopes to specialize in law if he wins in the campus finals, and rates high in his studies, especially commercial subjects and English. Sister Kathryn Marie, principal, incorporated The Post competition into her senior English and history courses.

Miss Viehmann, who also stands high in scholastics, won at Holy Cross with an essay on "The Social Effects of the Industrial Revolution Since 1850." Sister M. Monica supervised the contest.

McConnell wrote on "Social Security for America." The Rev. Anthony J. Leisner, S. J., senior English teacher in charge, announced Stephen J. Laut and Frank J. Renaud for second and third places, respectively. McConnell, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard McConnell, of Silver Spring, Md., won his full scholarship to Gonzaga, a gold medal for general excellence in his second and third years there, a gold medal for the highest average in special examinations in 1935, and numerous medals in chemistry, religion, algebra and geometry. He has registered for the Catholic University campus finals and says his highest ambition is "to achieve a name in science." He is president of the debating society, dramatic stage manager, parliamentarian of the Washington conference and Gonzaga delegate for the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade and Gonzaga representative this year to that crusade's oratorical contest.

Editor of School Paper.

Crapster, the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Walter Crapster, of Taneytown, submitted an essay entitled, "Toward a Better Civil Service in the United States." He is editor of his school paper, represented his school at the recent county interschool banquet, won for two years the school letter for scholastic work and is active in the French, Classical, Glee and Dramatics clubs, plays on the varsity soccer team and in the school band and orchestra and is manager of the basketball team. He has enrolled for the American campus finals and states his ambition "to become a college professor or a journalist." John F. Wooden, jr., principal and civics teacher, announced second honors for Virginia Stone and third for Freda Stambaugh.

Miss Rowley's essay is entitled "Can America Keep Out of Foreign Wars?" Urith Ann Routson, history teacher in charge, announced Betsey Chinn Clark as alternate and Charles Thompson as placing third. Miss Rowley is another honor roll student and hopes to train for a career in either teaching or nursing. She is Argus Board business manager, played in the operetta last year and the class play this year and is active in the French Club, the Obstacle and the Citizenship Society. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. James Rowley, of Woodstock, Md.

Miss Rautzahn wrote on "Danger Zones in Europe Today." She ranks high in history and English studies and hopes to become a teacher.

Miss Kuhnle wrote on "The States' Rights Issue in American History." She is another honor student, Nellie R. Kooken, history teacher, supervised the contest at Westernport.

Miss Ferrier's essay is on "Uncle Sam's TVA Experiment." The daughter of Mrs. James Ferrier, of Greenmount, Md., she is another aspirant for training for either a teaching or nursing career. She is especially talented in English, home economics and music, plays on the basketball and volley ball teams and is cheer leader. Gerald E. Richter, principal and civics teacher, awarded second place to Mary Myers and third to Arlene Ware.

Writes on Railroads.

Clifford's topic is "The Future of America's Railroads." He registered for the Catholic University finals. Ellen W. Edwards, civics teacher, supervised the Montgomery Blair project.

Roop wrote on "America's Entry in the World War." Edwin Ohler placed second and Janet Hoke third in the Emmitsburg contest, supervised by Francis B. Myers, English and civics teacher. Roop belongs to his school orchestra, glee club and Future Farmers Club.

Geary, another honor student, has ambitions for a college professor's career. His paper is on "The Proposed 30-Hour Week for Labor." He is the son of Mrs. Cora Geary, of Mount Savage, and is active in dramatics and the Hi-Y Club of his school. Ruth M. Finzel, civics teacher, managed the contest, in which Evelyn Hutzell placed second and Freda Via, third.

Fourteen Virginians included Rose Gaynelle Fleshman, of Dunlap High, at Hematite; Alice Moyer, Greenwood; Curtis Mae Toms, Red Hill; Hilton Weaver, Culpeper; Mabelle June Knopf, Washington-Lee at Clarendon; Courtney D. Edmond, Millboro; Judson McManaway, Manassas; Frances Chichester, Fredericksburg; Mary Brewer, Falmouth; Janet V. Coffman, Mount Clinton; Montague Lane, Boyce; Kathleen Frye, Lucketts; Lucille Wood, Crozet, and Lorena McLearen, Brentsville District High at Nokesville.

Miss Fleshman, daughter of S. Y. Fleshman, of Alleghany, wants to train for teaching and is a top student, especially in history, English and Latin. She plays on the softball team, sings in the school chorus and is an active 4-H member. Her paper, entitled, "Can America Keep Out of Foreign Wars?" was prepared under supervision of Mary Helen Wolfe, English teacher.

Chose Same Topic.

Miss Moyer chose the same war entanglement topic. She is editor of her school paper, librarian and active in the Girl Scouts. She, too, wants to teach. She recently won first place in the Albemarle County girls' public speaking contest. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jake Moyer, of Greenwood. Elizabeth Sutherland, senior English teacher in charge, announced second place honors to Ruby Wyant and third to Mabel Rea.

Miss Toms won at Red Hill with a paper entitled "Can America Keep Out of Foreign Wars?" Hazel G. Clevinger, English teacher, managed the contest.

Weaver's topic is "Uncle Sam's TVA Experiment." He is a member of the Junior League, stands high in his studies, especially English, French and mathematics, and wants to teach. He is the son of D. M. Weaver, of Boston, Va. M. R. Winn, English teacher in charge, gave second honors to Douglas White and third to Wade Hitt.

"Danger Zones on Europe's Map" is Miss Knopf's topic. O. L. Driver, civics teacher, supervised the Washington-Lee project. S. P. Vanderslice, principal, awarded second honors to Louise Bixler and third to Frank Felton.

Edmond's paper is on "Japan's Far Eastern Policy." He is another prospective teacher, the son of H. D. Edmond, of Milboro Springs. He is Home Economics Club secretary and a member of the dramatics club. C. E. May, principal and senior English teacher, awarded second place to Louise McLaughlin, and third to Ruth Harouff.

McManaway, who wrote on "The Silver Issue Since 1873," was formerly a pupil at the Gordon Junior High and Western High, Washington. The Manassas alternate, announced by R. Worth Peters, principal and teacher in charge, was Aldenia Blevins.

Miss Chichester wrote on "The Italo-Ethiopia Dispute," with second place going to Elizabeth Hinkle, and third to Keith Pitzer in the Fredericksburg contest, which was supervised by Elizabeth S. Courtney, civics teacher. Miss Chichester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Chichester, of Fredericksburg, will be valedictorian of her class and is on the staff of her school paper and active in the dramatic, literary, Latin and movie clubs.

Paper on World War.

A paper on "America's Entry in the World War" won first place for Miss Brewer at Falmouth, second place going to William Satterfield, and third to Earl Purks. Anne K. Ratcliffe, senior history teacher, supervised. Miss Brewer is president of the Junior League and belongs to the senior dramatic and commercial clubs. She has received the Pratt award for scholarship and wants to train for a commercial career. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Brewer, of Falmouth.

Miss Coffman, another honor student, won at Mount Clinton with a paper on "The NRA-Supreme Court Issue." R. Carlton Cupp, civics teacher, managed the project.

Lane wrote on "The Best Governed Municipality in the United States," with James Suddith finishing second, and Helen Brown third in the Boyce contest. C. E. Miley, senior civics teacher, supervised. Lane is president of the Catherine Blunt Club, senior class treasurer, and on the honor roll.

Miss Frye, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Frye, of Lucketts, is Junior League president, a member of the basketball team and will be a class valedictorian. She wants training for a business career. Her subject was "Social Security for America." Frances V. Titus, history teacher in charge, announced second honors for Martha Arnold and third for Evelyn Frye.

Miss Wood, who will also be valedictorian of her class, chose the topic, "Toward a Better Civil Service in the United States." C. W. Miller, Crozet principal, managed the contest.

"The NRA-Supreme Court Issue" was covered by Miss McLearen in her winning paper. Maron L. Broaddus, social science teacher in charge, gave second place to Ruth Somers and third to William Hale, jr. Miss McLearen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. McLearen, of Nokesville, is program chairman of the senior class and on the staff of the school paper, as well as a member of the Junior League, glee, dramatic and hiking and the dodge ball and indoor baseball teams. Her ambitions are divided between a musical or commercial career.

West Virginia winners included George Small, of the Martinsburg High; Allen Anderson and Mary Thelma Reeler, of Storer College High at Harpers Ferry, and Imogene E. Holley and Edward C. Fox, jr., of Sumner High, Martinsburg.

Small, the son of W. S. Small, of Martinsburg, has been on the honor roll many times, is active in the Junior Red Cross, the Hi-Y Club and the Tennis Club, and is library assistant. He desires training for a legal career. His topic is "The Thirty-Hour Week for Labor." J. C. Cobourne, civics teachers in charge, announced Ruth Tonry for second place and Virginia Snapp for third.

Waters E. Turpin, teacher in charge of the project at Storer College, sent with his winning essays especial "appreciation to The Washington Post for the stimulating influence the contest has had upon the pupils." Both Anderson and Miss Reeler stand high in their classes. Anderson's subject is "Can America Keep Out of Foreign Wars?" and Miss Reeler's is "Status of the Child Labor Amendment." Alternates at Storer were Mary Inez Sharpe and Charlotte Smith.

George R. Dale, Enemy of Klan, Dies of Stroke

Indiana Publisher Gained National Fame Through Editorial Fight.

By the Associated Press.

Muncie, Ind., March 27.—Death brought to an end today the stormy career of George R. Dale, 69, weekly newspaper editor, whose virulent pen brought him national attention in the '20s in his fight against the Ku Klux Klan, when it was all-powerful in Indiana.

A cerebral hemorrhage wrote "30" to his trouble-scarred life soon after he had finished an editorial for his paper.

During the days of his fight with the Klan, Mr. Dale several times was assaulted, his home was stoned and he was thrice cited for contempt of court. He served two days at the State penal farm on one of the citations before being pardoned by the then Gov. Ed Jackson, who had been one of the targets of his editorials. During one of his court fights, he was an "exile" in Ohio for several months.

In 1929, much to his surprise, he always said, he was elected Mayor of Muncie on the Democratic ticket and by an overwhelming majority. He held the post until last year. He had made a spirited but unsuccessful campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor in 1928.

His administration was no less stormy than was his editorial career and in 1932 his troubles culminated in his conviction, along with other Muncie officials, on charges of violation of the national prohibition laws. President Roosevelt pardoned him in 1933. Dale always maintained the charges were "framed."

A man of slight build and never in the best of health, he had no personal fear. A gang of hooded men once attacked him on a Muncie street, but he fought them off, wrenched a gun from one and opened fire. There were unverified rumors that the man he shot died.

The son of a Monticello, Ind., attorney, Dale was destined for the law, but early rebelled and followed several pursuits before finally settling in Muncie, in 1915, to found and edit his weekly paper, the Post-Democrat.

His editorial pen knew few friends and many enemies and he was embroiled almost constantly in some controversy, political, personal or social. After his election as mayor, he alienated many who had helped elect him and defied State as well as city officials when they went against his will.

He is survived by his wife, who helped him edit the paper, four daughters, three sons; a brother, Charles, newspaper publisher, of Troy, Ohio, and two sisters.

order to dissipate wrong opinions current abroad that one class in Germany, namely, the workers, has more sympathy with the views of foreigners than with those of the man now responsible for Germany's fate.

"I advocated German rearmament, not because I am a shareholder in a munitions factory—probably I am the only statesman in the world who does not own a bank account—but because I wanted the nation to become strong.

Opposes Secret Diplomacy.

"In 1918 an American talked of ending secret diplomacy. I am ready to accept that proposal.

"If Europe involves itself in military alliances, we want to see German sovereignty restored in German territory. That's what I have done."

Addressing France, Britain and other European powers, Der Fuehrer continued:

"Either you believe in our 68,000,000 people or you don't. If you don't you should no longer talk to us. If you do, you should remember that our honor is worth as much as yours.

"On Sunday, when the nation re-expresses its confidence in me, I shall submit a new offer. Then, the statesmen who reject it or oppose symbolic gestures, should be honest enough to appeal to their nations."

Hitler's answer to the Locarno powers' proposal to negotiate a new settlement of the Rhineland dispute will be delivered to London Tuesday.

Conversations Deadlocked.

London, March 27 (AP).—Week-long Anglo-German conversations over the Rhineland crisis ended today in a deadlock and with no solution sighted.

Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Germany's special ambassador, flew home bearing Great Britain's last word to Adolf Hitler after another conference with Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary.

Eden reiterated to Von Ribbentrop today that progress is impossible without some concrete guarantee of Germany's good faith—for example, a promise not to build fortifications in the Rhineland pending new security negotiations. Eden disclosed to the House of Commons yesterday that the dictator thus far has been unwilling to make such a guarantee.

Hitler's concrete viewpoints may be disclosed next Tuesday, when he has promised to make definite proposals, following Sunday's Reichstag elections.

Franco-Soviet Joint Military Pact Effective

Alliance Which Caused Rearming of Rhineland, Held Reich Threat.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 27.—France's military alliance with Russia, on which Adolf Hitler based his action in rearming the Rhineland, became formally effective today.

The actual ceremony involved only the exchange of signed pacts between Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin, of France, and Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, of Russia, although the treaty places the Soviet 1,200,000-man army at France's disposal in event of an "unprovoked attack."

The alliance, in the language of the document, mentions only a European power as the possible aggressor, but parliamentary debate in the French Assemblies left little doubt that the pact was aimed directly at Germany—a fact which Hitler also has recognized.

The ratification today, after the treaty had been approved by both the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, consists of a law authorizing President Albert LeBrun to "ratify and if there is occasion, to execute" the terms of the alliance.

Litvinoff brought with him a Russian state document which he presented to Flandin in exchange for a second signed copy.

As the exchange was proceeding, French sources were discussing the possibility of strengthening the existing accord between France and Poland. It was reported that Joseph Beck, Polish foreign minister, would come to Paris soon.

The treaty was born at Paris, May 5, 1935, when the text was signed by the French and Russian foreign ministers. The Russian government approved the document and the French chambers, after long debate hastened by Germany's progressive actions, gave parliamentary approval.

The treaty provides that France and Russia undertake to protect mutually the eastern border of France and the western border of Russia—a provision which has led the Germans to describe the agreement as part of a "circle of steel" around Germany.

The pact would not apply in event of a Japanese attack on Russia from the south.

Woman Slain by Ax; Accident, Verdict

Hazleton, Pa., March 27 (AP).—Mrs. Ernest Cook, wife of an instructor in the Hazleton Vocational Education School, was found dead today in the basement of her home. Her head was crushed with an ax.

Her husband was arrested for questioning. Police said he had been taken to the Danville State Hospital several weeks ago for treatment for a nervous condition and recently returned home.

Police quoted Cook as saying he had been chopping wood in the basement. They believe Mrs. Cook walked behind her husband as he swung the ax over his shoulder.

Man of Future Will Depend On the Antarctic, Says Byrd

Explorer, Citing Resources, Insists Our Weather Can Be Determined From 'Down Under;' Nature Preserves Region for Future.

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., March 27.—Peering centuries into the future, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd today said he could foresee the time when man will need the natural resources of the Antarctic to survive.

The noted explorer, here with Mrs. Byrd for a series of lectures on his travels, said the regions "Down Under" may be utilized immediately for scientific purposes, and commercial development will come when the world realizes the vast resources there.

"The immediate value of Antartica is that it offers a most valuable link in the great chain of science, for things are occurring down there now that happened in this hemisphere during the Ice Age thousands of years ago," he asserted.

"That region is our weather maker," Admiral Byrd said. "Scientific weather stations placed down there would make possible accurate, long-time prognostications of periods of drought and the extreme cold weather we have had this winter."

As to commercial value, he said it was as though "nature is preserving these resources with an Ice Age until the time when we shall need them to survive." The explorer asserted there was enough coal in the region to supply the world's needs for some time.

He said he was "uncertain" about his future plans for exploration.

"We made tens of thousands of scientific readings for 22 branches of science," he pointed out, in connection with his most recent trip to Little America. "Men in 12 different parts of the country are now working on these and about 18 months will be required to complete it. Until I finish that, my work is not completed."

Huge Control Plan For Ohio Is Urged

Cincinnati, March 27 (AP).—W. C. Devereaux, possibly America's foremost flood forecaster, asserted today "it would take a lot of money to control the Ohio River but it would be worth it."

The white-haired 62-year-old meteorologist pointed to the $17,000,000 Miami River conservancy system and said:

"If the Government is willing to spend enough money to build enough dams, it could harness the Ohio River."

Devereaux has worked closely wtih U. S. Army engineers as they drafted numerous alternative plans for controlling floods in the 981-mile long Ohio River valley, where 100 persons died and property damage of approximately $200,000,000 were caused by last week's devastating floods.

The "grand plan," costing $1,800,000,000, would involve the construction of no less than 640 projects of all kinds both on the Ohio and its tributaries. It would open navigation in many now unused streams and provide numerous hydro-electric stations as well as providing flood-control reservoirs, levees, and local protection measures.

Floe Saves Man After Search Fails

Harbor Springs, Mich., March 27 (AP).—Cecil Booth, fisherman, floated ashore on an ice cake late today after Coast Guardmen had abandoned hope of rescuing him from the ice field of Little Traverse Bay, rapidly breaking up in a driving snowstorm.

Booth, who had been missing since he left home early Thursday to fish from the ice, reached land near Seven-Mile Point a few minutes after the searchers, driven ashore by the rapidly breaking field, returned here and announced there was little chance for escape.

A victim of snow blindness several days ago, Booth was feared by his family to have suffered a recurrence of the condition and to have wandered across the ice into open water.

Booth, who suffered no ill effects from his experience, said he had not seen any of the searching parties, and had virtually lost all hope when a strong southwest wind drifted the floe to shore. He had been drifting approximately 24 hours.

Slayer of Policeman Hanged in California

Folsom, Calif., March 27 (AP).—George Hall, slayer of State Highway Patrolman Steven Kent and Leslie Quigley, Yreka, Calif., garageman, dropped to his death on the gallows at Folsom Prison here at 10:02 a. m. today.

His execution brought to an end a three-year fight against paying the penalty for his crime, climaxed by the desperate effort of his attractive 23-year-old wife to help him escape by smuggling guns into the prison.

3 Japanese Die In Border Raid, Soviet Reports

By the Associated Press.

Moscow (Saturday), March 28.—Soviet advices early today reported that Japanese cavalrymen had made a new incursion on Soviet Far-Eastern territory and that three of the alleged invaders were killed in a clash with Russian border guards.

M. Stomanyakoff, Soviet Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, immediately protested against the alleged aggression on Soviet territory to Japanese Ambassador Tamekichi Ota.

The reports of the encounter, which occurred Friday, came shortly after the Japanese government had rejected a Soviet suggestion for the appointment of a mixed commission to probe the causes of disputes on the entire Soviet-Manchukuoan border.

River Scene of "Raid."

The latest reported engagement took place along the Arguni River, near the settlement of Borzinsky, Soviet accounts related. Five Japanese cavalrymen were said to have penetrated Russian territory, where they encountered a Soviet border patrol.

Three of the Japanese were killed and the two survivors retreated back to Manchukuo, leaving their companions, bodies, it was stated.

Japan had protested last night to the Soviet government over a border clash Wednesday at Khundjun, southwest of Vladivostok, which the Japanese maintained resulted from an invasion of Manchukuoan territory.

Stomanyakoff denied this Japanese allegation and asserted the clash was the result of an invasion of Soviet territory by Japanese troops.

Ambassador Ota, a communique early today said, told Stomanyakoff that the Japanese government believes investigations by a mixed commission should be limited to that section of the border south of Lake Khanka running to the juncture of the Korean, Manchukuoan and Soviet frontiers. It has been in this region that most of the fighting has taken place.

Other Plan Opposed.

Ota likewise rejected the Soviet proposal that the Japanese government should couple measures for settling disputes on the Soviet-Manchukuoan frontier with measures to settle troubles on the border of Manchukuo and outer Mongolia.

Reiterating the protest made Wednesday at Tokyo by Soviet Ambassador Constantine Youreneff over the clash near Khundjun Wednesday, Stomanyakoff told Ota that the U. S. S. R. noted that border clashes have become more frequent in the last few days, despite Japanese offers to take steps to settle the trouble.

Stomanyakoff expressed the opinion that local Japanese military authorities were displeased with efforts for peace and were deliberately provoking conflicts.
